1) About School

Sabanci university is one of the top university in Turkey. Basically all of student speak English very well because if they couldn't pass the English level test, they should study "preparation year" for a year before being as freshmen.

Dormitory was very clean. Cleaner empty the trashcan every day and clean the dorm twice a week. There are study rooms on every floor of the dormitory and kitchen, laundry room and lounge on the first floor. I was able to enter the dormitory mixed with my friends, and because of the free atmosphere, I was able to spend more time with my friends and get to know them. Both the washing machine and the dryer are free. School is very safe. There is always security at the gate in front of the school, and you cannot enter the school without a student ID. Even parents can get in with visitor form of sabanci student and have to leave school before 11 p.m. Once a week, high-quality culture programs are held in the auditorium, and students can enjoy cultural life at very low prices. In my case, I enjoyed it twice a month. The use of the sports center is free and I could enjoy various sports such as fitness room, squash, aerobics, billiard table, table tennis table, kickboxing, etc.

One of the flaw is that the school is located away from the city, but there was no big problem in looking around the city because the school has a paid shuttle bus. There were also banks, markets, gratis (like Olive-young in Korea) and restaurants in the school, so there was no big inconvenience in life.

2) Courses

All classes are taught in English like UNIST. In case of Engineering school, we should take recitation class in essential. So usually classes are finished around 7:30pm. Professors are all good at English, and in the case of class, they teach you well from the basics. Among the classes I took, Basic Turkish was my favorite. When I went out of school, there were many people who could not speak English, so I could communicate and live with useful expressions that I learned from the Basic Turkish class. Getting good grades is a little harder than UNIST. There are differences in class, but for the Engineering school, the average is set to C.

3)Travel

Turkey has a variety of charms. There are many places to travel, and each area has its own characteristic. Especially for Koreans, everyone is friendly and tries to solve problems like their own. You can book accommodation at a reasonable price and travel without financial burden as the exchange rate has dropped a lot. In my case, I joined the Scuba diving club and got a certificate. I took a lecture once a week and went to a camp after school. I joined the club and became more friendly with Turkish friends.

1. Information of Host University

- Sabanci University is established in 1994, a young foundation university located 40km apart from Istanbul's city center. Sabanci University is well known for one of the most expensive universities in turkey and offers diverse undergraduate courses such as Natural Science, Engineering, Business, Arts & Social Science and so on. For convenience of the students who live in dormitory, it operates systematic shuttle bus system, which transports students from campus to the centers of downtown such as Levent and Kadikoy with reasonable prices. There is a big airport named Sabiha Gökçen near campus, which connects domestic cities and most of European countries. It takes only 15 minutes by taxi to get there.

2. The documents submission

- Except the documents that you are supposed to submit to your home university, rest of all documents should be sent via e-mails to department of international department in Aabanci university. For dormitory application, I prepared 7 documents in total and 2 of them was not able to be issued in turkey, so I got them before leaving: address declaration form and health report.

3. Visa

- As a Korean, I didn't need to get a visa. What I had to do was to make an ikamet which is a residence permit of Turkey. it was easily issued during orientation day.

4. After I arrived

- Most of the international flight which connects Turkey and Asian countries arrives at Atatürk airport. The best way is to take a taxi, but I used public transportation to get to campus. At first, I took an airport shuttle, havatas, from Atatürk airport to Taksim square. It went every 30 minutes on the hour and half hour from 04:00 am until 01:00 am. The journey can take as little as 40 minutes, or much longer, depending on traffic. In my case, it took less than 40 minutes. The one-way fare is TL18. After arriving at Taksim, I transfer to another havatas which went to Sabiha Gökçen airport. It went every 30 minutes on the hour and half hour from 03:30 am until 01:00 am. The journey took about 50 minutes. After arriving Sabiha Gökçen airport, I took a taxi to get to campus. This way is the best way not only saving money but also transporting to destination most rapidly.

5. Residence(Dormitory, Studios)

- Sabanci University offers great dormitories for the exchange students. Dormitory fee is almost 2 times more expensive than that of UNIST. Basically, there are two types of rooms: two-person room and four-person room. Some of dormitory buildings are only composed with two-person rooms and the others are composed with four-person-rooms. Although dormitory charge is quite expensive, it offers cleaning service twice a week and you can change your blanket and pillow everyday if you want. There is a big lounge, kitchen and washing room on the ground floor and each floor has studying room in every building. I sometimes had a parties at dormitory lounge with my friends.

6. School life

Academic Part

- At the very first time, I was supposed to take 3 major courses and 1 liberal art course and a basic Turkish course. But I gave off one major course, quantum mechanics, because the schedule of that course was changed due to the time conflicts of some other students. So, I finally took 4 courses and I guess it was my best choice to take 3 to 5 courses to balance my life. When it comes to Engineering courses, it is common that 2 or 3 mid-terms are given to students. In my case, I was also given 3 midterms and 2 midterms in each engineering course. In the case of material characterization course, final exam was conducted as a presentation. Basically, Not only all of courses are delivered in English, but also all of assignments and exams are conducted in English like UNIST. What I really surprised about was not only the professors, but also the students had such a nice English ability although they are not native English speaker, which has been a very big motivation for me to put my effort to improve my English. At the first session of “Anthropology of the Body” course, I was almost not able to understand the professors’ words, however, I could figure out most of contents at the end of the semester. In this course, I learned about meaning of body which has been changed over time and relationship between body and society. At the “Material characterization” course, I learned how and when to use instrumental analysis properly such as IR spectroscopy, Raman Spectroscopy, XRD, DSC, DTA, SEM, TEM and so on. From “Polymer physics” course, I learned mechanics of chain, gelation and elasticity of polymers and polymer blends. It was a great time to take these courses and I was able to learn a lot of knowledge.

7. Trip

In the case of domestic trip, I was able to use domestic flights with very reasonable price. Generally, it costs about 20-30 dollars for one way. It is also very nice that Sabiha Gökçen airport which connects domestic cities and most of European countries is nearby, which is only 10 minutes away from the school.

In my case, all the classes of the week started on Monday afternoon and ended on Thursday morning. So, I went on a trip almost every week, mainly from Thursday to Sunday. While living in turkey, I traveled more than 10 domestic cities and some of other countries. Recommendation places to visit are the cities which is located near Mediterranean Sea like Antalya, Olympos and Fethiye. Cappadocia where you can see the magnificent rocks and balloons, Izmir which has a long history of Turkey, Shafranbolu which has great history of the Ottoman Turks, and finally Mardin, the birthplace of civilization, are also recommended for next students to look around.

8. Conclusion

- My exchange student life in Turkey was the most meaningful and memorable experience during my college life. I was very happy to share my great time with nice people. Also, I had a chance to look back on me and to think about myself. I believe that It would be a strong driving force to start my new challenge.

I was sent to UAS Technikum Wien as an exchange student. First of all, thank you so much for giving me this great opportunity. If I did not have this opportunity, I would have been locked up in well called South Korea. It was a meaningful experience to let me know that the world is wide and people are diverse. I will report my experience from now.

What I was surprised regarding to studying was there were many friends who went to school to explore purely academic studies. As one episode, my buddy and I majored in the same. One day, we talked about what classes we were taking and we got to know that I had a class that she hadn't taken. And my buddy showed some interest in that class and asked to me "What kind of studying or topic do you learn in that class?". I was embarrassed by her question because my Korean university friends are not interested in what they learn, but they are just interested in who is professor, does he or she give credit well and how to get the exam. In fact, it was the same for me. The most important factor to consider when choosing courses was credit. This conversation led me to think about why I go to university. In addition, I took a class in discussion format, which means that class required many discussions sharing students' opinions. The question that the professor asked us in the first part of the class was why we chose this class. I did not answer correctly when I simply chose the class to fill my credit, but the local students had a really big aspiration. And I could see that it was not just plausible because their eyes were shining. I felt embarrassed when I could not say anything. Their passion also appeared in attitudes participating in class. In my university class, the professor speaks more than the students do. It is almost one way communication. But in the class, the students talked more than the professor. The students were as passionate as the professor, and there was always a heated debate in the class. Students felt natural and free in speaking their opinions based on their values. For me, who has never been exposed to this educational environment, this class was a fresh shock. To be honest, the level of class content felt lower than my university. I think it would have been more helpful to take classes at my university to build my major knowledge. However, the lesson I took there led me to think about my attitude toward studying and attitudes to participate in class. It was more valuable than just building my knowledge. It was an opportunity to think deeply about my career, whether I am really interested in studying, whether it was right to attend class and get my degree. And I concluded that what I can easily do now is to earn my degree. In the short term, I aim to finish my studies well, and in the long run I will not neglect to find something that can pour my passion.

Although it is important for me to learn Austrian culture, it was also meaningful to inform about Korean culture. The area I am very proud of in Korean culture is food because it has a much more diverse taste than European food. I think Korean food is the best food because I am dominated by Korean taste, but I wanted to show foreign friends what we eat these foods. I always suggest going to a Korean restaurant for friends who want to have a meal with me and thankfully they always showed a positive response. And I thought it is good to let them know it is Korean food but it is also important to introduce Korean food culture. European friends don't share food when they are eating. However, we eat together a soup in one bowl using the spoon that we put in our mouth. I wanted to show this kind of culture to foreign friends and introduce as much Korean food as possible, so I tried to make the menu as diverse as possible. I tried to create an atmosphere that we can taste and share. In addition, I also taught them how to eat Korean food. European friends eat toast first with chopsticks, and then eat what they cannot eat with chopsticks with spoons. However, since Korea food should be eaten rice and side dishes together, it can be said that the best ways to enjoy Korean food well are eating side dishes on rice, eating rice in soup or rubbing rice and side dish together. At first, my foreign friends were unfamiliar with our eating culture, but I was proud to see them adapting soon and showing a satisfactory signal.

Even a friend who likes Korean food wondered how to make tteokbokki herself and I taught her how to make it by inviting her to my dormitory. I introduced Korean food in this way, but I also got introduced foreign food. When I told my friends that I planned to visit your country, some friends actively told me what food I should eat, other friends went to the restaurant with me or they cooked for me. It was enjoyable to learn about what to eat and how to eat. And based on these experiences, I thought that sharing food with each other is the basis of cultural exchange and I thought that everyone seems to think that their home country food is the most delicious like me.

know that language cannot be a goal itself, but it is a mean for communication. After realizing this, I started with a pure interest in my friends rather than English. In fact, this was also difficult at first. Because foreigners seem to be so heterogeneous that they seemed to be different human from me. But from a certain moment I naturally felt that I wanted to know about that person. I focused on delivering what I wanted to say without worrying about whether my words were right or wrong. As a result, I'm not sure if my English skills have increased properly, but at least I am not afraid to meet foreigners now.

In fact, the things I felt were very natural, and I heard a lot about them, but the depth and feeling were different from what I personally experienced and realized. Thank you for giving me a very good chance to reorganize my life.

During this student exchange program, I can say that it was the best moment of my university life. I experienced many things that I cannot do in our country. When I first arrived at the Vienna airport alone, it was the start of difficulty. It was even hard to find the train to go to my dormitory. Everything was new and I was very confused. However, I was very excited, too. Then I started to walk around many places in Vienna. The buildings, people, the transportation system, all of these were interesting. A few days later, third of the September was the beginning of the student exchange program. I met many foreign friends who came from various countries like Spain, France, and China. It was hard to say hello to them because of shyness. But we want to make foreign friends, so tried to be friendlier. So we found the one who knew Korea well or interested in Korean idols. I was so surprised that they knew many idols, dramas, and actors more than us. During the welcoming weeks, we met every day in the class and learned the Austria cultures and introduced our country's cultures. To hear the culture of many countries was fun and interesting. This picture is the first day of our student exchange student program.

During the starting week of the program, I met my buddy after the class. Her name was Julia, and she was always kind to me. Before I came in Vienna, she sent me emails and helped me so much. She helped me to make the transport ticket that can be used for one semester. And she introduced the Vienna and we went to the amusement park named Prater together. This amusement park's big wheel is very famous in Vienna because of the movie 'Before sunrise'. This picture is the day we met first.

She always wanted to help me and we met almost every week. She helped me speak English often and always tried to introduce many places. She is my best friend from now on.

After one week later, the class started and it was hard to see them in the class. The schedule of class was always changed for each week. It was very good for us to travel other countries. Prague was our first place to travel another country. We stayed there for 4 days and felt another feeling compared with Vienna.

So whenever the lesson was empty, we made the plan to go abroad and travelled many countries like Spain, Sweden, and Poland. Also, during the Christmas season, there was vacation for three weeks. So my little sister and mother came to Europe to see me. So we travelled 5 countries for 20 days. I always wanted to travel with my family for a long time. Nowadays, when I see the picture that we travelled, I miss the moments.

There were many foreign friends that make me adapt well. First one is my buddy that I introduced in upper context. Second one is Minsan's buddy who loved BTS who is Korean idols. She loves Korea and she wanted to learn Korean. So we met every week. She taught us German and we taught her Korean. Third one is Austrian boy that stay in Korea for six months for student exchange program. He gave us many information s about our student life and he introduced many places for us. Last one is Spain girls who loved Korea. She likes BTS, too. She always asked me about the Korean cultures and we sometimes spent time together and listened lecture together too. And there are more friends that make me more active. They made me use English more and more and helped me to experience many things. So when I said good-bye to them, I was so sad. But now I sometimes keep contact with them and they will travel Korea in this year. So I wait them now.

Finally, I want to say what I accept through this program. This program was very meaningful in my life. Before I go abroad, I was afraid to make friends and use English. But I did some presentations in the lesson, and talked with many foreign friends. So for me, using English is not so hard. It is the biggest achievement. And I took some rest during this semester. I needed some time to think my future and wanted to take a rest because I did so many things for two and half years. So during this period, I thought my future and decided the way I will prepare after then and get some motive force to pull ahead. So I accepted much more things during one semester and I cannot forget this periods.

From 2018.09.01 to 2019.02.01, I went to Technikum Wien University as an exchange. In this period, I learned and experienced a lot. There are three things that I want to say.

First, about academic topic, I completed 9 courses and 30.5 ects. I replaced 6 courses in my home university to 9 courses in Technikum Wien University. Acquiring ects is used pass/fail system but it was all absolute evaluation so I studied hard in here. There are two courses that I cannot forget. First one is “Data Acquisition and Analysis in Biomechanic”. In this course, I did three experiments. In each experiment, I experimented about our body walking system and movement. I also learned gathering data in each experiment and deal with them using computer coding language named “Matlab”. Because I was not familiar with the coding language, so I tried my best to learn this course. Moreover this course was team project, and my team is consist of 2 Spanish girls and me. At the first time, I was really worried about this because it was my first time to doing something together as a team that has no Korean member except me. In this team project, I could learn how can communicate with people who have different culture and thinking. And second course that I cannot forget is “Protein Chemistry”. It was master degree course so I studied very hard to pass this course. Also I had chance to present about some essay in this class. After this presenting, I can gain confidence so that I am not afraid to tell my opinion using English.

[Pictures 1,2: in “Data Acquisition and Analysis in Biomechanic” with my team girls]

Second, about traveling. During this period, I traveled 10 different countries and 16 different regions. Every country has different characteristics and attractions. After completing travels of 10 countries, I can get confidence and know the real enjoyment for traveling. France is my first Europe travel country. When traveling France, I was very nervous and scared, because I heard lots of scary rumors in Europe. But I traveled all 10 countries safely and I made it. Also I was amazed the majesty of the landmarks of each countries. Especially, in Italy, I was so happy to see lots ancient buildings for myself. During this period, I could be culturally mature person.

[Pictures 3,4 : Traveling]

Third, it is about my precious friends. In there, I made lots of foreign friends and studied their language and cultures so I could stand in their own shoes. Being with them, I could learn how to understand and communicate with people from other countries.

After exchange student program, I got confidence to say whatever I want using English and improved my English speaking skills. Especially, Leyla is my first Austria friend. She is my buddy during my exchange semester. She helps me whenever I had a problem.

She invited me to her house and we talked all night long. I was so happy to meet such a nice and kind girl. Also I cannot forget my Spanish girl, Bellen. She is also exchange student like me and she loves Korea especially Korean singer BTS. We watched Korean video and made own country's traditional food to each other. We promised to meet in Korea again.

At the conclusion, I was so happy to be selected as the exchange student for 2018 fall semester and achieved all what I planned before going Austria. It was challenging to study abroad but I did well. I never forget this 6 months. Thanks for everything to give me this precious chance.

- ☐ Name: KyoungKon Lee
- ☐ Host University/Institute: Muenster University
- ☐ Participating Program: Outbound Exchange students
- ☐ Program Period: 2018. 4. 1 ~ 2019. 8. 31

With having a dream to experience, travel and study in abroad, my journey to Muenster started. A preparation for an exchange program in UNIST was simple. The managing teachers helped me a lot prepare for the program like delivering documents, contacting with Muenster University and housing in Muenster. The only thing that I needed to do before I went to Germany was preparing for documents which would be needed to prove myself for staying in Germany. The documents included insurance, a certificate of registration, acceptance document from Muenster University and UNIST ID card. Those documents were needed for registering for Muenster University also for a German Visa. Also if it is possible, I recommend applying for “Mirae Asset Exchange Student scholarship”. I applied for it and could get a scholarship from this foundation. For students who would study in European countries, they could get 7million won for each. That would really help lose a burden.

The thing that I really concerned even before I left for Germany was housing. I applied for a dormitory 5 months before departure but I couldn't get accepted from the dormitory even after I arrived at Germany. Luckily, I could find a room for staying 1month, and at there, the guy who lived at the front room from Palestine helped me get a room to stay till the semester. I truly recommend finding a room as much as he/she can.

After getting a room, start from registering German address at the city hall, getting approval for replacing health insurance and finally for German visa. It is easy, not that much hard, so doesn't have to worry about it.

(The sight views of Muenster University campus)

The campus of Muenster is really wide and each of the departments has its own buildings. It is somewhat different from Korean universities. The campus is really beautiful, especially the main building, the “Schloss” looks like a palace since it was originally constructed and used as a building for a high class people at the past years through the history.

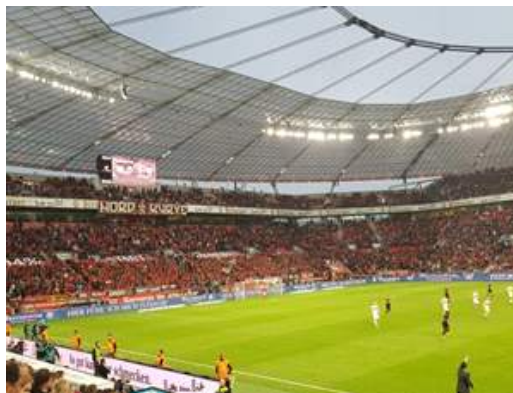

From the orientation, there are so many kinds of events for exchange students in Muenster. Every week, there is a meeting called stammtisch at night which can help make new friends from all around world. By talking with foreign friends, you might be able to improve your language skills with joyful talks. You can also make language exchange experiences at there. Every single time, its own topic might change.

After you enroll as an exchange student, you would receive a “Semester ticket” which can be used as a free transportation ticket in NRW (Nordrhein-Westfalen) including regional trains, buses and every tram. It was very useful for me that I could travel and visit many places like Dusseldorf, Cologne, Dortmund and Leverkusen. In NRW, there are many famous and well-known football teams like Borussia Dortmund, Schalke 04, Muenchen Gladbach and Bayer Leverkusen. By using the semester ticket, I could visit and see many Bundesliga games also Germany international team games. As a fan of football, it was one of the best things for me to experience in Germany.

(Bay Arena, Bayer Leverkusen vs Stuttgart)

In terms of lectures, it is not mandatory to attend every lecture and most of the big size classes, just one time final exam is for final grading. In a German university, there is no registering lecture like Korea but it requires for registering exams at the end of the semester. However, for the lectures which require only small number of people, they receive applications before the new semester starts. Even though the attendance is not mandatory, I truly recommend attending lectures if you are possible to attend. If you don't, you will be under the huge burden of load for preparing final exams.

Many of the students may have questions about the prices of living in Germany. In Muenster, there are REWE, LIDL, EDEKA and so on. There can be more supermarket brands in there. Usually, I went REWE for my groceries. Compared to Korea, the prices were not expensive. The fruits are my favorite. In Germany, the prices of fruits were cheap compared to Korea and also those fruits like “dates”, it was so cheap. I recommend trying to taste or cook something that you have not tasted so far and only can try in Germany not just only Korean foods.

Many of the students would have a wish to travel the Europe when they go for the exchange students. It is easy to travel other countries by flight or buses like Flixbus. Even the prices are not that much expensive so you can go almost everywhere with reasonable prices. I went to travel a lot when I was in Muenster. From Muenster, It is not far from Amsterdam or Brussels. It takes almost 3 hours by bus. Mostly I used Flixbus and sometimes flights from Cologne airport where you can go by train with free of charge by semester tickets. Among many of the places, Cologne was my favorite city. I used to go Cologne when I wanted to recharge myself. Walking through the Hohenzollern Bridge and seeing the view with Cologne Cathedral was just wonderful. Sometimes I went to Cologne at night and saw the night view of it. Even though I had traveled a lot of places during that time, Cologne was my resting place to feel the true peace. I hope other students would find a place where they can rest.

To summarize with one phrase for this program, I would say 'rewarding suffering'. The hardship was derived from various reasons, but it might be that the main one was my greedy course registration. I took three bachelor courses(international financial management, business analysis, intercultural business communication), two master courses(International macroeconomics, microeconomics), and one language course(Basic level of German).

Of course, it was not for sure that I would pass all of those. I had thought I would have been able to pass four of them at least, but I found out that was delusion. Now I manage to justify this failure as certain experience. There is famous saying, 'failure is the origin of success'. Even though there will be no record of failed courses in my transcript, struggling memories are inside me. As mentioned, two courses were both economics which are quite theoretical and obscure to access especially for bachelor student who did not build up prerequisite contents, like me. Having underwent this challenge, I felt pressured a lot. After getting bad result, I even got suspicious of the purpose why I participated this program at the moment. I only passed 3 courses out of 6, despite of substantial hard working on my standard. I made my mind not to be absent even one class and I did so. Every weekday, I have been to library after lunch and end up going home from there at night time when the library got closed. What I realized at the end of semester was, I had studied with wrong method. In German curriculum, students are encouraged to acquire the concepts of contents by themselves, rather than by instructors. Before the class starts, they captured main concepts and made them natural in order to follow lectures smoothly. If the course is for master students, it becomes more voluntary and harsh. We had to read two or three articles including a textbook related to the lectures covered on that week. For me, it was really hard to get used to it, but other German students were really experienced and skilled in the curriculum with proper method. They made a group to study together and checked each other whether they understand the contents correctly or not. However, I did not have such active attitude toward the courses, since I thought I could do the work single-handed.

Hardship was derived not only from studying itself, but also from adjusting in foreign living. Whole weekdays had first class at 8'o clock, so I had to wake up at least 6:30 AM. I took a bus for twenty-five minutes to central station of Muenster, and then rode a bike for fifth-teen minutes to lecture hall. Through whole winter, there were snows and rains quite often, and my clothes got totally wet when arriving at hall.

[Snow piled up on my bicycle]

Student cafeteria and gym were also far from there, so that I spent somewhat two hours and half per a day only on the road. Furthermore, a laundry machine at my dormitory was broken. (I complained about this several times, but a manager did not reply my messages.) It means that I have cleaned my clothes(including training clothes) with hands and hung out them to dry every night. This same routine repeats day by day, and I manage to comply with those patterns. What I realized desperately was that I was one of the most blessed one who had enjoyed the great convenience of campus life in Korea. I found that I should have been grateful studying in UNIST without any hindrance such as long distance, harsh weather, and poor facility, etc. I thought Germany is advanced country so that there would be no specific problem for foreign students to study hard and it is easy to get complex things done. However, it was too optimistic expectation. I was assigned in private dormitory which was notorious among other international students. The worse is that the lord of the dormitory is not trying not to give our deposit money back if we don't make a whole house cleaned which had been totally mess at the first time. Exploiting our deposits, he is now threatening us to clean the whole house before leaving. My house mates(from Italy, Ethiopia and Turkey) and I are now quite upset about this unfair situation.

I have already cleaned my part thoroughly, but there would be possibility that other parts will not be cleaned and the lord will deny to give our money back. I heard, from other Korean student who participated in this program previously, that it is better to give up the deposit than wait to get it back. For now, after having returning in Korea, I am still waiting being nervous and being suspicious of getting my money(300EUR, about 380,000WON) back.

This is just one of painful incidents in Germany. If I discuss about other things such as visa issuance and course registration, this report will be full of complaints. Actually, I am really struggling not to blame somebody or something, since all the things I got through belong to the past for now. I do not have a time-machine to fix problems at previous time. I just want to let those things become precious memories that gave me something easily indescribable. How can I say it? Wisdom? Courage? Tolerance? Sincerity? It does not matter how it is called. Obviously speaking, though, I learned a lot during this program. I learned mathematical fundamentals of economics. I learned optimization of consumers' and firms' utility subject to their budget constraints. I learned basics of German language.

I learned several methods of business evaluation using financial statements. I learned German curriculum of school of business administration. I learned cultural difference between Koreans and Germans. I learned political and economic system of Germany. I learned how to get long with Germans in proper way. I learned geography and administrative distribution of Germany. I learned dynamical history of Germany.

I learned dozens of firms and markets representing Germany.

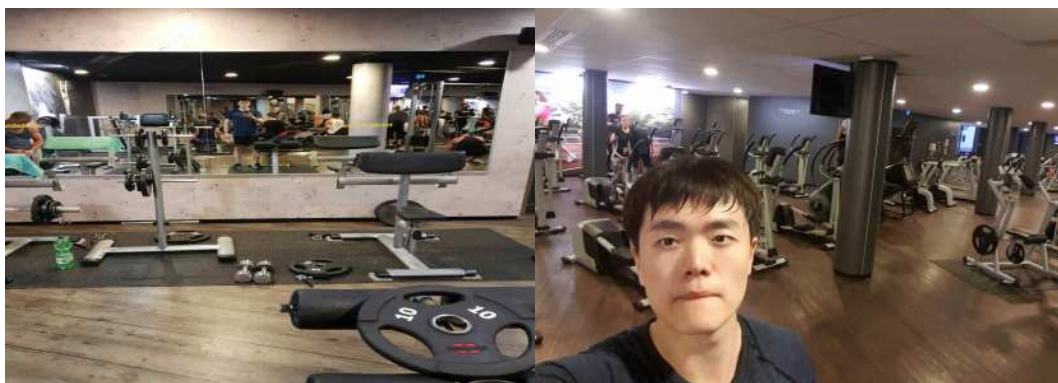

Most of all, I learned that it is good to gather bottles and cans thrown on the ground and get money by bring them to grocery stores. I did it whenever I went back home and saved 110EUR(about 140,000) in total. It was the only work I can do to earn some money, since there was no job opportunity for foreign students who are not able to speak German. Listing receipts on my account book whenever I bought something, I control my consumption month by month. I had to do it, because the scholarship for this program(which I really appreciated) was getting close to bankrupt and my mother could not give me further supports due to high commission of remittance abroad.

[Files of receipts]

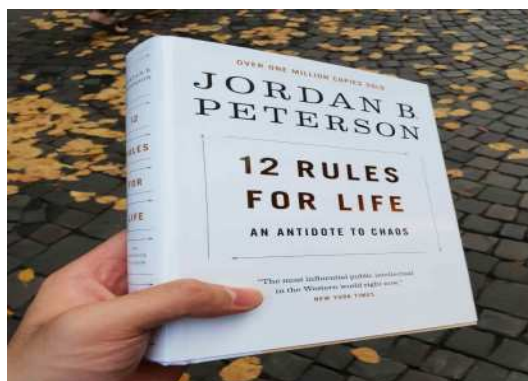

Frankly speaking, what I enjoyed most in this program was body training, rather than studying. I have been to gym five days a week on average, 'without any exception' (like most Germans said). I have seen a lot of professionals there, and get motivated, being surrounded by those Titans.

[At McFit fitness studio]

Consequently, my body got enhanced in both aspects of cardiovascular endurance and muscular strength. My mother and my friends said to me that my shape got better after I have been to Germany. I was pleased to hear those compliments, since I have tried my best to go ahead my physical limit. The reason I have done so hard was the hardship of my routine in Germany during exchange program which I mentioned above. Whenever I could feel bodily exhaustion while training, I could forget psychological pain coming from my harsh routine. At the moment when I used my muscles to raise heavy weight, I could stop thinking the agony of life in Germany. That agony was the very motivation to continue building up my body, even overseas. It was great experience.

I have bought one book at the library close to famous cathedral(church) in Muenster, called Lamberti Kirche. That English book's title was <12 Rules for Life> written by Jordan B. Peterson.

[12 Rules for Life by Jordan B. Peterson]

Every night before I went to bed, I read some pages of it unconditionally. I knew that there should be something inside me which can help to get through my difficulty. Without those messages in this book, I would not have overcome. What I remember most among those nights' messages is this. Chaos always surrounds me, and it always tend to break in an order. If that order, which protects me from the chaos like a barrier, is destroyed, I will be suffered in irrationality and emptiness. Therefore, I should not only strengthen the barrier of the order not to make the enemy get inside my area, but also fight against and occupy the realm of enemy. One leg on the ordered area, and other leg on the chaos area. This struggling is the only way to make my life better, even though it is not easy. When I lived in Germany, I was totally besieged by the chaos and it always threatened me with full of uncertainty I had never experienced. This makes me think of death which is able to happen anytime. When I was just in Korea and never experienced long-period foreign life, I did not know a shape of chaos around me. I was just satisfied and quite convinced that my barrier of order cannot be penetrated. However, when I became in situation where there is no any income with fixed budget, where there are never-ending studying loads ending up giving pitiless results, where there is no any practical help or guidance, and where an environment of living is unorganized, unfair, unsanitary and inefficient, I realized what 'chaos' is. It was kind of enlightenment for me. This desperate situation makes me see something I have not ever perceived. As a death gives meaning to a life, chaos gives meaning to my order. I need to fix my order. I need to rebuild my order, expanding the area of order against the area of chaos. I need to conquer the realm of chaos. I should not be frustrated and do nothing. I should stand up. One leg on the order area and other leg on the chaos area. On that border, I can feel the tension which makes my heart beat up and make me feel alive. That is the signal of getting better.

[Brothers and Sisters(German, Chinese, Taiwanese, Japanese, Australian, etc) in Church Life]

I am not sure this is a right way to write final report. I am not sure whether the readers from international center and scholarship foundation will accept this writing. I just hope I would not write it again with certain correctness requiring superficial achievements such as credit exchange points or special activities like traveling Paris with a picture taken in front of the Eiffel tower. I know I should verify my deeds objectively because the foundation wants to know what I have used the scholarship for. As I have already sent a detailed statement with Excel format, I think, it is time to express what I really felt in this program.

To be honest, I would like not to recommend this program for bachelor students who expect to go to city of Muenster in Germany and to achieve something big there. It is almost impossible to capture internship opportunity because of a language barrier and overlapped semester period. Besides, administrative procedure is highly complicated and takes two or three months to complete all(residency, transportation, bank account, insurance, utility bill, etc.). This costs time and money quite a lot. If the student is able to speak German for general communication in certain company he will belong to and be easily fulfilled with small course credits, I will strongly recommend this program to him. But for just traveling and taking courses, especially for bachelor students who are preparing for finding job, it is better to build up competence in Korea for that much time and money.

[With other Korean exchange students]

In other words, opportunity cost for this program in Muenster is quite big. This is just my own opinion. I hope readers not to get antipathy because of this.

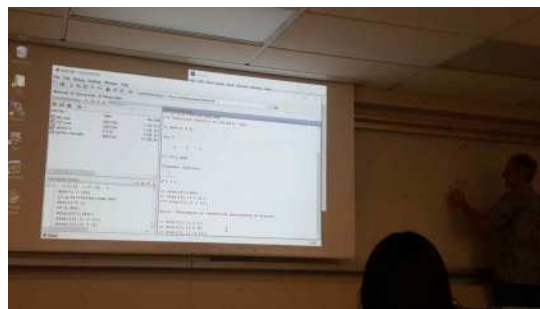

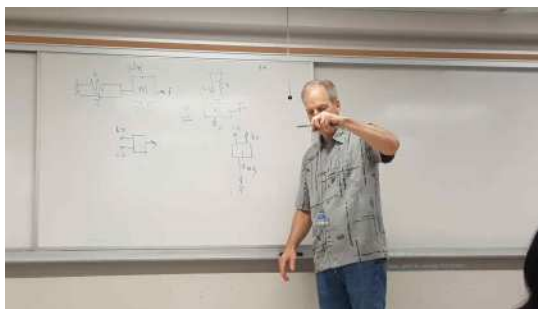

Anyway, I enjoyed a lot in this program and definitely I felt more grown than before. I would like to show my sincere gratitude to foundation and international center who gave me big opportunity to grab this precious time and money.

I take a major course in UC Irvine. It was first time for me to study in other university in US. The professor was very nice and made us feel free to ask anything about class contents. I think it was possible, because there were a few people in the class. Therefore, he could consider each of students in his class.

Actually, the class itself was not so difficult. However, I felt some difference between Korea and US. The professor tried to focus about how what we learned are applicated in real life or how we use them. So, such thing was very helpful to change my sight about engineering. Anyway, summer session was very good experience for me. Also, I could make some friends from other country. Therefore, we can learn other cultures. I really recommend this kind of program to student of UNIST.

Studying in UCI was a huge experience for me. Although it was only for 6 weeks, I have learned, seen, experienced a lot of things that students in my age could not have. Thanks to this program, I learned the different lifestyle, had greatest facilities, and had met a lot of nice people.

The first thing that I have noticed as soon as I got to America was the house building style. They had a lot of buildings but not high whereas in Korea, most of the buildings or apartments are built with several floors. Even the grocery store was only in one story high which is not quite imaginable in Korea. Also, a lot of people had car as their transportation because the distance they have to move is usually far. Even my classmates had a car to move around. Another thing that I have noticed was the way people jog, tan, and play in the beach. A lot of people were having their skin tanned with the sun and some people even jog with their top off. That was very interesting because it is not common in Korea. I also noticed that people enjoyed playing basketball or small tennis around the beach. For them, the beach was a place they can relax and play under the strong light of the sun. People lived very different in America. I enjoyed watching them and being part of them.

The School had a lot of amazing facilities, educational conditions, and cafeteria. UCI had all kinds of facilities and programs that students can enjoy, study, or be part of it. Some examples can be ARC (Anteater Recreational Center), library, cafeteria, and summer activities. ARC was free and easily accessed. I saw a lot of students playing basketball, racquet ball, or working out. All they had to do was to check in with their UCI student ID and play! Library as well was very amazing from the fact that you can borrow any kinds of books with more than thousands of books available. Also, the students can use computer if they have the id and password. Not only that, in the library, they have a lot of seats for student to read, study, or research. In front of Langson library, there was a place where you can watch a play. In my case, I had an opportunity to watch Shakespeare's play, the Midsummer Night's Dream. If you walk around 5 minutes, there is a cafeteria where they have Subway, Panda Express, Wendy's and so on. With all these kind of food restaurants available, students are able to choose what they want to eat with variety of options. UCI also have this application called, "Tapingo" which helps students to order with the app and just grab the food. It saves so much time and sometimes it has special discount so if one miss it, it is very unfortunate for him or her. For food, students have this place called 'student plaza' where they can easily buy some stuffs they need for cooking, clothing, and cleaning. I bought a lot of ingredients from the place called "Albertsons" which is famous grocery store in U.S.A that it has over thousands of franchises all over the states. In the dormitory, they have nice kitchen, cooking tools, and sink that it was very easy for us to cook and just wash. A lot of facilities were very well-organized and easy to access so that students can have fun. For activities, summer session office prepared a lot of fun trips for students! I loved every single one of the programs they had and tried to participate in most of the activities. I highly recommend my friends who will go to the UCI to participate in those activities because it is fun.

While I was staying in UCI, I met a lot of students from all over the world. They were from Japan, China, Hong Kong, Macao, Mexico, Korea, Lebanon, and of course America. Most of the students were very nice and had their own characteristics depending on what kind of country they were from. That was the point where I felt some cultural differences. I didn't have a lot of trouble hanging out with them because I just accepted the way they are. Rather than finding the difference, I tried to look for the common things we have in common. Some examples can be watching MLB, American drama, or some movies. It wasn't hard approaching someone who had the same interest but if not, it was very hard. I have a lot of interest in other countries, so I rather asked about their culture and tried to learn their languages. When I tried, it was fun and by the time I get it on my hand, it was exciting. I also met some people in summers session office who helped me a lot with getting along in America. I really think that those kinds of programs are helpful for international students like me. UNIST has SPIKE and hope some American students get to know about this program and join so that I can help as much as I got helped. All the staffs working in the summer session office were very nice and friendly that I felt like there was a safe place for me in school campus. They enjoyed having conversation with me that I got a chance to get a testimonial. I was very honored but couldn't thank them enough. The staffs were the people who asked a lot of questions to me and all I did was answering the question and tell them about what I do. I always appreciated their works, words, and atmosphere. Lastly, Vibration professor, Professor Bobrow, was one of the greatest professors I have met in my life. He never looked down on students, always appreciated the questions and tried very hard to be in the same level with us so that we don't have hard time understanding the lecture. I enjoyed the course and staying in UClrvine not only because it was fun but because there were a lot of friends who helped me out and staffs who gave me great atmospheres.

When I was serving in the military as a KATUSA, I had no idea how great America is, but I had this fantasy about going to America from the stories I heard from my coworkers and battle buddies. They always told me some of the great parts of America and I have always wondered about it. Thanks to this summer session program, I had a chance to be able to check out the great part of America. Nice people, great environment, and most of all, fun activities. I really wish I could visit this country, especially California again and meet up again some of the people I met there. With these precious experiences and interaction, I feel have got one step closer to being a global leader.

Came into US

My journey in US started from June 22th. This was the first time that I've ever been in US. I myself was occupied by both anticipation and concerns about life in US. After landing an airport in LA, the city was too crowded and looked like a complete disorder. When I just landed at the US I did not know how to get domestic phone number, buy food, book a room to stay a night etc. I managed to get a local phone number and arrived to UCI. That was a tough start.

Life in US

Summer in Irvine was warm, while it is super-hot in Korea. My roommate was Indian guy. He is handsome and witty. He really likes to talk with people/ He even spend almost 2 hours in calling with his family or friend in a day! This sometimes made me angry to have some quarrels with him. His English pronunciation was so impressive to me (I can tell it was definitely Indian language accent sound English). I was not able to capture any single word from his saying at first, but I began to learn his distinctive accent, life background and characteristic. Finally became a good friend.

I love to do physical activities not just studying my interest and major. I enrolled a swimming class at a recreation center because I was literally poor at it. To learn how to swim was not easy for me like beginner and still not used to gliding on the surface of water. After practicing, I got used to moving myself in water and was able to enjoy the seawater of beautiful beaches on later on. On the other hand, I used to play basketball at outdoor court and made some friends at there.

There were lots of international students like UNIST. Most of them were from Asia countries such as China, Hong Kong, Japan and Korea. Knowing how to speak Japanese and Chinese had been a good merit that I was able to get closer to them so easily by trying to speak their own language and understand their mindset and culture. One more thing, I could improve my foreign language skills as well! Anyway, I shared lots of time with them when going a trip or doing something. I miss them a lot.

To talk about the beaches in California, they were really awesome. People seemed relaxed and were enjoying sunlight under a clear sky. I would ride bike along the seashore feeling the refreshing sea breeze, play basketball with the locals, surf on the waves. Watching the sunset after playing with friends, I drank some beer and have a nice seafood near the beach. Everything seemed to me like a dream.

US is so called as a melting pot as there are so many different nationalities living in US. There were numerous distinctive restaurants making their own countries food. I tried various kinds of food at the same time. Hawaii, Italian, Korean, Japan, China and Vietnam food. I especially enjoyed having Vietnam rice noodle flavored with proper amount of cilantro. It is a bit expensive to eat out in US compared to in Korea though.

What made me felt awkward was the way people treat somebody. Most of people had positive attitudes, greet somebody with smile, outgoing personalities. It was hard to adjust myself to them, but I got used to be like them. It was a fun to talk with natives, enhancing my understanding to the culture. To be honest, I think this is the thing that Koreans should learn from them.

Everything I introduced have one thing in common: they were the difference between the US and Korea except for taking course in the US. I took two biology courses in this summer session: cell biology and developmental biology. I expected the class in the US university to be interactive and student-based which has been one of upraising form in learning. However, it didn't. Studying in US was not so much different from studying in Korea. The professor gives a lecture and students memorize it. That's all. I was kind of disappointed about the style of course. Though, I was given a chance to look around a lab working on neurobiological problems in medicine. It was a big pleasure to touch a well preserved human brain in real and get a bit of knowledge about what's going on in the front of neurobiological fields. It came to my mind that I would like to do a research project in US, interacting with elites having different backgrounds.

Trip

One of a good thing in UCI is that it provides various short trip programs to international students. Of course, I took the advantage of it. I visited famous places to the point that every guide book introduces such as Yosemite&sequoia national park, Las Vegas, Grand Canyon, popular places in LA. On one hand, I was overwhelmed by the greatness and magnificence of nature. On the other hand, sensing an atmosphere of freedom and characteristic culture of streets in urban. Many artists were showing off their skills to tourists. I also went to see baseball and soccer game in LA. I hoped to see basketball games, but unfortunately the season was over. I will go for it if I happened to visit the US once again. Seems like LA is a Mecca of entertainment. I visited Universal Studio and Disneyland park. The US really has a massive influence in media industry, as we all know who Iron man and transformer are.

My trip does not end here. After the summer session ends, I started to travel by myself. Using public transportation like intercity-train system, tram, and bus, I reached tour sites in LA and San Diego. Being able to watch an aircraft carrier which once engaged battle of midway during WW2. Astonished by the size and its sophisticated structure, I even dreamed of serving in navy for my mandatory military service.

Then I took a flight from San Diego to Stockton which is a small city near San Francisco. Why I flied there? to meet a friend attending a pilot program at there. He had been a great help to me. I met pilots and had a chance to take a ride in a small plane. We rafted through a river at lake Tahoe and enjoyed the cool weather of San Francisco. Moreover, I also went to casino with he and his friend. We had much fun at there.

Epilogue

I know this pieces of paper are not sufficient to depict every details, joys, and knowledges that I learned at there. To make it short, the most important thing I learned is people's culture. I was able to understand the way of their thinking. Besides, I truly did lots of activities that I haven't experienced before. I can absolutely say that my participation in the US unquestionably helped to broaden my horizons. Thanks for UCI staffs and UNIST who backed me up to study abroad in this summer!

I took Hate Crime class by Valerie Jenness. In this class I have learned definition, types, measuring, history of legislative, cultural account, what's in the mind of victim and perpetrator, justice process, prevention and societal effort to fight back, and finally, issues regarding first amendment and 14th amendment of US.

What is hate crime? If I had asked a question to remind an incident of hate crime, then my answer is Charlottesville riot, an alt-right and neo-nazi groups gathering turned into violence and death of Heather Heyer. Heyer was an activist in the counter protest group. 2017, August 12, evening, a car driven by one of the Unite the Right Rally participant, rammed into the crowd of counter protesters against those white supremacist. Later, Stormfront, a neo-nazi website which was one of the participants of Unite the Right Rally, blamed her and shamed her. Shortly after, the website closed by the network provider, because they violated a code in the contract.

Most of the people will agree that is a hate crime. The motive was based on hate, and there was violence, and mostly, it was a crime. The definition of Hate crime is different by state, and county. However, there is a common feature. They are protected status, and motive or intention should be based on bias finally, it should be not just a violence, but a crime.

The protected status is where the law decide which status should be protected, for example, gender, gender identity race, religion, immigration status, ethnicity, sexual orientation, disability or even marital status. If a perpetrator differentially choose victim because of those statuses, then this consist as a hate crime.

The making hate a crime, in other word, making hate crime law created the new category of crime. The Federal government of US's effort to make hate a crime started with president senior Bush. In 1990, he created Hate Crime Statistic Act, which made FBI to collect data of hate crime. This first defined hate crime as a law. In 1994 when Clinton was president, The Sentence Enhancement Act was passed, finally, in 2007, Matthew Shepard and James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act extended civil right to include gender, gender identity, and sexual orientation. As years progress, the protected class extents.

Now, say, because US have the hate crime law in the federal level, they must put great effort on it. They should have better information where it happens, who is most endangered, (answer: gay by adjusted proportion, black by number) or is it increasing or not. Unfortunately, the answer is no. There are major problems with Uniform Crime Report by FBI. FBI gathers data from local authorities. However, local police may hesitate to check the box that this is bias motive crime because it might negatively affect reputation of their town. Victim may not report the crime because they do not believe police. Also, the law in US is different by the state and county, so that one case could be a hate crime in one state, but not in the other state. So, UCR can offer data, but it is not the most reliable. In compensate, there is a National Crime Survey, which surveys the possible victim, by the same department. This does not depend data on local enforcement and gives extra details of the victims. For example, their income, life, education, etc.

Hate crime can be described with two different categories. The first is actuarial, and the second is a symbolic crime. Actuarial crime may not involve hate, but is a differential selection of victims, such as a robber that targeted only disabled because they are immobile. However, Symbolic crime is not just an act of violence, but a way of communication to the world for the perpetrator. For example, if you bomb Disney Land, then it's not just Disney Land that damaged, but United States of America as a nation is damaged because Disney Land symbolize America. That is why, hate crime hurts more than other crimes. It's not just victims that suffer, but the group that the victim is belonged also suffer. In this context, terrorism and hate crime have a common feature.

How a perpetrator become a hate monger? There are individual, and societal level of understanding. In individual level, you can consider psychological, social/psychological and interactional account. For example, In the Gwen/Eddie case, Gwen was murdered after her group discovered she was a transwoman. The perpetrator panicked because he thought that makes him a gay since he had sex with her. To prove that he is a heterosexual male, he killed Gwen. It is called 'gay panic defense'. It used to be one of the best way of defending killing a transwoman and used to work in court. However, after this high-profile case, the state congress passed a bill forbidding gay panic defense.

In societal level, historical and cultural account, economic account, and sociological account and be considered. For example, Canada do have hate crimes, but it is very small compared to US, that's because Canada called themselves as a 'peaceful kingdom'. And when there are more topics of minorities, some people might think that its 'red flag', such things are not acceptable and what to go back to 'traditional' way. Finally, if people think that economy is bad, there is a higher chance of signing up for hate groups. For instance, neo-nazi and alt-right targets city like Detroit, which used to be the heart of economy but now is a rubble.

Then how should we fight back? We can make law regarding bias crime to fight hate crime in the level of government. Police will adapt to the new policy and prosecutors will follow. However, we should not ignore extra-legal response that is done outside of government. It is very recent history that hate become a crime. Think of middle age, which were burned. Black people lynched in the public and it was very legal and encouraged by government. Legal response was possible because there was civil right activists how fight back and said no to these hate. Remember, this is the first time that hate is a crime.

Now comes to an important question. Isn't the hate crime law limits the free speech, which is gerented by the first amendment of US? The story is more complicated, because 14th amendment ensures equal protection, which is why hate crime law is constitutional. And we want both of them, but those clashes each other. What is more important? And how can we interpret in the context of constitution of Korea?

Overall, this topic gave me a tool to analyze bias crime. As a citizen of Korea, I always wondered why bias motivated crime happens but there was no such lecture that offer discussion in this topic. However, at UCI I finally earned it. And I think this is going to be important because hate crime will be matter in Korea as our country become more and more globalized, and progress toward tolerance.

After orientation, at the Anteater Recreational Center.

The HKUST summer exchange program turned my vacations into an unforgettable study and travel experience. Beginning with the warmest welcomes and an exceptional organization by the Global Students Team and ending with a farewell or rather a “We will definitely meet again” to the new friends made, the program was an educational, social as well as cultural enrichment with amazing adventures beyond any expectations.

The campus itself offers already a great amount of possibilities to enjoy your leisure time between the lectures. Soccer, basketball and tennis courts, a running track, two gyms, outdoor and indoor swimming pools are provided on campus to keep you in shape and also enjoy team sports with other students. There is a barbeque spot right next to a beach, located close to our dorms, to hang out with friends during the evening, enjoying one a beautiful sunset not even leaving the campus.

Various dining possibilities such as canteens, restaurants, fast food chains, bakery's and Starbucks are on the spot to please everyone's tastes and preferences.

Pict. 1 and 2 Western Style Steak and Hong Kong style dishes from the Canteen on campus

Furthermore, the Global Student Team have arranged several workshops to make us familiar with the Hong Kong culture, e.g. Milk Tea Brewery class, Tea tasting, Traditional Costume Fitting etc. These activities not only helped us enormously to get to know each other and break cultural barriers but were also carried in a humorous yet informative manner.

Although the campus of HKUST is truly a gem, we were all excited to explore Hong Kong and make the best out of our summer. And Hong Kong did not disappoint us. Everybody is able to find joy here, since the city comprises on its condensed area everything one's heart desires: vast shopping areas, bustling city life, international and local cuisine, interesting local markets and stalls, pristine nature and hiking opportunities, exciting night life, soft sandy beaches etc.

Cutting a long story short, this program enables students to make use of their summer and create invaluable experiences for themselves, educationally, socially, culturally and also personally. This program is not merely about studying for a semester at a top-notch university in Asia. Communicating cross-culturally, diving into a new cultural environment, trying out and tasting new things, all that was made possible by this program. I am grateful I had the chance to grow beyond my limits and change into a person with a broader perspective than before. Thank you.

I participated HKUST summer exchange program. I met lots of international students and learned how to understand other culture and get along with others. It was so great experience for me and I can't forget the time I had. In HKUST, there are many workshops that make us to experience China's culture. Among them, I participated learning Cantonese course, tea brewing, and opera costume workshops. It was well prepared and made us spend enjoyable time. Especially, I think tea brewing course was very nice because I could taste high quality teas and program was well prepared! In this summer semester, I took 'Discovering mind and behavior' and 'Technology and innovation' course. Both of them were good and made me learn lots of things. I learned how the human behavior thinks and the process of thinking. I could learn knowledge that I was not able to learn in our school. All courses were interesting and helpful. I also was very pleased to the dormitory and view of campus. It was inside the mountain and I could see ocean view everyday so I could refresh every time. Campus was safe and clean and most of staff was kind and helpful. Also staff of international center always try to help us and gave some events like happy hour and giving souvenirs. It was very great opportunity for me because I practiced English every day and met many people. I want to recommend this summer exchange program to HKUST to other people.

HKUST provided very good activities for exchange students. I took “milk tea brewing”, “dim sum making”, “traditional tea tasting” etc.

I took “Urban Air Pollution” class. This class provided not only lectures in classroom also various field trips! I visited “Super Site” in campus where measures air pollutions with many devices.

Also, I measured air pollution outside the campus with special device called PAS. I could meet many international friends and many Koreans from other university! It was so great experience ever!

My Unforgettable trip

I was selected as a scholarship student in 경동장학재단, so I got a chance to study abroad. I participated McGill Interdisciplinary program which include both Internships and studies. It was great experience for me. Before participating this program, I had a fear about speaking with foreigners. However, this opportunity gave me the new perspective of world. I felt I was a babe in the woods.

Study

I took four classes. Strategic interpersonal communication, Multinational negotiations, internship for professional communication and intercultural communication and globalization. These subjects were somewhat related with business department. Actually, I couldn't choose my subjects, so it was strange at first. As a result, however, I satisfied with my courses because it gave me a new perspective. I learned communications and negotiations which cannot learned in my major.

Before going to Montreal, I was imconfident with speaking English. These courses helped me to adjust in English speaking cultures. There were lots of differences between Korean cultures and Western cultures, but I had have a time to prepare it by taking McGill courses.

Faculty and officers were also very kind. They helped me a lot to adjust in Montreal. Campus tour was one of the example. They also always cared about my health. When I got a cold, they helped me find the hospitals.

McGill was a perfect place place for the study. their traditions and passions to research always made me feel happy. There was a museum called “ Redpath museum”. In the museum, I could see their history. I felt sense of belonging in this museum.

School facilities are also great. contemporary buildings and tradition buildings are well harmonize

Friends

I think “Friends” are the most valuable value in this program. I made a lot of friends from all over the countries. Firstly, classmates were the first friends that I met in Montreal. As I said before, it was my first experience to talk with foreigners. I had have hard time to talk with them, but my colleagues were kind, so it was esay to be familiar with them.

After meeting them, I've changed my mind. I got confidence speaking with them. I felt my speaking level was going up as time goes by. After deleting my fear to speak with other people, I met a lot of friends. I think this confidence was the best value that I learned from this program.

These are the people who love Korean cultures. I brought them Korean restaurants hung out every weeks.

These were the people who met in McGill university. They loved K-POP, so I introduced many Korean Drama and Korean cultures.

Internship

It was my first internship. I worked in Cognisense which is producing Mental health software program. The company was quite different from my major, but I really enjoyed it. I was in technology management department. There were 8 people in my department. My job was finding 3D TVs. My job was so important because our software program should be operated in 3D situation. However, Nowadays, Big companies like Samsung, LG and Sony do not produce 3D TV anymore. There are so many reasons, but one of many reasons are we should wear 3D Glasses to watch 3D TVs. Many people don't want to handle this inconvenience, they stopped buying 3D TV anymore. In addition, if 3D TVs have a 3D function, TV resolution must be decreased. Because of these reasons, we cannot find 3D TVs in the market anymore. As I said before, however, our company need the 3D TV function to realize our software program.

At first, to find a solution, I contacted every big company that produce 3D TVs. All company's answer was "No". They didn't produce 3D TVs anymore. I had to find other solutions. Then I started finding small Chinese company that have an ability to produce TVs. It was challenging for me to contact Chinese companies because it was my first time to write e-mails in English. However, taking classes in McGill helped me a lot. Before taking classes, I even didn't know how to start writing e-mails. I learned how to communicate with other people from many other countries.

I usually use the website "Alibaba". Alibaba is one of the biggest company in the world. The website "Alibaba.com" is for customers who want to find Chinese manufacturers. In that site, I contacted many Chinese display manufacturers to check if they can sell 3D TV for our company. I contacted more than 50 companies, and there were only 5 companies that can produce 3D TVs. After that, I started to compare between prices and quality. Since Chinese companies are usually smaller companies, there were so many things to check. Not only the price, company's reputation was so important, because we cannot trust their quality of product if they are small companies.

I had to have so many meetings with my supervisor because I couldn't decide 3D TVs by myself. I summarized every e-mail that I sent to Chinese company and I made ppt files that show specifications of 3D TVs. This kind of works helped me to understand how to prepare the ppt file in the workplace. I learned how the company report their problems and share their opinions. At first, it was so hard to prepare meetings and I was so nervous. However, I started to look other people that present their PPT. I noticed that they prepared their presentation so simply and intuitive. Then, I started to make my PPT simply and intuitive. It reduced the meeting time and my supervisor really satisfied with my presentation.

I think this meeting experiences were the most helpful experience for me. I want to get a job in multinational companies. If I go to multinational company, I will have a lot of meetings. Presentation with English was very hard, but finally it gave me a confidence about my conversation skills. When I arrived Montreal first, my English speaking skill was terrible. Even I didn't know how to order my food in restaurants. However, this internship experience changed a lot. First, I eliminated my fear about speaking English with foreigners. If I'm in the situation that people didn't understand my speaking, they always understand me. Since my first language is not English, most people understood my situations. With this confidence, I started making many foreigner friends in Montreal.

This change was so amazing change for me. When I studied in university, we had to speak English. Speaking Korean was not allowed to us during the class. Since I thought I am terrible at speaking English, I didn't ask questions even if I have questions. From now on, however, I absolutely think that I will ask my questions if there is something that I want to ask about. Communications with other language are always difficult, but I will enjoy my speaking English.

It was great 4 months for me to do the internship abroad. I met many nice people and they helped me a lot. Before I come to Montreal, I thought I should get a job in Korea because I'm insecure at my English skills. But, I've changed my mind. Companies that I experienced in Canada was so great. I really hope I get a job in Canada after graduating university and I will be the person who can be helpful to Korean society.

Last summer, I planned to go abroad to study English after finishing my junior year in college, so I was looking for a program. I really wanted to live abroad and improve my English-speaking skills, which is quite difficult to do in Korea. Around that time, I saw the announcement about the McGill University Interdisciplinary Program in the Portal. It was attractive to me to go abroad for four months with the scholarship from Kyeong-dong scholarship foundation. Even though I wanted to go abroad, the biggest problem was my budget. However, if I get a scholarship, I could focus on learning new things without worrying about money. At the same time, I had not decided whether to get a job or go to graduate school after my graduation. I was having a tough time deciding my career path. Just then, I realized that the program also included an international internship. I wanted to decide my career path after experiencing Western workplace and think about it carefully meanwhile. Then, I applied for the program and was thankful to be accepted. After finishing the fall semester, I prepared to go to Canada to study English as hard as I can.

When I thought about Canada, I usually associated it with Vancouver or Toronto. Also, I heard that McGill is the top three universities in Canada, so I thought it will be either be in Vancouver or Toronto. However, since McGill University is in Montreal, which is not one of the two cities, I thought that it would be a unique experience. For preparing the program, I wanted to get some advice beforehand, but there were no acquaintances who knew about Montreal. Therefore, I ended up researching things about Montreal by myself. What I found is that people in Montreal prefer to speak French more than English, as many people in Ottawa. I knew that in advance, but the atmosphere in Montreal was more French than I expected. The traffic signs, the products in grocery stores, the restaurant menu, and even announcements in the Metro, which is the subway in Montreal, were all in French. These are the reasons that I unintentionally saw and listened to a lot of French. Some of the French words are similar to the English ones, so I sometimes translated French to English in my mind when I heard the French announcement. For instance, when I brought some meat in a grocery store, I had to know the French words to differentiate between pork and beef and which cut of meat it was. Unintentionally, I was able to learn some French. I have never thought about learning French, but now it had become interesting as I learned a little bit in order to fit in Montreal. The friends who came with me started to learn French earnestly, and I also planned to continue to learn it when I go back to Korea.

In McGill University, I took four courses. One of them is called 'Strategic Interpersonal Communication', and we used a book called Crucial Conversations – tools for talking when stakes are high written by Patterson. We learned to communicate effectively with people in a crucial conversation situation. We spent a lot of time communicating with people who have different emotions, backgrounds, viewpoints, and values. It seemed to be something unavoidable. Although it might or might not be comfortable to people, it was helpful to people who are accustomed to crucial conversations and can handle the situations well. Therefore, I thought that we should all know how to deal with crucial conversations and use the techniques.

The first step is to recognize our goals in the crucial conversation, and we have to achieved them no matter how. The most important things in this step are to keep a clear head and not to be too emotional. It is easy to be emotional, and we may even forget our purposes of the conversation. This is why we should ask ourselves 'why do I start this conversation with them?', 'what is the goal of this conversation?', and 'what does this relationship mean to me?'. After that, we must remember those answers that we obtained during the conversation.

The second step is to listen what other people tried to say. The most important thing is to be patient and sincere for this step. Even if their opinions and the information they provided are wrong, we should respect them and always wait them to finish their words. If I intercepted without hearing the whole story, I might have misunderstood them. Also, making mild reactions is also important. It is a great way to ask whether my understanding is correct or not. The speakers would also be more comfortable to share their opinions and implications, because they know that I am listening to the conversation carefully. Though we usually encourage people to speak out and are ready to listen to them, there may be a situation when no one wants to initiate the conversation. In this situation, we should go first. We should start to share our thoughts, and they most likely would consider them.

At last, we have to share our opinions with humility. We have to start our conversation with an agreement. If we start it with a disagreement, the opponent might be offended, close their mind, and stop listening. Normally, disagreements are typically only over 5-10% of the facts and stories, so we should start by looking for a common ground. After that, we could add what we really want to say. What we should keep in mind is that when we think about something different, we should not say that other people are wrong. We are all different and we might all be wrong. Therefore, we should compare the differences, and find the best conclusion that satisfies each of us as much as possible.

My second course is called 'International Multilateral Negotiation'. We mainly learned about negotiating skills. We live by making compromises and negotiating with many people not only in the business life but in our ordinary lives as well. Before I took this class, I thought that even if I made a loss, I am supposed to concede to others in order to keep good relationships. However, what I learned was different. According to the class, I found new negotiating strategies allow me to achieve what I want while improving my relationships at the same time. There are more than five strategies which can be used in the different negotiating situations. In this class, we did not only learn the theories, but we also applied them in real life by carrying out the 'Red Paper Clip Project' every week. The 'Red Paper Clip Project' is a story introduced in Ted Talk by Kyle MacDonald. He traded a small red paper clip to a house by using good negotiating skills. Of course, he traded more than once and with several steps. We wanted to start the project applying his negotiating strategy and decided to donate our final products to charity. The people who we are going to trade with can be anyone. However, only one trade was allowed with friends who are also taking the class. It was not easy to trade with a small red paper clip because we were supposed to find a person who gives his or her permission for trading something greater. Who will change a small red clip for an expensive thing? I was worried about it at first. Even though I was rejected several times and traded for a lower value item for few times, I finally traded for an iPhone charger. Many people helped me, and I really appreciated it. I was also proud of myself because I finally reached my goal. Through the project, I have gained the confidence to approach and speak to strangers, and as the number of trades increased, my ability to explain and negotiate improved as well.

Furthermore, we did a role play, and it was about having job interviews. I was an interviewer. It is an opportunity for me to think from the perspective of an interviewer. This was helpful to me because whether I get a job or go to graduate school, I need to have an interview. This role play is an exercise for it. When I thought of an interview, I usually think of an aggressive one without warm atmosphere. I was not able to understand why the interviewers did it on purpose. I usually complained that the interviewers make us feel nervous and panicking. However, after being an interviewer, everything made sense to me. An interviewer does not ask questions to insult anyone, and he asked questions to find out who the well-matched person for his company is. In the workplace, there are also many bad situations that might happen. An interviewer is intended to know how the employees will perform in extreme circumstances. The actions that they do in the situation could reflect their true selves. Also, an interviewer already knew that the questions are difficult ones. He expected to see serious and hardworking manners and some creative answers. I would not understand the perspective of an interviewer if I were not in the role play. This experience would be very helpful to my future.

The third class is 'Intercultural Communication and Globalization'. I always looked forward to Friday because of this class. It was literally a class to learn about the cultures of other countries. We did not learn it theoretically, but we learned it by interviewing people who came from different cultural backgrounds. Meeting new friends with new cultures was exciting. I remembered that the title of the first interview was called 'CQ experiencing'. CQ is stand for 'curiosity quotient', which is an important element for learning about other cultures. We asked interviewed the people who are studying in McGill language school for their understanding of their cultures. We were so grateful that they welcomed us and gave us sincere answers. I was interested in Western culture, but I did not know anything about world history or Middle Eastern culture. During the interview, I met many people from the Middle East. When I heard about their cultures, they shared something very different from Korea. It was very interesting to learn about the cultures by listening to their history. I heard that there are still many wars in the Middle East and that human rights of men, women, and children are being violated. I hope their countries will recover, be peaceful, and become a society where human rights are respected.

Besides, we had a pot-rick time with other people. Pot-luck is “a communal gathering where each guest or group contributes a different and hopefully unique, and often homemade, the dish of food to be shared.” We had time to ask and answer questions about different cultures. I have heard people sharing their national dishes, including French, Japanese, Chinese, Mexican, Brazil, and some other countries. There were many different and interesting foods. It was fascinating that foods made by men could be so different. Since I am used to Korean food, the food that I prepared has the best taste to me. However, if I have some chances to eat foods from different countries, I will try to explore them as much as possible.

M

Moreover, during one of the classes, we were in the neighborhood of a Jewish community. I did not know who they are. I only knew that many of them, on the average, are intelligent and believe in God. When my roommate and I were waiting for other classmates, we saw the men wearing the same black hats and coats with long curled sideburns, like a right picture. We thought that there was a parade somewhere. Just then, the teacher arrived and explained that they were all Jewish. My teacher added that it must have been hard for us to see them because they were not open to others and lived together. We learned more about their culture by going to Jewish grocery stores and restaurants.

Montreal is a famous city for bagels. There are two bagel stores that were first built by Jews and are opened for 24 hours. We visited one of the places. During our visit, the people in the store told us how bagels are made while we were eating some bagels. They told us that even some pregnant women in Montreal want to eat bagels when they have their morning sickness. People in Montreal seem to really love bagels.

The next place we went was called 'Wilensky'. The restaurant is one of the symbols of Jewish food in Montreal with its signature sandwich, hand-mixed sodas, and immutable establishments. There is one unique rule: we do not ask them to cut the special meal as the sign says over the toasters. This is the way that they have been doing since 1932. The daughter of the owner of Wilensky explained about the World War 2 and the history of the store. However, it was difficult for me to understand them because I did not have enough background knowledge of world history. I thought that I should learn world history when I go back to Korea, because the more that I know, more things will be interesting. Furthermore, it is true that I can feel and understand more when I knew more.

The last class that I took was 'Internship for Professional Communication'. In this class, we learned about the workplace culture, so that we could fit in the culture smoothly for our internships in Canada. Let me explain my company. My workplace is Kuehne + Nagel Ltd. in Dorval, Quebec. Kuehne + Nagel is a global transport and logistics company focusing on providing IT-based logistics solutions. It was first founded in Bremen, Germany in 1890. August Kühne and Friedrich Nagel were the people who founded it, so the company was named Kuehne + Nagel. It has many departments, such as Sea freight, Airfreight, and Road and Rail Logistics. I was working in the airfreight department.

They use technology to give customers immediate responses and controlling their booking. It allows the customer to get a quote, to book, and to track their airfreight at any time and from anywhere. It saves a lot of time and money. I think this is the biggest strength of the company.

Also, for most clients, the terms used by the airlines and the way that they work are difficult to understand. Also, it is difficult for the airlines to transport the logistics considering individual circumstances of the clients. The Kuehne + Nagel looks for the best solution to provide maximum benefits to both of them.

The motto of Kuehne + Nagel's is: where are today's needs are tomorrow's innovations! I think this is the best part of this company. They think since many rules are changing, the company has to evolve. They really try to do it. The first logo, 'KN+', contains six main goals. They did not want to only stay in the present moment, but something more. As a result, a new logo was made. They added three more goals: customer, technology, and people. Although it did not make a big difference to a lot of people, it seemed to mean a great deal to them. Two months ago, they developed a new program, which is called SALOG. They just changed the program not because it had been old or had some problems. There were actually more people adjusted to the old one, and that was the more efficient way for them. Kuehne + Nagel took the risk and changed. They spent a lot of money and time to adjust to the new program and train the employees. I think this is the second strength of Kuehne + Nagel. They did not change because they had failed, but they want something even better. Although they were already one of the leading companies, they still choose to evolve.

On the other hand, the technologies might be their weakness. All the processes are done by computer programs. However, many of them were not experts in using these programs. They usually got some troubles with it. It would be better to give extra attention to people with credentials of the computer literacy when they were recruiting or training the employees.

My department, airfreight, is the second largest airfreight forwarder in the world. In my office, it is again divided into three departments: pricing, import, and export, which is where I was. I will explain what I do in my workplace with an example. Let's suppose the pricing department gives a quote for Client A to the export department. First, we produce the HAWB, which can simply think as a passport. Next, we set a pickup date and choose a shipper and cargo. When the product is brought to the cargo, we should check the consignee information, especially the address and the size of the product from the check-in documents. Then, we check the commercial invoice, and determine if an export declaration is needed.

If the commercial invoice shows that the customer should pay over 2000 CAD, the product is classified as B13, so it requires the export declaration. In that case, we should produce the export declaration documents as well. Furthermore, if the product is going to the US, it is further classified as NDR1, and NDR2 for other cases. Later, we would create the MAWB, which is a flight ticket for the product. Our staff would determine which flight schedule and price are the best. If the products are going to the same country, they are consolded together.

Finally, we would link the HAWB to the MAWB. To put it simply, giving the tickets to the passengers. After we close the MAWB, all the products in the cargo will go to the airport. At last, the products will go abroad!

Unfortunately, my major is Chemical engineering, and the job position does not require any chemical knowledge. Therefore, I was trying to improve my English-speaking skills and obtain the cultural experience meanwhile. During lunchtime, I tried to chat with people as much as I could. They were busy, but they were still willing to have some conversations with me. I was very grateful for it. There were many people from different countries in the workplace, so they could ask and learn about each of the cultures. One of my co-workers was interested in Korean culture, so she asked me a lot of questions. I usually recommended her some Korean dramas, and sometimes I brought some Korean food for my lunch and let her try them. For instance, I brought black noodle and kimchi. I know they tasted very different from the food in her country and it might not be that preferable to her, but she thanked me very much. I also recommended some good places in Seoul to another co-worker, because she is planning to go to Korea during her vacation.

The most impressive point of my first visit to the company was the way that they communicated with each other. Although there exists a hierarchy, the employees freely ask and express their opinions. Also, if someone has a problem with the task, they would help each other. For example, I saw that both of the manager and the staff worker were helping each other. This culture is totally different from the workplace in Korea, so I was quite shocked when I first recognized it. In Korea, it is hard for employees to express their opinions. People usually look at the boss's face and agree with his or her opinion. A person who talks a lot about his personal thoughts that are different from the boss's opinion often got caught by his boss and would get into trouble. Therefore, I felt that companies in Korea should learn and mix with this Canadian workplace culture. This is because I think that this atmosphere is one of the biggest reasons that make this company a world-class company.

My most memorable moment in Montreal was the trip to Ottawa. There were a lot of funny episodes happened. We planned to meet at 7:15 exactly, so we expect everyone to come on time. However, nobody came until 8 o'clock except people in our group. We waited outside over 40 minutes. It was so cold, but we had a fun time together. Then, we also took a Canadian school bus to our destination, which was our first experience with it. It was quite uncomfortable for having a long travel. However, the inconvenience was enjoyable because it was something I would never experience.

Then, we arrived in Ottawa and went to see the Parliament. My English was not good enough to understand the instruction that the guide provided, but it was beautiful and magnificent. When we finished touring, we came out and realized that everyone, even our mentor, was gone except people in our group. We did not know what to do. Then we decided to call our friend Paola, but she did not answer because it was Saturday. We were all panicked. After a few minutes later, our mentor finally came back and guided us to the restaurant for lunch. After we finished our lunch, we went to Nepean Point. The view was good, and the color of the sky was perfect. However, it was so windy that I did not take many pictures. We then came back to the bus stop and return to Montreal. It was a short trip, but I had so much fun. I will definitely remember these memories.

At first, I decided to participate in this program in anticipation of getting the knowledge related with my major. I saw that the program announcement, and it said that they can connect interns in fields such as electric cars and batteries. I had an enthusiasm for studying while doing internship at a lab last summer, and I wanted to learn more about my major in abroad. However, for the sake of context, I could not do that. What I was able to achieve in this program was the experience of living in North American culture. Although I am sorry to have not accumulated my major knowledge, the experience was enough. My values changed a lot, and my personality was changed socially.

I worked in the Kuehne + Nagel, the logistic company. Since 1890, when the business was founded in Bremen, Germany, by August Kuehne and Friedrich Nagel, Kuehne + Nagel has grown into one of the world's leading logistics providers. Today, the Kuehne + Nagel Group has some 1,300 offices in over 100 countries, with around 76,000 employees. There are lots of logistic companies all around the world like DHL and FedEx. Kuehne+Nagel ranked 11th biggest logistic companies in 2017.

Kuehne + Nagel seems to find a way to improve their works more efficient than before. For example, they made their own program called SALog. They want innovation. From this new program, employees can do their work more efficiently. This mind can be a strength for this company. They always tried to find a way to be effective. Also, the atmosphere of this company is democratic and flat like a network structure, rather than hierarchical. Kuehne + Nagel ranked 13th big company in 2016. Compared with 11th in 2017, they show increase in themselves. If they keep their pace, they will become more huge and great company than now.

However, I can find one weak point when doing my internship. It would be better for them to be respectful of each other, between an employee and an employee, and also between an employee to a consignee. Some of employees are polite on phone call, but they started to say bad word like fuck or asshole right after they finished their phone call to their customer. I can understand that there are some strange customers who required strange things, but employees should not be like this.

I am working in the import department. I have three supervisors; Ulrike, Mary-Jill, and Petra. Ulrike is my official supervisor designated by McGill. However, she is so busy because she is the head of Dorval office, so I did not have an opportunity to work her works. Also, her work is contacting with important consignees and companies, so there are some problems if I do those things because I am doing unpaid internship.

Next to my seat, Petra is there. Her work is to attach bond manifest, like mail copy and station copy, on the airway bill. I do not have access to make a bond manifest through my account, so when she asked me to do these kind of works, I always borrow her account, log in to her account using my laptop, and start working. Going into SAllog, scanning airway bill, copying and printing bond manifest documents, and stapling them is my work. Most of works that I do in my workplace are these works. Really easy, boring, and repeated works they are.

Mary-Jill do accounting. She sometimes gives me a list of each product, and I searched each master airway bill number and then write tracking number next to them. That's all. Sometimes employees from other departments asked me to help their works, then I took their works.

Unfortunately, there is nothing that can be applicable of the work I did to my major and degree, and program of study. There is nothing in common between this work and my major, chemical engineering. I cannot understand why UNIST decided to take this internship because the internship related with one's major is what UNIST wants. Also, I have a complaint to McGill. I know they gave a list of internship company to UNIST, and there were lots of company related with our major. However, we cannot work there because, according to Louise, there is a security-related problem when foreigners work in the Canadian company. Then, it would be better to remove that company in the list. All employees were busy doing their jobs, so, at first, they did not even have time to give work for me. I often sat at the company without doing anything. It seems that the work in Kuehne + Nagel is so complicated, and they thought it might be difficult for interns to do so. It was really boring that I just sat down without doing anything. This was the hardest part. My boss misunderstood that I did not work and that I was an intern who did not work hard. Actually, I could not receive my works even if I wanted to work. Later, misunderstandings disappeared naturally, and I was able to maintain a good relationship with my employees.

I failed to complete my goal, to have an opportunity to work in the foreign workplace related with my major, so there is nothing I learned professionally. However, four months in Canada is fruitful time to me because now I have confidence in speaking English than before. This can personally be a huge improvement. From experiences in both classes and workplace, I have confidence in speaking English. Also, I can understand about the culture and the characteristics of Canadian. Working four months in North America workplace can definitely be a good experience to me. I also learned how to handle when difficulty comes. For example, I had a conversation with Louise because she misunderstood my email. I agree there was a point that she might misunderstand, but this email was to my supervisor, not to Louise, so finally I can get rid of conflicts between Louise and me through conversations. I learned how to become a good communicator and negotiator in classes here. These were helpful to me.

Now I am planning to go back Korea. I return to my major, chemical engineering, and keep my study. I am in a laboratory now, so I continue my study and experiments in there. I am back to daily life, but I am confident that my experience in here will help me a lot in my future. Through this program I think I become a more social person. I am able to understand the culture of each country through the interaction with my Spanish friends. During the internship, I learned that all the employees were working hard, and there were many differences from the atmosphere of a workplace in Korea. If I apply the benefits I have learned here to my job, it will be a huge benefit to me. Au revoir Montréal!

Thanks for the support of Kyungdong global scholarship program. It was the best 4 months in my life.

The first reason I applied for this program was the fact that I could experience a local university and company life in Canada for a long period of four months. I was really happy when informed that I was elected. It was exciting to go my first overseas trip through such a meaningful program.

Thanks to the scholarship from the program has supported, I did not have to worry about the money problem. It made me could do many experiences within the program period. When I first booked my plane, I went to a cheap ticket and bought a ticket that departed a week before the program. When I was considering what I would to do for a week I found that I could get to New York from Montreal by bus and started planning my trip top New York immediately. On December 31, I got on a bus to New York as soon as I arrived in Montreal. Even though I lost my wallet and had a lot of trouble in there, the one week experience made me get used to talking to foreigners and I became confident that I could live well in Montreal.

The first two weeks in Montreal were the time to take the classes at McGill University without doing intership. During this period we got used to Canadian life. Everything was new, including how to use public transportation and how to order at the restaurants. In that period, we got many helps from the McGill University and Young-Ki You. They kindly helped us a lot to get familiar with Canadian culture, so we were able to adapt happily without difficulty. I could not go around in that period because of the harsh weather I had not experienced in Korea, but I was just really excited about living in Canada.

My biggest friendship at McGill University was with my Spanish friends taking the same program. Although it was difficult to make Canadian friends as I expected, my pleasant Spanish friends always made me enjoy my school life. We usually went to restaurants or bars together and made many wonderful memories. Some of them promised to come to Korea later.

It is also memorable that the location of our resident was really wonderful. The hotel was close to the McGill University and close to the Old Montreal, where the oldest and most famous building in Montreal are located, so we could go anywhere easily. And it even have a swimming pool and gym.

And the classes at McGill University were also very great. We took four classes in there, which are Multilateral Negotiation, Strategic Interpersonal Communication, Internship for Professional Communication, and Intercultural Communication & Globalization.

In Strategic Interpersonal Communication, we learned how to make crucial conversations with others. In this classes we operated bookclub with our book every week. Each week, one became a leader of a book club and planned how to operate the week. The contents of the class were really beneficial. I have learned how to let others engage in the conversation without being evasional, and to make productive conversations that are not aggressive. The most memorable part was the 'Make it safe' chapter I was in charge of the bookclub leader. It was a chapter on how to be able to solve misunderstandings and continue productive conversations when others fill that they are in danger in the conversation and become either overly passive or aggressive in the conversation. I think that this is a common situation in daily life, and I also have a lot of experience in trying to avoid conversation. When I was reading the chapters, preparing for the the bookclub, I could see how I can communicate better with others.

And I had a great time in Intercultural Communication & Globalization. Like the subject of the lecture, We spend most of the classes outside the classroom and talked to many people. We talked to people in Montreal and became increasingly familiar with the conversation. We once had an interview with retired people living in Montreal, and I thought a lot about the difference between Korea and Canada. Korea has a very vertical relationship with strict respect for old people between the generations, but in Canada, the elderly also had no hesitation in having a familiar conversation with us. It was really good to see their honest insides, not being dressed with authority. I really thought that I would be able to stay with friends who are older. There is a good thing about our traditional etiquette for the elderly, but I thought it was very attractive to have a horizontal relationship regardless of age. We also took many classes in other places outside the school. We once had time to go out to Jewish streets to buy their bread and bagels. The street scene was beautiful, and the new culture that I learned on the spot was really enjoyable. It was something we had not experienced in Korean schools. I thought that it would be great if we are able to experience learning by going to the real workplace rather than the classroom.

Multilateral Negotiation class was a slightly formal feeling unlike other classes. We learned various techniques used in negotiations and played role-plays. On the last day, We had a role-play of interview situation as a job seeker and the interviewer, and I acted as an interviewer. As an interviewer, I was able to think deeply about what kind of people the company wanted, and it was a good opportunity for me to think about what I need to think about if I would apply to the company later.

And for the last, Internship for Professional Communication taught me what to consider in an internship and workplace. Since It was my first internship, I did not know what to do and how to prepare. I learned a lot of practical tips about what to prepare before interviewing and how to express it to a senior when difficulties arise in the company.

Continuing the classes in McGill University, we started our internship, the main purpose of the program. At first I started with an interview, and fortunately I was able to join a company that matched my major in mechanical engineering. First of all, I had time to interview with companies who would like to accept me as an intern. The first interview was with Dyze Design.

When I first heard the name of Dyze Design, I thought it might be a company related to industrial design. Since I was most confident in 3D modeling, I thought that if I joined the company, I could work well. Preparing for the interview, I searched and found that it was a company related to 3D printers. I was really excited to know this. I have been thinking for years that 3D printers will play the most important role in the future mechanical engineering industry. So I made a lot of preparations for the interview. I thought about what to say, entered the company website, studied all of information about the company, and thought about the main tasks.

When I went to the company for the first interview, I was almost lost because it is a small building in a remote place than I thought. I was a bit disappointed when I saw its outward appearance, but became so excited when I went inside and see the various equipment and 3D printers. My manager, Maxence, told me about the company in the interview and I found that it was a startup company with short history. I was interested in start-up companies from the past and I was thinking about challenging my own business later, so I was happy to the opportunity. I directly sent a message to the program manager that I would like to work at Dyze Design as soon as I returned to my resident. I was really happy when I heard that I was able to work at Dyze Design on the next day.

The first work was earlier than expected. I did not really have anything to do with the weather in the first two weeks in Montreal, so I sent an e-mail saying that I would be okay to go there before the official date if I had anything to learn. I received an e-mail saying that I would be able to come to work on the Thursday of a week before the official start day, and I went to there on that day.

I learned what I was going to during my internship period on that first day. Since It is a start-up company, I worked with a small number of people, and I became to do 3D modeling of the tools that they needed in the company. I was really happy to hear that they will immediately print and use the products I will design. If I were in a big company, I would not have dreamed about making my own products in an internship period. After learning about my work, I got used to the SolidWorks program that my company use. It was the program I never had used, but fortunately it was very similar to the CATIA program I learned at school so I could get used to it soon. I did a little tutorial and immediately got a simple project. It was more than I expected to take on the first day of the project. It was a very simple project, to make brackets with spring connectors to easily separate parts of a 3D printer. It was the first design to make a real product. I made a first design soon, but was immediately told to make it again. It was necessary to make a simple structure because it was a part that would be made by machining a metal.

I realized that class and practice were different.

Since then, I took many projects in the company using 3D printers and machines. First one was to create a tool for measuring the length of a rubber tube easily, and the next one was a tool to measure the amount of filament used in a 3D printer. Through these two projects, I learned how to design parts that will be print using 3D printers. I knew for the first time that there are many factors to consider such as offsets and connection methods. Next, I made a filament waterproof case. I learned how to use various techniques to save materials in that project.

After that, I started my first big project. It was to re-create all of the 3D printers that are currently in use except for its frame. The reason for the redesign was due to the disadvantages of the cylinder bearings currently in use, and we needed to increase the stability and printable size by replacing parts with bar bearings and linear bearings. It was a whole machine design, so it took a lot of time than other projects which required less than a week. I also had to consider the location between the parts and the allocation of the ready-made items to be used. Once, I needed to remove and redesign everything. I finished part design after a month and started to assembly. Made everything using machining and soldering. All those processes took longer than I thought, but I was happy to see that the printer I designed was working. On the other hand, I felt that I would have been able to edit the program and manipulate the printer as well as make the program myself if I had knowledge of electrical engineering and programming. It made me decide to learn more about electronical engineering.

Since then, I had undertaken many projects. The second big project was to create tools for parts production, a project that using one of the company's core technologies. I was really thankful for the fact that I was trusted, and I tried my best to complete the project. In the end, I was able to complete the project just before the end of the program. I was proud to be able to make such an important contribution to the company, although I could not finish producing it myself because of the lack of time.

On the last day, I had a sad farewell with my colleagues. We ate lunch together and I received a surprise. Recommendations and specialties of Quebec. I was so impressed that I did not expected such things. Finally, I organized the projects I made and said goodbye. As we had lots of memories, so decided to keep in touch in Korea. And I promised that I will guide them if they come to Korea later. It was an unforgettable internship that made great experiences and relationships.

I really got a lot out of this program. I got a long overseas life experience of four months and now I am confident of speaking in English that I was worst. And through the internship, I was able to improve on my technical aspects, and I learned how to apply what I learned in practice. In addition, as I worked for a start-up company, I noticed how creativity plays a big part in watching how the company is operated and developed. Finally, I got some valuable connections to keep in touch in my life. I am really grateful to Kyungdong Scholarship Foundation for giving me such a good opportunity and I hope that many students will have a good experience like me through this meaningful program in the future.

On the evening of January 5, I arrived at the airport in Montreal, Canada, and unpacked at the EVO, a student residence, in downtown. EVO is 20 minutes walk away from the McGill university, so many McGill students who don't live in an university dormitory live here. It looks like a hotel and it has various facilities such as kitchens, small grocery store, gym, swimming pool, yoga room and barbershop, so it was convenient for me to live. Also, there are many different events in EVO such as cooking class, yoga, boot camp and barbeque party so I can make many friends from different countries through participating in these events and it was fun. I bought some stuffs which I needed to live in Canada during the weekend and prepared before school.

On January 8th, I went to McGill university and listened to the introduction of classes for the semester, and shared self-introduction with 5 Spanish classmates. On that day, I took a photo and created a McGill student ID card and had a school tour that a McGill university student explained. There is so much snow and the roads were so covered with snow that it was uncomfortable and cold to walk. However, unlike Korea, there were many buildings that looked like castles in the campus, so they were all beautiful and I enjoyed it a lot.

There were 4 courses which I should take in this program and the names of them were 'Strategic Interpersonal Communication', 'International Multilateral Negotiations', 'Intercultural Communication and Globalization' and 'Internship for Professional Communication'. I had to take each class once a week so I took 2 classes on Monday and the others on Friday. Each class lasted for 2.5 hours but some classes were finished early when there is nothing left to learn, so I had great time to look around and learn the Canadian culture outside. Now, I am going to talk about what I learned in each class.

<Strategic Interpersonal Communication>

I learned strategies and techniques to handle various types of communication in interpersonal relationships effectively. I used the textbook named 'Crucial Conversations' in this class. In each class, one of the students took charge of their own chapter, presented like a teacher, and shared opinions with classmates. The topic of this textbook is how to solve problems peacefully in risky situation without colliding with others. Let me explain what I learned and felt in this course.

The most important thing that we should do first when participating in a crucial conversation is to keep calm. People think that they are good at keeping calm when they talk the crucial issues with people, but many people often fail to do it. Many people have emotional egos, so they become violence or silence when things are not going to work out well. Then, they can hurt others, or they can't express their opinions to others. The situation becomes worse because two parts can't share their genuine stories and thoughts easily. Finally, they can't build trust, respect and the friendship and they are going to fail the crucial conversation. So, we should know our emotion style under stress in advance and prepare how to deal with the problems with people before meeting the opposite side. I think this preparation helps us keep calm in crucial conversations like a negotiation.

The next step is thinking my goal in this conversation. This step is the most helpful lesson for me in this class and it made me look back over the past. And it is the biggest reasons that I couldn't succeed my conversation in my childhood. When I started the conversation with people, I recognized my goal. However, I usually missed my aim and I was changed to defeat the others. I thought defeating the others is the way I win in this conversation, but actually both had bad results. Therefore, we should think continually about whether my goals are changing during the conversation to get the best results that I want.

Finally, we should learn some skills and we should be free to use them. I am going to tell only three techniques which I think important among many skills. The first skill is talking our opinions with the facts. This skill helps us persuade people well and people also can agree with our opinions without controversy or misunderstanding. The second skill is talking our opinions softly. It is natural that when we push our opinions to people, they don't want to listen to us. The third skill is asking others' opinions and listening to them carefully. It makes people feel safe and they are going to become active participants in talking. Also, they are going to try to produce better results efficiently.

The other side is also human being and people have emotion like me. Therefore, I am going to care about their emotions and I am going to follow above three steps: keeping calm, thinking my goals and three skills. Then, I can be a best communicator.

<International Multilateral Negotiations>

I learned an overview of the negotiation process and all its challenges. Also, I identified effective communication strategies for conducting successful negotiations. These lessons raised awareness of the cross-cultural dimensions of negotiations, particularly in the context of our rapidly changing, increasingly competitive, globalized world.

The most memorable things in this course was red paper clip project. What is red paper clip project? A Canadian man had a paper clip and he started to exchange it for another item. He continued to trade this exchanged item with others for more valuable things and he finally got a house. So, my instructor made us do this project because this class was about negotiation. I had to trade every week for something more valuable than what I have now using the skills I learned in this class with the clips. I had negative thoughts about this project at the first time. Who want to give his own item for getting this little paper clip? Also, after I succeeded trading, I was always worried and thought that who else should I try next week? Because I can't trade with the classmates and people I have already exchanged. Finding a new person was difficult for me because I didn't have other friends in Canada, and I was sorry to suggest trading to people because I was sure they didn't want to exchange it. However, I could make friends in Canada and get to know many company people thank to the project. And I was able to think about how I could get things the way I wanted to, and I got a lot of feedback doing this project. I got an umbrella of about $40 last week and it was amazing to have the expensive umbrella from a cheap clip. Through this class, I had the confidence to try something difficult.

<Intercultural Communication and Globalization>

I created an awareness of a broad view of intercultural communication and globalization topics in different contexts and situations and generated new knowledge by combining real-life experiences afforded through the course's activities. I finally broadened my vision to formulate critical opinions.

First, cultures of many different countries. I sometimes had a combined class to discuss the culture of each country through the interviewing the other classmates since there were only Korean and Spanish students in my class.

There were many students from China, Japan, Iran, India, Brazil, Peru, Paraguay, Ecuador, France and German in other classes. I already knew the cultures of China and Japan, but the cultures of other countries were unfamiliar to me, so it was very interesting to hear about their lives. Especially, I felt that religion has more influence on life that I knew when I interviewed my Iranian friend. So I searched more about Iran's culture and gave a presentation about Iran in the next class. I will give you a brief overview of what I presented. First of all, Iranians should not smile at others in public place, touch between men and women, and it is not allowed to keep eye contact. The thumbs-up gesture, which means good for us, is considered rude and has even the same connotation as raising one's middle finger for them. What particularly shocked me was their gender roles and some examples of gender discrimination. Iranian women's independence and freedom to make choices for herself such as working outside, getting an education, marriage, divorcing and having children or not can be changed depending on the attitude of her husband or closest male relative. We lived through the same period, but I couldn't believe that this was still happening in the world. In addition, I found their national heroes, some stereotypes about Iran, their business practices and the facts that they are collectivists and high contexts. Furthermore, what I really enjoyed was participating in potluck and tasting various foods from Middle East, South America, Europe and Asia in the last day of the culture class.

Second, globalization. Before I learned about globalization, I met grandmothers and grandfathers who belong to the McGill University. I asked them what they have on the globalization and heard about the good and the bad things about it. Some people are optimistic about globalization and some are not, so it was good for me because I was able to listen to both opinions. I could even organize my thoughts by writing a report based on the interview. I have never thought deeply about globalization, but it was great time because I found that I have a positive view of it.

As I learned about globalization, I also talked about global companies like McDonald, Samsung and Apple. Furthermore, I looked at some local stores in Canada that have become global. Teacher, classmates and I also went to those stores, listened to their histories from the owners and found how famous they are.

<Internship for Professional Communication>

I learned the Canadian work environment and its culture to adapt my internship company easily and developed my oral communication skills in English. I checked what I should do and what I shouldn't do in the company, made a special situation and did role play in front of the class.

The most memorable lesson for me is 'Happiness in workplace'. Everybody always hopes to be happy. They think that if they become a successful person or a person whom all people want to be, they will be a happy person. What is a successful person? It could be someone who earns a lot of money, someone who is respected by others and someone who is famous all over the world. Therefore, they always work hard in their workplaces and struggle to get to the top to be these kinds of people. However, the higher they go, the harder they should work. They spend much more time to work and they get higher responsibility for the company. They don't have time to stay with their family and focus on themselves. They will get more stress than before. Finally, they will feel empty later and they would ask themselves, 'What have I lived for?'. Then, how can we be happy in the workplace? 'Change your lens through which you see the world'. I totally agree with this phrase. I understood this to be 'You can be happy even in the same situation if you change how to see the world.'. For example, I originally felt unhappy when I stayed up late preparing for the presentation, but after I learned this, I could feel my passion and be excited in even the same situation. Then, which direction should we change the lens in? We should be positive. If we think about all things positively, our abilities such as intelligence, creativity and efficiency will be improved, and our energy will also rise. Then, success that everybody wants will be next to us. So, don't push ourselves into the corner. Just find our happy in daily life. Before attending this class, I thought compensation like money and the growth opportunities were the most important factors to be a productive and happy worker. I thought I would feel happiness when I buy something, or travel abroad so I need money. And I could be a productive worker only if there are many growth opportunities and global company can make these good opportunities. So, I had thought that I would become a worker who works in a global company such as Samsung. For me, it is necessary to suffer difficulties for decades to achieve these goals. For example, I must endure inequality in relations to my boss, endure disadvantages from company culture and perform a given task perfectly without my freedom. I thought it is natural at least in Korea. However, I learned that I should be changed to be positive. I was not good at thinking positively because I always thought the worst situation and I always prepared for it. But now, I know it doesn't make me happy anymore. Therefore, I am going to struggle to be positive to be happy at every moment.

<Cognisens, Company for Internship>

I worked at a Canadian company from 9 am to 5 pm every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and had time to learn about the culture of the Canadian company. I am going to introduce my company and my experience. My company's name is Cognisens. Its main activity is to create the software called Neurotracker. What is Neurotracker? It is like a 3D game and there are eight balls in 3D. At first, it highlights three balls among all eight balls for a very short time and all of them start to move freely. You should concentrate where the three balls are going. At the moment that they all stop, you can finally pick and find the first three balls that were highlighted. When you correct the answer, the speed that balls move becomes faster at the next stage and when you are wrong, the speed becomes slower. This software is offered to many sports teams such as Manchester United, Golden State Warriors, federation française de rugby and many university teams, and some healthcare centers. There are three ways to use this software: performance, wellness and learning. For performance, Neurotracker boosts the mental skills that are key in human performance. Superior cognitive abilities give elite athletes a competitive edge, and Neurotracker training can directly improve awareness and decision-making abilities in competitive performance. For wellness, Neurotracker helps you overcome the challenges of cognitive conditions such as mental wellbeing, performance in daily life, to stay active in aging. For learning, Neurotracker helps students with ADHD, intellectual deficit, people on the autism spectrum, and Language disorder, among many others. The industry that it is included keeps growing so there will be many competitors. However, Cognisens is also preparing to have high competitiveness and is planning to be globalized.

I am going to talk about the strengths of my company now. First, it has high potential for growth. Nowadays, people are more interested in their mental health and brain than before and they are also aware of its importance. So, demand for this software will be continuously growing. Second, it is an essential tool for both elite athletes and sick people. Technology and science are evolving, and this tool is made by this developed technology and science. There is a lot of evidence that it can improve their mental abilities like alertness, attention and awareness. It is easy for everyone to use this software and take advantage from it. Third, people in Cognisens are all friendly. They always try to make me feel comfortable and give some snacks to me. They work happily and sometimes play video games together at lunchtime. However, there are also some weaknesses. First, I think it is hard to advertise Neurotracker and persuade people that it really improves their cognitive abilities. The pre-tested version is necessary for them, but it takes time to see the striking effects. Second, there are limited demands now even though demands keep growing. Most customers are big organizations. However, the company should gather more private individual customers to get the company bigger.

In the company, I am working in the administrative department. I usually copy the papers related to the expenses, receipts and monthly payments and scan the minutes or some important documents these days. Sometimes, I arrange the files of every employee in order and put papers like personal expenses or monthly payments into the files. When I came here the first time, I started to compare the expenses excel charts which were made by my supervisor and the credit card statements. It is to check if there are any mistakes. These were from 2015 to 2018 so I spent a lot of time to finish it. Also, papers about 2017 were taken from the files, I put them in boxes and kept them separately. That's because it was January. After I did this, I don't have much work now.

These administrative works have nothing to do with my degree because my major is biomedical engineering. They are totally different. I couldn't find a job related to my major because Canadian laboratory didn't allow the foreign students to participate and learn about their experiments. However, I am satisfied with the internship program in learning English speaking skills. I was able to speak English a lot with my supervisor because I don't know about this work and I had to ask her to do it. Also, I was able to apply what I learned at the Internship course and Interpersonal communication course from McGill university to the process in Cognisens. For example, some rules that I shouldn't do and some ways to get familiar with the coworkers. In addition, I think it is difficult for Korean university students to experience Canadian company for 4 months. So, this opportunity was very precious for me even though the task was not so helpful to get my knowledge about my degree.

When I am asked what I have learned from this internship for 4 months, I will say the Canadian company culture first. It is very interesting for me. Cognisens is a start-up company and it could be a special case but I am going to tell you what I saw and felt. First, the company is not so strict. People often work in their homes and they sometimes come into the company late. Being late is possible if people let their coworker know that they will be late. Also, it is natural to be late if there are some problems caused by the weather like heavy snow or freezing rain. In Korea, no matter what the problem may be, people should arrive the company before the exact hour of work. If there is a traffic jam because of the weather, Koreans should leave home earlier than usual. Second, equality is a crucial virtue in Canadian companies. People can talk their opinions to the supervisors easily and even advise their supervisors. Also, when they think the commands from the boss are not correct, they can suggest the other way to work. However, it is not easy for Koreans to say that the opinions of the boss are not correct. Koreans should accept the commands from the boss. So, I love this equal conversations regardless of rank and status. Third, Canadians help each other with communication and deal with the problems together. The work could be slower in progress than Korean, but it helps to make company have a good atmosphere.

I really like my company, Cognisens, my coworkers and my supervisor. They always said hello to me with smiles. They are all kind and sweet. Especially, my supervisor paid attention to me in spite of her busy work and asked about my life in Montreal, my courses in McGill, my school in Korea and even my family. Also, she talked about her pets, her hometown and her family and sometimes showed some pictures in her phone. I learned that Canadians are little individual, so they don't like to discuss their private lives like their family. However, we talked about our families. From this, I felt we made a great relationship. I really appreciate it. Also, I had sushi for lunch with my supervisor at the last day. During this time, my supervisor suggested that we keep in touch by e-mail. Therefore, I touched my heart and this internship remains in my memory for a long time.

I had a research internship in UNC Charlotte for nine weeks. My research topic was "Fundamental Attribution Error in Virtual Reality".

1. Research

In this project, I explored that the fundamental attribution error affects the interaction between human and virtual human in virtual reality and it is consistent with the real world.

I participated in all the processes of this project, but my main involvement was making a virtual reality for experiments and doing experiments. I used Unity to create the virtual reality that the subjects interact with a virtual human. During this project, many people gave me generous support and I was able to use the latest devices and technology. That was a valuable experience for me.

Also, I participated a program with university students in the United States called REU (Research Experiences for Undergraduates). Through this program, I took lectures about 'how to write a paper', 'Preparation for graduate school', and many other helpful topics. Once a week, professors explained about their field of research, how the field has potential in the future and what kind of job we can have if we study this field. During this time, I could build up a lot of knowledge that I had not known in the meantime.

2. Friends

I met many friends through REU program. They are majoring computer science like me, interested in research, and willing to go on to graduate school. We talked with each other about our research projects and shared our concerns about future and research.

I enjoyed spending time with my friends. We went to a movie theater and delicious restaurants together. I tried the food that I had never eaten before and taught them how to use chopsticks. On Independence Day, I watched fireworks with them and they told me about the history of America.

I also traveled with my friends. The most memorable place for me was Washington. It was a pleasure to visit the museum with my friends and share our thoughts. My friend is Indian American, so we talked about how much it is different from India, America, and Korea.

3. Conclusion

What I experienced directly was really different from what I read in books. It could be a valuable experience in my life. I would like to thank UNIST and UNC Charlotte for giving me such a good opportunity.

- ☐ Program Period: 2018/01/13 – 2018/02/20

This whole internship experience is happened in CDI (Centre for Design Innovation) which is located in Swinburne University of Technology, Advanced Manufacturing and Design Centre (AMDC). Sumin and I is joined in laboratory of Prof.Chalres Ramscombe. And as research assistant, we started our research with few other intern and master students. Ongoing project which we introduced and joined is project that is associated with Ford automobile company. Especially about embodiment of UX attributes in early design. Interior designer called Mark is with us and semi-final goal was present first concept of design to him.

First assignment/task was to digest the project and read the pre-written paper about this project as well as creating a use storyboard about certain autonomous vehicle. That was part of understanding how the initial project idea is applicated in design process.

With the discussion session to getting actually know how to code values in this storyboard. With both storyboard we created and the one that professional (Mark) are coded with defined with UX knowledge.

As the time progressed and when professor thinks that we are fully understand the concepts, we began to create what the project meant to product. The Design toolkit that can help communicate among designers in early stage to easily embody UX attributes. It was kind of unexpected due to the field of study was not my strength (Mine is product/interaction design). Because of that, I cannot understand fully about the project yet in that stage. So, I run into the referenced paper that is cited on the paper we received. [Aesthetics of interaction: a literature synthesis.] and [Exploring relationships between interaction attributes and experience.].

First paper was review paper that defines core words and terms we used in project, and second was kind of next version of first paper that defined UX terms further away that conduct a experiment to create interaction vocabulary.

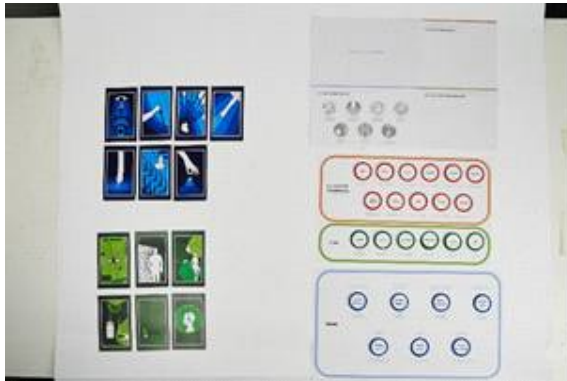

With that in my head, the approximate direction of what we must create is defined. Making of inspiration/evaluation tool that can be used to create storyboard that coded with UX value from start.

After that is defined, the project went smoothly. What already done is the direction of this idea cannot be went so what I concentrated is expanding what this toolkit can do. But firstly, what I want to create was ultimate knowledge-free inspiration tool that help communicating with interior designer and UX designer.

The toolkit is consisting of three elements. The card that explain the vocabulary that is have defined value and explanation but vaguely communicate with user to not limit their narrative imagination but contain that thought in some boundary whiten explanation of UX knowledge. The worksheet that can actually utilize the toolkit and evaluate sheet which can show what values and attributes are coded in the created storyboard.

In conclusion of this project is quite confusing in general, but fresh research area that help me in further research about my field of study. The period of research was just over 1month so finishing with first iteration product felt short and unfinished. I hope I can retain the connect with professor to maintain the research furthermore in Korea.

Over the last 1 month, I've done with my research internship at Centre for Design Innovation in Swinburne University of Technology, Melbourne. I worked as a researcher for Dr. Charlie Ranscombe. I and my colleague, Beom was assigned to the project in which we design toolkit for making storyboard considering UX design theory, especially for Ford autonomous vehicle interior design team.

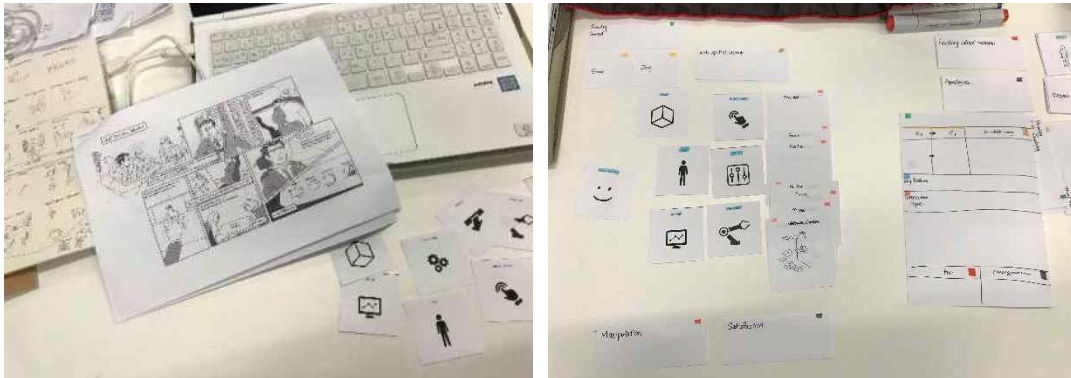

Designers at Ford used to design their car in traditional way. But they are now trying to change the way they design and shift their focus to consider the design of transport experiences rather than simply vehicle's appearance and technical performance.

The importance of UX is getting bigger and bigger. UX design research has focused on digital products and applications so far. So there has been limited trial to apply UX on vehicle design. Designers at Ford use storyboard as their UX design tool in their design process because it can offer a mode of visual communication that can contextualise emergent designs in terms of user interaction and intended experience and without the investment of detailed VR or full-scale prototyping. That's why we conducted research about it.

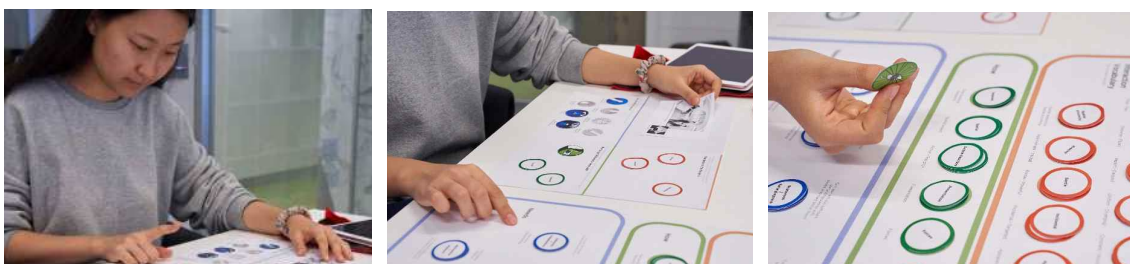

First, we drew our own storyboard based on existed autonomous vehicle concept to understand how storyboard works and get the idea from it. I made storyboard for READ system by KIA. Then we coded the storyboard with UX attributes from the relevant literatures. There are Be+level, Motor+level, Interaction vocabulary attributes that comprise UX framework. Be+level is about needs the user wants to fulfil with the design, Motor+level is about in which way the design fulfil user needs. Interaction Vocabulary is term that describes the interaction type. By coding the storyboard with these, we could get the insight how to make toolkit for designer who wants to apply UX considering these attributes.

After dealing with the storyboard we made, we started to design toolkit for designing with consideration of UX attributes. I and Beom generated idea respectively first and shared feedback each other. With some discussion, we stucked to each part, inspiration and evaluation, of toolkit and develop the idea. Beom developed his card-based inspiration tool with unique illustration. I developed token-based evaluation tool with worksheet. Meanwhile, we had meeting with Ford designer, Mark. He gave us some feedbacks on the toolkit concept. We could get some of insights what he expects for the toolkit and which part should be improved.

At last, we finalise our toolkit concept and prototypes. Due to the lack of time, we couldn't get feedback from the other lab researchers. However, it was worthy to simulate how designer can utilize the toolkit with the prototype.

I've participated internship program held by Korean governmental department. It is called WEST program. All of the participant took 2 months of business English class and then we worked at designated institutions (organizations) for 17 weeks based on our major. As my major is mechanical engineering, I worked at NGO named Hexlab Makerspace. This is brief Results Report of my language class and Internship.

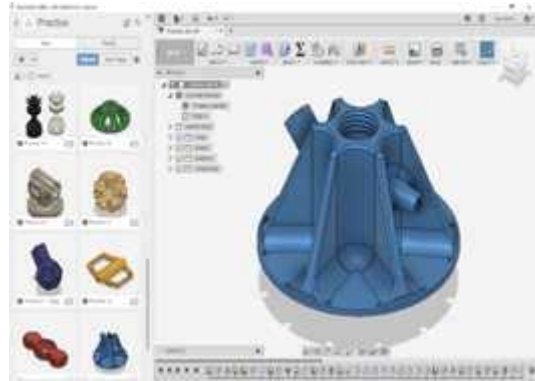

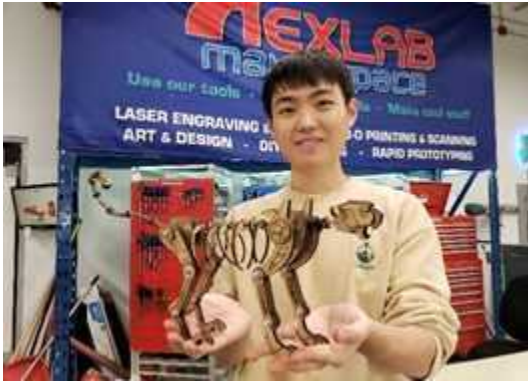

The business English class was from International Language Institution (ILI) located at Washington D.C. Level of the class was divided based on our own ability of English and my class started from 'E', which is second highest class among ones at school. Basically, not only covers business English skills, but our class focused on four fundamental English skills (reading, listening, speaking, writing) by priority. We divided our class schedule (9am to 2pm, Monday to Friday) into four and took a lesson from our teacher. Even though reading and listening class were not that different from Korea, speaking and writing session was very useful. As all the students at the class were foreigner, I only had to use English while I was speaking or writing. We had a lot of conversations about society, science and other controversial issues, and eventually wrote own essay to summarize our thoughts about them. This procedure helped me a lot arranging my thoughts with English. Also, I've got a lot of confidence as I use English continuously in my life. After finishing our regular class, I used to take business English advanced class hold by teacher who is actually working in industrial work field. I've learned how to write e-mail properly, choose my outfit and maintain social relationship with native American workers. Not only that, I sometimes took special English class that teaches me how to use right idioms at certain situations. I took it because I frequently used unnecessarily formal words instead of idioms in my daily life (like 'encounter' instead of 'bump into'). This class helped me to be used to using informal daily English. All of the lessons I took at language was helpful for me. Not only it was useful for my basic English skills, but also it really helped my internship afterward.

After finishing language school, I moved to Los Angeles to start internship. Like I already said above, I worked at Hexlab Makerspace. This organization focuses on two main things. Product design using 3D printer / laser cutting / silicon molding and Industrial marketing. I'm interested in both of topics, so I applied for both. As I was interested in Computer Aided Design(CAD) and I already learned how to handle a software back in Korea, using machines like 3D printer and laser cutter is not a tricky thing. However, I figured out still those are very useful and able to be used as countless applications. Therefore, I've learned how to work with different CAD software (Fusion 360) and operate actual machines, and eventually made my own product from scratch. I found out it would be potential industry leading business since it has so many ways to be applied. Thanks to this experience, I've decided my future path to study about bio-mechanics using CADs and 3D printed materials. Another huge subject in this organization that I've never learned in my life was industrial marketing. As an engineering student, I've never had any experience of meeting clients, discussing about the product and setting marketing strategies. At first, all the things were so awkward for me. However, as I kept participating meetings and had experiences, I found out it is so fun to build up finalized products by taking feedbacks and fixing them. Me and my coworkers participated making special candy mold, watch with pouch, smartphone handlers and so many various products. I've met clients (who requested making products from design to review and manufacture) and they inspired me with creative inventing ideas.

It was valuable experience to do internship overseas. I've learned many things that I could not have learned if I would have stayed in school. I'm sure that this experience would help my future career in many ways.

EKC 2018 is the conference for Korean researchers, students in Europe. It is held in 20th~24th of August 2018 in Glasgow, Scotland. The main topic about the conference overall was about '4th industrial revolution'. Based on 7 major fields, it was mainly composed with Oral session, Poster session and Ceremony & Forum.

In the opening Ceremony, Professor from European Research Council made a speech about how ERC and Korea are communicating and associating. It is mentioned that the influence of Korea to Europe was not low in the past, but as technologies are developing, it is keep increasing and now Korea is quite influential country to Europe.

After opening ceremony, there was opening banquet in Glasgow City Chambers. I got to meet many professors, politicians and the mayor of Glasgow. After some networking, Some Scientist and Politicians made a speech.

In Oral session, Professor or company members had a presentation about what they are researching and about their Future plans to improve their technology or corporation with Europe. 7 rooms were used at the same time (A room for each major field), and people could get in the room depends on what they want to participate. I participated in Environment/Energy and Material session.

I could learn that researchers consider not only on the technology, but also efficiency and environmental problem. As the main energy is changed from fossil fuel to electrical or nuclear energy, they provided some idea what kind of generator is developed and how to manufacture it.

In Poster session, Korean students who are studying in the European country made a presentation and professors evaluated their presentation.

There were some extra Forum/lecture in the conference.

I participated Korea-Europe YPF (Youth Participatory Forum) in the Auditorium in the last day of the conference. It was a Forum with politician and chair of Korean Scientists and Engineers Association from Germany, France and Canada. It is discussed that what should government or scientist should do for the next generation Korean Engineer to have a better chance or opportunity.

Some companies also visited the conference to give some job information for students. Most of the companies were hiring Master or Ph.D. Therefore, I could not apply there. However, I visited Samsung Electronics, KARI booth and get some information which field I should apply for based on my experiences.

- ☐ Program Period: 2018/06/23 – 2018/08/03

Internship at PITZ in DESY, Zeuthen

I went to the laboratory called DESY in Zeuthen, Germany for studying about plasma physics and some knowledge about plasma experiment. The team which I went was PITZ (Photo Injector Test facility at the DESY location in Zeuthen), which was built for doing experiment about high brightness electron beams. At this place, I entered below Gregor Loisch, who is researcher of there. During the schedule, I mainly did tasks which Gregor gave me. Over the half schedule, second summer school was opened so I participated to some classes like LINAC.

First, I did experiment about making plasma and record the breakdown voltage. Figure 1 is about experimental equipment. I make vacuum in glass tube (cell) and flow in the argon gas into the tube and maintain pressure inside. At this stationary pressure, I raised voltage inside cell. When the continuous light was turned on, I recorded the voltage at that time. If this was normal experiment, result might follow the Paschen's curve which is relation between breakdown voltage and pressure times distance between two electrodes. But this was different. Because of using abnormal shape glass tube in plasma cell and Argon-Hydrogen mixture gases, it will make abnormal result. My purpose was to find the differences compared to normal condition and find the constants of newly Paschen's curve.

In this experiment, distance between two electrodes is fixed, so pressure is only one variable on Paschen's curve. And the information of lower point on curve make possible to calculate an exact constant(B) and relationship between other two constants(A and γ). I input the result on Excel and make a plot. This is experimental data on Figure 2. Next, I made the temporarily curve and controlled the constants; controlled B in near range from some point I calculated, set the relationship among other constants, and controlled γ for fit my temporarily curve to measurement value. Result was not so good, because I made sure that I can't know the exact value of 3 constants. If I fit the slope, that low point and height didn't match. Opposite case also shows us mismatch.

Second, I used MATLAB to calculate the Saha's ionization equation. This equation is for calculating ionization density, and we can know the ratio of i -th and $(i+1)$ -th ionization density times overall electron density. In almost cases, this equation is used for 1st order ionization because it is easy to calculate. But, there should be different result if we add the higher order than 2nd ionization term, by adding more complex calculation steps. My purpose on this experiment was to compare the calculation results of 1st only and 2nd included and find how much difference will be found.

By the calculation, it became sure that including over 2nd ionization makes little change on result. Density of 1st ion and 2nd ion differed over 140 times. The resistivity didn't change a lot, and temperature also. But by this addition, resistivity got lower, density of 1st ion got lower, and total electron density (plasma density) got higher: changes were occurred into the reasonable direction. This tendency means the addition of 2nd ionization term goes to the right way, but its influence is just a little.

Third, I measure the plasma density, in the same circumstance with Paschen's curve measurement. By the analyze distribution of the ark discharge wavelength, we can calculate plasma density. The light comes from plasma particles (in this case, argon ions and molecules) doesn't make the same wavelength. Its range get broaden by the electric field around the particles and in this case electric field made by plasma do this work. So, wavelength range get wider by the electric field, and electric field get stronger by the plasma density. This relationship can make us to calculate the density of plasma. I measured the ark discharge light emission in fixed pressure, and just put those values into program. This program can remove wavelength broadening caused by other reasons like Doppler effect and equipment error.

Results are on Figure 4. I varied pressure to 0.5, 1, and 2 mbar and capture the light 2.5 μs after the ark discharge. Also, I measure in 2 mbar and 32.5 μs time delay. The most reasonable result is 0.5 mbar and 2.5 μs case. Its tendency of plasma density height is perfectly matched with our glass tube. In the wide area of glass tube, low plasma density coming and in the narrow area, high plasma density coming. In addition, I can find the difference in plasma density between glow discharge and ark discharge. When the too long time is passed from the ark discharge like 32.5 μs , it becomes the glow discharge state and plasma density get changed. In this result, plasma density is changed a lot with time pass like 2 mbar case. It fall from average $8 \times 10^{15}/\text{cm}^3$ to $2.5 \times 10^{15}/\text{cm}^3$, and this notice me that plasma density of ark discharge is higher than that of glow discharge.

In those experiences, I can know the basic characteristic of plasma and several ways to control plasma. Now I know how to use experimental equipment like pump, power supply, light absorber, and so on. I can learn the basic knowledge to use CF flange and basic stuffs which needed for assembly the basic equipment. Also, I understand experimentally the Paschen's curve, Saha's ionization equation, and other useful equations used for calculating plasma's characteristic. Those all things I earned at DESY, Zeuthen will help me a lot.

- ☐ Study Period: 3 weeks

July 9th.

The class composition of the art of the world in London which I heard is as follows. Before the class begins, look at important vocabulary for use in class. After that, we discuss after freely about the vocabulary and the subject of the lesson. Then, we visit the museum next morning and enjoy the artworks based on what we have learned. We discuss what we felt at the cafe or park.

The subject of the first lesson is "enduring questions of art". Before the Paul's lesson, we talked about what we think is beautiful and what makes the value of art. Then we briefly talked about the difference between the museum and the museum. The contents of the lesson were also based on this and the lesson was completed by explaining what to appreciate at the British Museum to visit tomorrow.

July 10th.

We visited the British Museum. The picture on the right is a picture of us as soon as we enter the africa exhibition. We sat in front of this work and talked about whether it is beautiful and whether it is worth seeing. At greek pavilion, the teacher asked us about the difference between the africa pavilion and the greek pavilion. We talked about the size and mood of the pavilion and we conclude the greek pavilion looks better because greek is related to English.

July 11th.

The subject of this class is enlightenment. Class re-explained the works we had seen at the greek pavilion in terms of classicism. Next, he handled neoclassicism related to classicism.

That afternoon, welcome picnic was held in a small yard in front of the school, and I took a box of 초코파이 for picnic. I felt happy because other foreign friends like that. It has become a good opportunity to get acquainted with foreign friends from other departments by eating foods from various countries.

July 12th.

I visited the national portrait gallery located behind the national gallery. The portraits of the various characters were arranged according to the theme of each room. The portrait we most interested in was family member of mary wollstonecraft. Her family portraits were positioned that she and her husband would face each other, with a portrait of her daughter in between them. She also talked about her daughter's novel, Frankenstein.

July 13th.

We visited sir john soane's museum. This museum is said to have been used as the house of john soane. The most interesting part was that the paintings were cleverly saving space using large folding panels. In the afternoon, we were divided into 5 groups to prepare our project presentation for the next two weeks, answering our own questions about interesting questions during the post-gallery discussion.

July 17th.

victoria & albert museum holds many of the UK's national collections and houses some of the greatest resources for architecture, furniture, fashion, textiles, photography, sculpture, painting, jewelery, glass, ceramics, book arts, theater and performance. In the modernism pavilion we talked about the bauhaus. After class, I took a city walk and looked around the camden market.

July 19th.

We visited the national gallery. Before entering the museum, Paul began explaining lightly about the building of the national gallery. We watched various artworks based on the contents of class yesterday, the dutch golden age.

July 20th.

Like Friday last week, we reconsidered the questions we had so far and each group had time to answer. After that, we made group for the next week's presentation, but all three came together as a group of unist students. The first topic of my presentation was 'How to appreciate the art according to each age', but after I talked to my teacher and my friends, and it became 'Interrelationship between art and society'.

July 23rd ~ July 24th.

The subject of this day was the techniques of representation, the way of expressing the three-dimensional feeling, the composition, the change of the coloring method, and learned the cubism, and the change of art leading to photography.

I admired the art at The Courtauld Galleries in Somerset House. It was easier to understand how techniques changed because the rooms were organized in order of age.

July 25th.

At last the 19th century paris, which I knew, was the subject. Paul introduced romanticism, realism, impressionism and later impressionism, and artists of my interest, such as Monet, Manet, and Renoir.

July 26th.

This day was a day of visiting art museums without classes. I visited three museums in total, and the most memorable place was the last exhibition of lee bul. When I first heard it, I was wondering why I went to the quilt exhibition ... But lee bul was a person's name and I liked the space made of light located in the mirror maze of the place.

July 27th.

Finally the last day of presentation came. I did not like to present it as a group, so I was worried before I started, but it was satisfied because everyone was well prepared and well presented.

This is a fun and practical course which balances gallery visits with lectures which provided me with the vocabulary, study and discussion skills.

The course concludes to make a short presentation with students working in small groups based on a theme that has interested during the course. Completing this task provided me confidence and ability to speak publicly in English.

'Cultural exchange' I did not understand the meaning of this word until I take this class.

Because the lessons I thought were just informational. But it was not. Through this class, I made friends and learned their culture from them. In the lesson, we discussed about many topics are focused now. For example; technology, feminism, refugee problem, environmental problem etc. For me, it was a new experience. Because in Korea we learn new information by lesson not discussion so it was good chance to know many different thought that discussion with people that have different culture. Not only know others opinions but also I learn how to write essay and do presentation shortly language skill. Those skills will be used in my future if I become scientist. As a result, I got wide scope of view and my language skills be elevated.

When I visited the Korean Cultural Center in London, I explained to foreign friends who are interested in Korean culture (movies, books) and discussed cultural differences between them.

I was able to finish the last class by comparing the past and contemporary art (modern), analyzing the performing arts, while paying attention to the paid exhibitions of famous Korean artist Lee-Bul through class.

I visited the British Museum near the school and shared various opinions while analyzing and analyzing Asia, Egypt, and ancient Europe focusing on African and Greek artifacts. It was very impressive when I saw the mummy, and it was a satisfying art class where I enjoyed the process of developing and sharing all my thoughts with foreign friends about various works.

College Activity

<The British Museum>

Our class consisted largely of theoretical lessons and gallery visits. The first gallery I visited was The British Museum. The British Museum, one of the world's three largest museums, was a building deeply influenced by Neoclassicalism. We discussed Neoclassicism and Eurocentric art exhibitions in theoretical classes. The African exhibition room and the Greek exhibition room showed typical Eurocentric thinking. We discussed why the exhibition room in Africa is dark and underground, why the gallery is bright and spacious, and what the curator has in mind.

<National Portrait Gallery>

Next, we went to the National Portrait Museum. There were portraits of famous British greats such as politicians, scientists and artists. We also discussed how the curators placed their work here. In particular, there was a portrait of Frankenstein writer, Mary Shelley and a portrait of her parents, and the arrangement of the portraits seemed to represent their relationship.

<The Sir John Soane's Museum>

The third museum was The Sir Soane's Museum. This museum has been open to the public since sir John Soane donated his house. He was an architect who designed the Bank of England. The structure of his house was very unique, with different cultural heritage on each floor. Especially Greek sculpture, paintings and various design drawings, which made him know his taste and job. As an architect, his house had many unique structures. There were many hidden spaces in the house, where there were paintings and sculptures of sir John Soane's Museum.

<The National Gallery>

In the National Gallery, we watched 17th Dutch painting we learned during lecture class. In the 17th century, the Netherlands was a golden age, and the scale of trade has increased dramatically due to the development of navigation. As a result, the number of transactions in the paintings has increased, and a style of painting unique to the 17th century Dutch paintings has been created. In addition, the appearance of oil paintings made it possible to express in detail, which was confirmed in the gallery.

<All day gallery visiting>

This day we visited a gallery focusing on contemporary art. The most important exhibition was the exhibition of Korean artist, Lee Bul. She is a world-renowned contemporary artist and has created many works that break the existing framework. Especially, most of the works were installation arts, and they were different from the works I saw in the previous galleries. Unlike classical works, there were many parts that were difficult to understand, but it was time to understand the trend of modern art.

Culture Exchange Program Report

During last winter vacation, I studied the medieval and modern history of the West through the Seoul National University exchange program. At that time, my professor explained the contemporary situation of the age with the art history related to Baroque, Rococo, Neoclassicism. Since I was interested in history, I also became interested in art history naturally. After class, I wanted to go back to my college and study about art history, but unfortunately I couldn't have found an arts course. Then I learned about this culture exchange program. Originally United Kingdom was also the home of Newton, the father of physics, and a country famous for engineering, such as the industrial revolution. It was the same thing for me to learn the art history of Europe that I was usually interested in London. So, I started preparing for culture exchange program.

The way of teaching in London was a bit different from ours. In Korea, it is difficult to ask questions and discuss with professors because there are many students and just one professors in a class, but London has about 15 students in a class, so communication with professors can be made more comfortable. In addition, two of the four hours of class time were not boring because we had students discuss each other for about 30 minutes on today's lecture topic, and we could concentrate more on lectures. Also, I could speak and discuss with my friends from many different countries like Japan, Italy, Spain, Egypt. The greatest feature of this class was that the lecture room was London itself. Instead of studying on a desk or chair, we visited a museum and gallery in London, such as the National Gallery or Tate Modern, and I studied with my classmates.

The first thing we learned there was the neoclassicism of the 18th and 19th century art. Especially since this period was also connected with the French Revolution, it was very nice and familiar because I had a bit of a lesson in winter vacation classes last winter. After learning neoclassicism, we visited the British Museum and the National Portrait Gallery to see the pictures at the time, and to look at the features of neoclassicism. After that, we studied about Enlightenment related art, Golden Dutch art, romanticism, Impressionism, modern art, modernism and postmodernism.

There was a project in this arts course, which was a presentation on the last day of class. The subject of the presentation was about what we learned from the lessons during the three weeks of class. I was interested in the subject of the last winter vacation class, "Does the history of art affect the Western Middle Ages and modern history?" Also, we should make a team with three people who were interested in similar topics. Each person of our team had chosen one art form for each age, and I have examined and presented the relationship between Neoclassicism and Revolution, and the other two teammates chose about Rococo, Enlightenment, Modernism and Modern Society, respectively. It was not difficult to prepare the presentation because I have made in Korea for many times, but it was a different experience to write scripts and practice speaking in English. Especially, while writing a script and practicing a presentation, I was able to improve my speaking ability.

I think this program has many advantages beyond the lectures. First, I could feel the British culture and way of thinking. I was able to travel around London during my weekday after school or weekend time, and I was able to see British architecture and cultural heritage that I had not seen in Korea. In addition, I was able to travel more effectively and accurately through professors and teachers, who is the local people of London. This seems to have a wider field of view than ever before. Second, I could feel not only UK but also other countries. As I said before, there were people from other countries who were in the same class. Having classes with people from other countries and doing projects is an experience I will never experience again. Through this, it seemed to have various perspectives and seemed to advance more internationally. Finally, my passion for my major seems to have increased. I was able to remind once again the excitement and pleasure that I had felt while learning science at first, by always looking pictures of Greenwich Observatory and other scientists, which I always only saw in textbooks. Now, I can go back to Korea and study harder.

Although I did not have enough English skills to talk with my friends as much as I wanted, and I have not seen other cities in UK other than London, but I think I got a lot through this program. If I have this opportunity next time, I would like to experience it again without hesitation.

1. About SOAS

SOAS is university in London, UK. SOAS stands for School of Oriental and African Studies. The only specialized university about Asian studies, African studies, Middle east studies. Also it is very close to underground station, such as Russell square or King's Cross, but it is quite far from dormitory that given by SOAS.

There is the British Museum nearby, so it is easy to look around the museum in free time. Also there is big library in the school and near the school.

2. Program : Subject

SOAS is famous by its studies about Africa and Asia, and International Relationship is we made 2 groups for QnA or discussion, and met in one class for lecture or discussion. My group was composed by 3 Japanese, 1 Taiwanese, 2 Chinese and 3 Korean. Although there were only Asian in my group, countries are close to each other so we can easily understand about history like dynasty of China. Also distribution of age was wide, so I could meet older people.

Also while debated, I could make some friends and talk about other topics. If someone who have interest in international situation, background or news, international relations course is quite good. For me, I have interested in international situation such as China rising, I could hear about China rising in Chinese view and other peoples' view, too.

3. Program : Others

When we start, we had picnic time called 'welcome picnic'. We could meet all of the summer course students taking same subject together or not. Most of the people came from Asia, but there were French, Spanish etc. We talked with some food and drink. This was short time and it made some regret, it was good to meet many people around the world.

Also there is event called 'City walk'. We walked together and student ambassador to Camden market. Market sells lots of accessory or stuff, and there are many food truck. We talked while walking and eating some food in there.

In our class, we went to FCO after taking a lecture related to FCO. FCO stands for Foreign & Commonwealth Office. Its rule is protecting and promoting British interests worldwide. Also there had been office of East India company, and we could see that.

– and it was good time to look around with explain and background knowledge from lecture.

4. Life in London

This section is not related to school or studies, but I write for helping some students after my course. Because SOAS is placed at middle of London, it is easy to go other sightseeing place such as the British Museum, Baker street, Madame Tussauds etc. Also dormitory is very close to King's cross, which is very big station and underground station, so it is convenient to go other place.

Also UK is expensive than Korea for meal. However there is kitchen on dormitory so if buy some stuffs from market and cook some food for very low price.

- ☐ Study Period: from July 9th, 2018 to July 27th, 2018

I took a 3-week English Language Skills course at SOAS. I chose the language course as London SOAS because it is the center of London which has a great influence on European culture and I want to learn British English which is usually encountered in dramas and movies. Although the courses I chose were focused on essays and presentations so the latter was not achievable, but the location of the university, which is closely linked to London's several cultural assets, was really good.

Before starting classes in London, I traveled to five cities in the Netherlands, Belgium, and France for 10 days. This was my first trip to Europe, and I was a bit anxious since I heard a lot about the dangers of terrorism and pickpocketing. But all countries were safer than I thought, and I finished the trip without missing things. The best city was Amsterdam. The first reason is because the scenery of the small boats floating on the canals and the people riding bicycles was beautiful. The second reason is that despite Amsterdam is a city allowed to have hemp and prostitution, it is safe and clean so I can feel their sense of responsibility and citizenship. I was able to learn about the culture and history of each country while preparing for the trip, and I was very impressed with the scenery and sightseeing places that I saw with my own eyes.

SOAS's English language skills course was similar to our school's building writing or building speaking classes. I did not take Building speaking classes and I wanted to improve my English speaking ability, so I took this course. but I think that if someone took both of these classes, it is not suitable for them. The class consisted of morning reading & writing session and afternoon listening & speaking session. So in the morning, I learned words related to various subjects, read articles, and wrote my own opinions, and in the afternoon, I listened to lectures, communicated with my partner, and practiced pronunciation and accent. The final tasks were essay writing and mini presentation. I chose biodiversity as a topic and wrote an essay on why biodiversity is important, and the I presented about the credit card, which is the most important inventions of the world. There were only 7 students in the class, and it was beneficial because the teacher gave me the opinions about the wrong part in my essay or conversation immediately. The most impressive part was to practice pronunciation and intonation. When I was studying words, I knew that there was a pronunciation symbol, but I did not pay much attention to it. Therefore, it was very difficult to pronounce phoneme and to distinguish each phoneme which the teacher said. I learned that a child over 12 months cannot distinguish phonemes that are not used in their native language in the 'Brain and Human Action' class, and I found that it is real.

It was a short three-week period, but it was a good opportunity to experience English university and classes. It was nice to see London's various museums, art galleries and cultural assets, and I wanted to improve my English skills and want to come back.

◆ Before the Summer Session and Overview

I use Qatar Airways and arrived in London via Doha, Qatar. I arrived at the dormitory a little earlier than the start of the class by applying for an additional night of accommodation. At the first day, I applied for a tour at a local travel agency to check out what's in London. I was able to catch up with the main landmarks and how to move efficiently, it was helpful to living here. Later, I visited the Tower of London and saw a part of the history of the Great Britain. And I have been to Oxford, Cotswold, and Brighton, which are the suburbs of London.

◆ Week 1

First day of summer session, we walk around with teachers and then started the lecture. The content that handle at first week is the making of the modern world and European integration. Focus on the meaning of sovereign and the history, developmental process of the Europe Union. At the seminar we talk about the Brexit and have some activity. We divided by some groups and made a post in opposition or the pros and did a mock speech.

At July 11th there is a library tour. Library at SOAS is so big that have five floor and many books and space for study. I listened how to use the library and used it frequently for three weeks. Also at same day there is the bloc 1 welcome part. We prepared a little to eat, and people from different courses came together to say hello and talk.

We learned through the process of preview – lecture – review – discussion - seminar for each subject of the lesson and talked about these deepening topics in seminar.

This week I had watched Concert of Trafalgar Sinfonia and Belmont Ensemble at Saint Martin in the Fields, been Royal Albert Hall for Prom 2 and Prom 3, Westminster Abbey, Science Museum, Greenwich, Natural Science history Museum. Prom is a classic music festival in the UK from July to early September. I went to see a lot of performances of Prom overlapping with the time I came here.

◆ Week 2

Contents of week2 is international law and United Nation. We learned about concept and history about each. And had a discussion with 'Is peace and cooperation amongst states destined to remain elusive?' and 'Is the UN obsolete and unnecessary?'. At seminar we did activity creating a dialogue between Roosevelt and Churchill.

At July 17th there was City walk with SOAS ambassador. We walk to Camden about 30 minutes with conversation. And we get 1 hour of free time in the food market.

This week I had watched Prom at Cadogan Hall, Summer Organ Festival at Westminster Abbey, concert at James's church Piccadilly, Phantom of Opera, Matilda the musical, Shakespeare 'As you like it' at Globe theater and been to National Gallery, Monument, Saint Paul Cathedral, Tate Modern.

◆ Week3

Contents of week3 is hegemony of America and rising power, India and China. We learned the concept of hegemony and difference of feature between the India and China rising. And had discussion about 'Does the USA remain a global hegemon?' and 'Will China's rise continue to be peaceful. I was surprised that there was a big difference between Taiwanese and Chinese student about second subject.

The final Project presentation we prepared was 'The Japanese Foreign ministry formally protests after a dessert is served at a summit of North and South Korea diplomats in April 2018. The dessert showed the disputed Dokdo Islands on a Map of the Korean peninsula.' We make the short role play with short talk. I have talked to Japanese students about this topic. At first I was worried that I could talk about this problem with her. But I realized the difference through the conversation, and I also realized that the way to solve the problem was having the conversation.

At July 27th there was Farewell party. We finished our classes at this event. Finally I received a certificate.

In this week I had watched concert at James's church Piccadilly, concert of Julia Fischer at Wigmore Hall, Prom15 at Royal Albert Hall and been to British Museum.

◆ Conclusion

Thank really Thanks for scholarship. Thanks to that, I have had a good experience that I cannot live in my life. I took classes in a new way from good teachers and had the opportunity to discuss with students from various countries. And the experience of talking with various friends in English and understanding them. It has been a valuable experience for me.

I learned English language skills from two great professors. Etain Casey professor taught me how to read articles and write essay. In reading class, I learned reading strategies: skimming, scanning. In addition, we summarized the main points of article after reading it. Following this strategies, I think that my reading skill is better than before. Furthermore, I learned how to write essay. I practiced to include factors: thesis statement, background, how to organize the essay, reference. We wrote short essay about 5 different topics. In final class, I wrote essay about the question: Are we threatened by artificial intelligence and modern technology?

I thought that writing essay was good chance to raise my academic writing skill.

In listening class, I watched various video: YouTube, TED. After we listen carefully, we answered several questions. I could practice to find the main points from the video. In speaking class, I learned how to make presentation with ppt and say exact pronunciation. Our topic is an important invention that changed the world. I determined to say about smart phone. So, I organized my ppt with 4 parts: Introduction, why it is important, counter argument(disadvantages), conclusion. It is difficult to memorize the script and speak with body languages, eye contact.

In addition, we practiced to follow exact pronunciation. I concentrated on several words that have not same spelling but same sound.

For 3 weeks, I could raise my English language skill and make friends. I never be able to forget this experience. The most important thing is to get better independence and confidence.

I have been to Europe for a 5 weeks. I lived in London, England for a 3 weeks. In London, I took course about "English Language Skills" and participated in a variety of activities. It was the most memorable travel and it was so interested. After a trip to Germany, Switzerland and France, I went to London by a train. When I went to London for the first time, it was very different from my country, Korea in the driver's position, 2F bus, and the life pattern of people. There was a lot of people for trip in London, especially Chinese. While living in London for a 3 weeks, I experienced British sightseeing spots and diverse cultures. Then, I was able to learn about British English that was different from American English. In my class, I was taught about English skills through English teachers. The teachers taught how to read and write essays and how to listen and communicate with other people. Finally, I wrote an essay on a topic and made a presentation.

In reading and writing section, the class was proceeded in the form to read essays, talk about my opinion and write my thoughts. We read essays about various subjects such as gender discrimination, artificial intellectual technology and other social problems. Then, we learned how to write an essay about construction, skills, grammar and vocabulary. I continued to write, and I have been used to writing essays. It was so useful to improve my English skills.

In listening and speaking, professors had students to speak each other in English as much as possible. As the class is continued, I have been confident in speaking English with other people. Then, I could make the presentation well. I also learned about attitude, pronunciation and other skills.

Through this class, I felt I could speak confidently in English. It was so meaningful and helpful class for me. I went to Europe for the first time and I experience the culture of Europe, especially Catholic culture that there are so many cathedral is magnificent and beautiful. As we experience various cultures in other countries, we can look at a wider world. This trip is very important and meaningful trip for me.

The summer program meant a lot in my life. Since I've always dreamed of studying abroad, this program was a wealthy experience. I loved studying international relations with lots of international friends who came from all over the world from France, China, Japan etc.

For the program, it was interesting that we learned international history in international view by British professors. There were things that we learned different from our countries and there were also things that were same. I enjoyed a lot finding differences.

I also had chance to present my ability a lot which was a lot different style compared to how we learned in UNIST. Students asked more and talked more compared to Korean students. I learned a lot from them. I will try to speak, ask and participate more when I go back to Korea.

In conclusion, it was a wealthy experience and I learned a lot from the program, cultures, mod etc. If I have another chance to study abroad as I did in this program, I won't hesitate it. I hope a lot of Korean students to participate this kind of program at least once.

I went to SOAS in the UK this summer for a cultural exchange program. The period is from July 9th to 27th, 2018, but from June 27th to July 29th, I stayed in Europe. I have been to the Netherlands, Belgium and France for a period outside of the UK and I think I have had a lot of good experiences.

What I felt living in Europe is that people are really free. I was really impressed that nobody cares about what they do and value they matters. When someone makes a comment, they try to listen and understand, and when he or she give an opinion if it comes to the order, they don't hesitate. As my course was international relations, this course learns about confused and confronted with various theories, and I should not have been afraid to discuss it in the process. At first, I was reluctant to express my opinion. But as time went on, I realized that my opinion was enough to be accepted, and tried to communicate as much as possible.

Another good thing about staying at SOAS is that the school was not too far from King's Cross Station, the center of London, so it was easy to sightsee anywhere in London, and it was easy to get around with the British Museum. Many of London's tourist attractions were well preserved, and museums were free to enter, and many of the world's cultural treasures were beautifully displayed, making it very convenient for sightseeing. In addition, the city made signs and milestones every block, which made the city feel very kind.

Since SOAS is a liberal arts school, it can't open a subject related to science and technology, but it is a great advantage that we can learn humanities together while experiencing European culture. I was very impressed with UNIST's ability to take courses in humanities, a difficult experience, and to interact and share ideas with students from other countries. If I am given the opportunity to go back, I will choose SOAS without hesitation. I would like to thank the school for this opportunity.

I got great chance to study at other country to entering UNIST. I got scholarship that amounts 5,000,000 KRW. So I applied culture exchange at SOAS in London with two friends.

We arrived London at July 6th. And the course started at July 9th. We applied international relations program all together but volunteer of this program was too many so we separated into two classes. Our class was consist of 3 Koreans and 4 Japaness and 1 French. And the other class was consist of 3 Koreans and 3 Japanese and 2 Chinese and 1 Taiwanese. The program was consisted of lecture preview, lecture, lecture review, discussion, seminar, project. We had 6 lectures for 3 weeks. And we discussed together and dibated together at seminar class. And also we made a project by a group. Our group was consisted of 2 Koreans and 1 Japanese and 1 Chinese. There were several topics of our project. We chose the topic about dokdo problem. It was hard project because there were Korean and Japanese together in this group and they were the people directly involved in this problem. We discussed and thought together about dokdo problem. It was great experience.

I had a great experience at SOAS that many students from other countries studied together. Also in the period of program, I can develope my English language skill very well that I can feel it.

We left Incheon International Airport on June 20th and arrived in Istanbul after passing through Kazakhstan. Since Istanbul is an area connecting East and West, we thought that we could see the harmony between East and West. We also took the start of the trip to Istanbul because we thought that the time difference between Istanbul and Korea would be so small that we would not have much burden to do activities.

For the first time, when we arrived in Istanbul, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of South Korea sent us a letter saying, 'Be careful of travel because Istanbul is a travel alarm area'. So we expected to be quite burdensome to travel. However, most of the people I met in Istanbul were kind, and there were many merchants who spoke in Korean, unlike other Western countries, and police were stationed all over the place. So, there was no obstacle to the trip because of security than thought.

Unlike other European countries, Turkey has developed Islamic culture. It is a very exciting city because we can see commonalities and differences with other religions by looking at Islamic religious temples which are not common temples, churches, and churches that we can often encounter. Because Istanbul is in contact with the sea, we have had many times to eat seafood and there was a lot of rice to eat. One of the characteristics of Turkish streets is that cats are very common on the streets, and they are not afraid of people. If you are holding food, cats come up and ask for food with charm. I think it is a paradise city for someone who love cats like me because they do not run away no matter how much you pat the cat while eating food. In front of most homes for cats there is a cage that holds cat food and water. So you can easily see the cats eating the food and water.

Stop talking about cats and talk about prices. In case of price, lira, which is the currency of Turkey, is about 250 won if converted into the currency of our country. You can buy a meal in an ordinary store with 15lira which is about 4000won with our money. The price of groceries is very cheap like Europe. Ion beverages of about 2000won in Korea can be purchased at about 1000won. The cost of lira was lower than in Korea as well as Europe, so I was able to travel around as if I were rich in Turkey.

Next we moved to Austria. Because Austria has a lot of music-related greats in Europe, we went to Austria with a strong claim from friends who are interested in music. Austria was surprisingly little in number except for tourist attractions. I did not know, but actually the total population of Austria is less than 10 million people, so it has a very peaceful and relaxed atmosphere compared to other regions. There are many parks and walkways in the residential area because there is plenty of space because people do not live much. In addition to being very well polished, the roads are wide and the parking spaces are located right next to the roads, so the roads are cleaner than Daegu, which is famous for its well-polished roads in Korea. Personally I was greatly impressed with the layout of these neat roads and parking spaces.

As Austria is renowned as a city of music, there are a lot of attractions for music and arts. Personally, the tourist attraction that I liked the most is the Schonbrunn Palace. It represented the artworks more affordably by representing the entire palace as a museum. In addition, it was a very pleasant space for me to enjoy the stroll because the kings could walk through the trail while walking and see the scenery. There is also a large opera house near the square and chairs and screens on the outside of the building, so if performers are performing, you can sit on a chair or stroll on the street to watch opera and musicals. In addition to such classical and heavy performances, I was able to find quite a number of people singing instruments on the streets and subway stations. Some of them sell music albums that they have made and recorded on the street while playing music.

Let's talk about food. I had a sense of resistance to cheese because of the cheesy taste. However, when I ate cheese sauce in Austria, I could not find the taste which I have resistance and I ate in Korea at all. As a result, I tried to find food that had plenty of cheese, rather than a sense of discomfort about the foods that came with cheese in subsequent trips to Europe. Finally, Austria is very beautiful at night. However, in the case of London or Berlin, it is difficult to go around at night because there are not many street lights at night. But Austria is very polite.

so we can enjoy the night view. I think this is the best advantage of Austria other than Barcelona, London and Hamburg.

I then moved to Czech. Czech was chosen because it is close to Austria and its next destination, Germany, but has a lot of unique culture. Czech felt overall to be about halfway between Austria and Turkey. There are more people than Austria and less than Turkey, and the cities are not cleaner than Austria, but they are cleaner than Turkey. Also, there are quite a lot of street cats and dogs not seen in Austria but not in Turkey. And not as much as in Austria, but it's easy to see quite a lot of people performing on the streets. However, I felt European lifestyle as a whole.

But the most surprising thing about Czech is that the price of Czech is really cheap. The price was cheap enough to worry about whether it was Europe or Southeast Asia. Czech uses its own currency, Corona, which costs about 50 won per corona. At the Mart, four people bought food for two days, but the price is less than 400 corona. At the Korean Mart, the shochu sold in the UK is only 600 won. Most products of Korean Mart can be purchased at about 30 percent cheaper than those bought in Korea, and Czech famous beer is about 500 won per can.

Sightseeing spots, of course, are quite expensive. Still, on a small cruise ship, we travel around Prague river for an hour, serving Prague's tourist destinations in their own language, and even offering free beer and ice cream for 17,000 won. I think this activity in Korea is probably more than twice as expensive. Thanks to these cheap prices, I was very impressed with Czech because I spent all my money at sightseeing places.

After that we moved to Berlin, Germany. As we know, Berlin was divided into West Berlin and East Berlin during the divided Germany and the entire city was inside the East Germany. So I feel that the city has mixed feelings. Especially in the East Berlin, the city atmosphere is similar except that there is no musical facility with Prague or Wein, which we had seen before. And West Berlin subtly differs from East Berlin and has been able to taste the feeling of Western Europe that has come to the future. Thanks to that, we were able to feel the change of the city atmosphere very slowly but progressively like a panorama, except for the city atmosphere changed from Istanbul to Vienna while we traveled to Europe.

Let's talk about tourist attractions. As mentioned earlier, Berlin was the only West German city that existed in the East German territory when Germany was divided into West Germany and East Germany. Half of the city was divided into West Germany and the other half was East Germany. So there are a lot of facilities and attractions related to the division. We visited the Berlin Wall and checkpoints. Otherwise, as mentioned above, we feel that Berlin is a bridgehead between Eastern Europe and Western Europe. Prices are also somewhere between Eastern Europe and Western Europe. It is slightly more expensive than Korea, but cheaper than London or Paris, which was visited after the rain accident compared to Austria.

I finally moved to Hamburg before I entered England. On the day of moving to Hamburg, Korea and Germany played the World Cup. We watched the match at the hostel, and it happened that our country beat Germany. As a result, we were afraid of ourselves so that we would not go out that day and try to restrain it as much as possible. But to have dinner, we went to a restaurant late at night, but we were afraid when the clerk asked us if we were Koreans as soon as we saw us. However, as the Germans celebrate us with their manner, "Korean players deserve to win. Congratulations. You beat the champion" and we admired their sporting spirit. So the trip to Hamburg was very happy.

However, although Hamburg is a big city, there are not many tourist spots because it is a typical big city like Incheon or Daejeon. The place I was impressed with was similar to our high school. Our high school is about 1 ~ 2KM away from DGIST. Also, as soon as I entered high school, Technopolis developed rapidly and many big buildings were built near the school. However, the number of people compared to buildings and wide roads was small enough to be seen. As I watched the scenes, it was impressive that the sight of not passing one person on the big road next to the university library was the same as my high school days.

One of the most impressive in Hamburg is Schweinehaxe.

Schweinehaxe was a Pigs' Feet fry and we ate about 1.5 pieces of Schweinehaxe in four people. Schweinehaxe is a fried portion that is salty and crunchy, but can also be enjoyed at the same time as the chewy, greasy portion of Pigs' Feet. It is also a good match for beer. While I was traveling to Europe, I had a wide variety of beers, but the German beer that I ate like Schweinehaxe was the most delicious. It is the most memorable food on this trip, and it is a food I want to eat again before I go back to Korea.

After that I stopped to travel and came to England to take classes.

The UK took considerably longer to immigrate than elsewhere. It took less than 5 minutes to enter Turkey and it took about 10 minutes to arrive in Austria. But it took about 50 minutes to get to the UK. They asked for reasons to come to the UK, where they live in the UK, the length of their stay in the UK, and even a bank statement. But compared to other countries, Koreans are told that they are not too tight compared to other countries.

Living in the UK was quite enjoyable. Since I stayed in the UK for a month, I was able to go to more places than any other city and have plenty of time to rest. Personally, my favorite tourist attraction is the park and the promenade. However, I was not able to walk through the park and the promenade because the schedule in other cities was tight during my trip. So I went to the park twice a week while I was in England. Hyde Park, Regent's Park with Primrose Hill, Green Park next to Buckingham Palace and Greenwich Park with Greenwich Observatory. Personally, Greenwich Park is my favorite park, although it is the most far in my hostel.

London is very expensive. Of course, as in Europe, groceries are cheap, but otherwise very expensive. Approximately 1.5 to 2 times more expensive than our country. When I first started living in London, I thought 10 pounds for a meal would be very expensive, but when I left London I thought 10 pounds for a meal would be appropriate. If I pay 10 pounds, it costs about 15000 won. If I eat at school, it costs 4 ~ 5 meals. Even if I go out to school, it costs 2 ~ 3 meal. In fact, my daily living expenses at the school is around 13,000 won. This shows that London prices are very expensive. But if you buy groceries at the mart, the price is very cheap. Grilled steak + shrimp butter + salad stir-fry at home can eat about 2 to 3 meals at about 5 pounds. That's why I learned to cook while I was in England.

During 2018 July 2nd ~ 27th, I enrolled in an English course in the University of the Arts London to enhance my English skills. Through the course, I could check my mistakes when I 'm speaking English, and I had a chance to deal with lots of English materials in UK. Especially, in class we talked a lot about attractive places in London.

I would like to introduce some places where I enjoyed.

1. Primrose hill

Primrose hill is a hill that is located in the northern part of London. It is a great place to go because on the Primrose hill, we can see all the landmarks of London such as the Big ben, London eye, the shard and the other wonderful architectures. I strongly recommend to see the night view of London on Primrose hill.

2. Tower bridge

Tower bridge is the bridge that is on the Thames river. The name 'Tower bridge' is from its location that is near the London tower. It was built in 1894, and became one of the famous landmark of London. Nowadays, the bridge is opening about 500 times a year. When I first saw the tower bridge, I misunderstood it as a London bridge, but the London bridge is different bridge that is next to the tower bridge.

3. National gallery

The National gallery is a museum that contains thousands of artworks, especially paintings. We can see Vincent Van Gogh's 'Sunflower' in National gallery, which is the most famous painting in the museum. It was built in 1824, and the period of artworks varies from early renaissance era to late 19th centuries. The Italian, renaissance and dutch paintings are the specialties of the National Gallery.

4. Buckingham palace

One day, I had a chance to see the guard changing ceremony in Buckingham palace. The palace was so crowded that I cannot move a single step, but when I saw the guard changing ceremony, I thought that it deserves to be that situation because the ceremony was so amazing and tremendous. The guards seems to be very professional, and they wore long uniform and hat even though the weather was very hot.

During the stay in London, I met lots of kind and respectful friends and teachers. I haven't experienced such a bad thing that I could remember throughout my whole life.

I went to 'Resent Park' in London. The park is the largest park in London. Many kinds of birds and plants exist in there. I saw crow, swan, pigeon etc. The park was harmony of city and nature. I saw a lot of flower. The flowers that have a white leaves were very impacting for me. I think Resent Park is one of my best experience in London.

I went to Royal Academy of Arts. The academy established at 1769. Then the academy has displayed many pictures and art works for every year. In this year, academy host 250th exhibition. Art works of exhibition was made by students of academy and new artists. I enjoyed art works of exhibition.

There's no problem of using English in the class and test in my university (in UNIST).

Reading and writing skills have improved a lot, but speaking and listening skills have not changed at all. However, I studied at University of the Arts London for a month and I got a lot of skills and confidence. The class was so interesting and helpful that I attended all of the classes except for one day when I was sick. I think that language (Especially English) is the pre-requisite to be a researcher. Because it is helpful when I read papers, and when I go to a foreign academic conference, etc. I was satisfied with this program.

In addition to studying English, I have experienced a lot of culture during traveling. I went to theater (Musical aladdin), Brighton, seven sisters, thorpe park, Stjames park, etc. I made many foreign friends and left lots of good memories in a short time.

The pictures on the next page are night view of the Brighton and Tower bridge.

3. Social Activity

- Barbecue party with ual friends

Our classmate Tommy invited me and friends to his house. There's total 18 people from 7 countries: Korea, Tailand, China, Japan, Brazil, Switzerland and Bangladesh. We shared our food and ate barbeque. The guitar playing from Tommy was great.

- Seven Sisters trip with ual friends

I really like the movie 'Lazy Hitchhikers' Tour de Europe' and the last scene was seven sisters. I explained the movie to my ual friends and we went there together. I have a drone, so we take picture together.

- University of Oxford & University of Cambridge with ual friends

UK has great and old universities. We are interested in university of Oxford and Cambridge so went there together. Whole city was university. People read books anywhere: on the bench, on the street, park and so on. We could see Newton's apple tree and bridge.

My first Europe. Since I was a child, I really wanted to visit Europe. But because of the huge expense, I hadn't come up for it. But luckily, thanks to a scholarship, I could step on the Europe and feel its atmosphere and culture. So firstly, I want to say thank you to UNIST that give me a great opportunity to have a valuable experience.

Culture Exchange Program is not just a simple travel. This is a great advanced form of education. We can learn fresh English expressions in local and get to know people of various nationalities. I was so excited of meeting lots of foreign friends and share each other's culture.

However, living alone in a faraway place is so lonely and can be dangerous. So, I and three of my OT friends who apply to same culture exchange program decided to share the accommodation and travel together.

We arrived in the UK a little bit earlier than school day, unpacked our package in accommodation and searched for the way to school. In the UK, there was a system for renting bicycle for 24 hours for £2. So, I and my friends rented cycles and reached to UAL Saint Martins where we got a level test. It was fun to ride a bicycle, but it was quite difficult to find a way because it was our first-time journey, and there were a lot of sections where the bicycle roads were merged with the car roads, so our burdens were great. Although riding a cycle is healthy and romantic, but safe journey is much important, so we decided to use London's second floor bus for our school road. The second-floor bus was very exciting and strange. Unlike Korean buses, the width is narrow, but it has two floors, so many passengers could be accommodated. We were so happy and could not believe the fact that we are directly on the second-floor bus. Like this, I was happy to fulfill my wishes one by one.

The test was conducted in two steps, Speaking and Writing. Tests' questions were quite easy which I didn't expect. For examples, 'Why did you choose UAL for learning English?', 'Introduce yourself,' etc. I hesitated for a moment, but soon I followed the answers of the questions calmly. Thanks to my improvisation, I got a Pre-Advanced level which is the highest level in General English course!

The class was very pleasant and informative. I learned English in various ways and had a chat with lots of friends who came from many different countries. As I was constantly using English, I was able to see me with an increased ability to speak in English.

I have been often hanging out with classmates after class. My friends and I took a stroll, tour the London's museums and built a meaningful memory by going restaurants where sell their national foods. I have always been so excited to be able to study English and exchange culture with many other foreign friends.

I applied culture exchange program in UAL and luckily, it was accepted, so I took an English class on this summer vacation. On the first day, we had a level test to check our English skill and assign a class at proper level. After test, we had an orientation. The test contained writing and speaking. There were five level of classes and I was assigned to the second highest class.

In my class, there were various nationalities such as Korean, Japanese, Thai, Brazilian, Spanish, French, Hong Konger, Taiwanese and Colombian. My teacher was Andrew who is an English man. He helped us to get to be friends. Every morning, he made us to tell about what I did yesterday and how it was with classmates. Thanks to his effort, we became close easily. So, it was not very difficult to adapt to the class.

The class always started at 9 am. Then we shared story of yesterday each other, and Andrew started to teach us. We studied English by a book, newspapers, journals, videos and etc. It was great experience to improve my English skills. Also, Andrew taught us English by phonetic alphabet. Generally, the most of Korean learn English for American style, so it was quite different with English style. It was so confused but interesting to find difference between both of them. For example, when American people and English people read 'can't', it sounds differently. And there was a funny event in our class, so I want to tell you about this story. One day, in the class, my teacher wrote some sentences on the white board. But, some of us found teacher's mistake. He wrote 'mum', and we realized he had to change 'u' by 'o'. So, we told him our opinion, but he didn't understand. Because 'mum' is English style and 'mom' is American style. He has never written 'mom' before. It was very shocking story for us. Like this, it was very interesting to learn about the original English.

Also, we had the day field trip twice. First trip was to visit famous buildings in London. Teacher gave us some mission which were finding several buildings ourselves and getting some information of them to ask other people without using our phones. There were four people in our group; two of Japanese, one of Thai and me, Korean. At first, it was little difficult to communicate each other, but we shared some of funny stories and each country's cultures. Luckily, I have ever been to Japan 4 times and Thailand once, so it was not very difficult to talk with them. Also, they like Korean foods, K-pop, and even they have ever travelled to Korea, so it wasn't boring to talk with them absolutely. It was very valuable experience for me, because it was the first time that I travelled with foreign friends. I've never had similar experiences. It still remains in my memory very impressively.

In UAL, I made many of foreign friends. My teacher, Andrew emphasized and induced us to talk many each other. So, we became to get closer and closer while we shared each stories. Communicating with foreign friends became a routine in my daily life and I think it was very effective to improve my English skills. Andrew told us, "Don't be shy, just talking." I think it is very simple but the most important thing. Before I had class in UAL, I had thought too much whether it is grammatically correct when I spoke English. So, because of this habit, I couldn't focus on the conversation and it interfered with speaking fluently. This class helped me to find confidence to speak English. Even, I sometimes had lunch and went to the rock-festival with my foreign friends. They installed 'Kakao talk' to chat with me and we already followed each other in 'Instagram'. Although we finished the summer class in UAL, we often give and take some text. The only sad thing is that this program was too short to learn much about English. But, I understand it is unavoidable because our vacation is too short. If I have more chance like this program, then I will apply to them without hesitation. This summer won't be forgotten in my whole life. It already became one of the most invaluable experiences for me.

It was my first visit to London. Through this program, I had many experiences. First, I took a general English 15 course at University of the Arts London. In my class, there are 14 students from Korea, Japan, China, Switzerland, Brazil, Thailand, Malaysia. The class is from 9 A.M to 12 P.M. We focused on speaking and had some weekly topic such as food, fashion, culture so that I had many chances for talking with other country students and knew the culture of other country. Speaking with them is very hard at start. I could not recall proper words for some situation which I describe and I could not listen the pronunciation of the others (they said 'H' as 'hatch'). However, as time was gone, I became more fluent, and was confident. As a result, I had a many interaction & party with them and was familiar with them. They are my first foreign friends and can not forget the time with them. On the last day, we had a class party where each students brought some food from their own country. On the table, there were many things such as British sandwich, Swiss chocolate, Japanese juice, laver, French Pie (Korean snack), and Chinese candy. It was very interesting that our teacher likes laver very much. This class is one of the best class in my life. I can not forget the time with my friends and my teacher, Vimi.

After class, I walked around the London. In London, there are many good museums, parks, musical theatres, and land marks. I went to many museums such as British Museum, London Museum, Kobold Museum, Science Museum, Natural History Museum, National Gallery, Tate Modern, Victoria & Albert museum. Specially, national Gallery and British Museum showed works of many other countries and provided Korean audio guide. From the guides, I heard many interesting things regarding the works like history, fable and environment. This picture is sunflower of Van Gogh.

Except museum, parks also is one of the most interesting things in U.K. Almost region has some parks. They are well managed and accommodate many English for jogging, hanging out, and resting. It is a common scene for people to lay down on grass and take a nap. I also took a nap in the parks. I went to many parks such as Regent Garden, Green park, Victoria park, Prime rose Hill, Hide park, Greenwich park and etc.

The first picture is the scene from Greenwich park. There are many land marks like queen's gallery, National Maritime Museum, old Greenwich observation, and etc. going Greenwich park was very interesting experience. The second picture is the night view from Prime Rose Hill. I can not forget the night view. The combination of night view of park and night view of city look excellent and beautiful.

Especially, the most impressive moment in London was seeing a musical. At first time, I register the UAL social program "seeing musical Aladdin" just for fun. I heard the West End musical was good, but I had not paid attention for musical. Since I have never seen any musical, I didn't have expectation. However, during showing Aladdin, I shocked from the stage effect, the proper make up, Production, and the songs of the actors/actress. I failed in love with musicals and I saw total 5 musical in London: Aladdin, Lion King, Matilda, Wicked, the Phantom of the Opera. According to me, the best musical is "The Phantom of the opera" because the songs and custom is perfect. This picture is the stage of Matila

Through this program, I improved my speaking and learned many culture from class and friends. Also, I had many good or new experience such as taking a nap in parks, seeing musical, going to museum, and traveling for a month. Every moment is good for me and excellent. I'm very thank you for making this program to UNIST and Officials.

From this Culture Exchange course, it was a big pleasure to visit London UAL. It changed my thought, and I could know various cultures from various people.

On the first weekend after I arrived London, I visited a LGBT parade named "Pride of London". I don't know the reason why the name is "Pride", but I thought that the fact that they are LGBT became shame to pride. The parade was like a festival, and many people participated in it. Of course, there were some people who oppose to the parade, but there are much more people enjoyed the parade. For this reason, I thought that London is the city which has a diversity. Also, there are many races in the city, and I was impressed that those people gather to form the city.

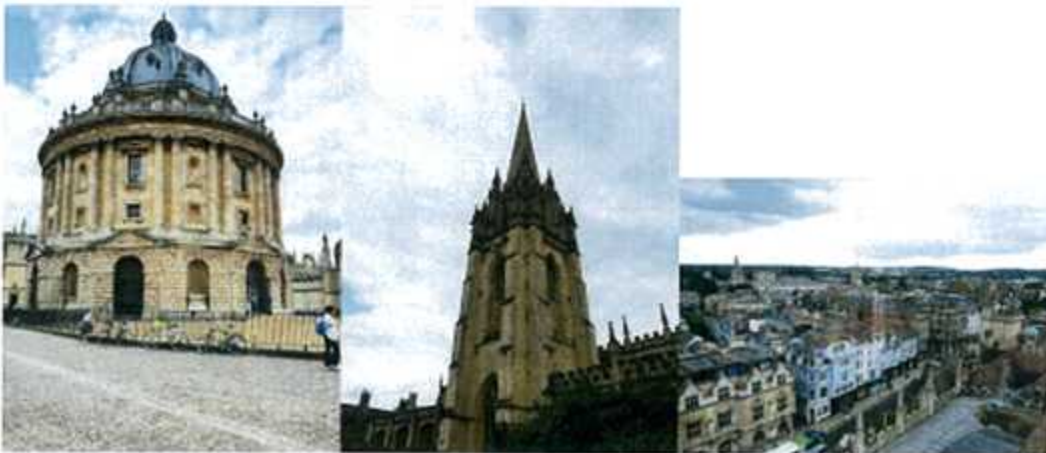

There are many museums which have a lot of artifacts and artworks in London. Also, since UAL is one of the most effective university in the fashion and the arts, there were many students who are studying arts and fashion in the language courses. I was very interested to meet some people studying other major (especially arts), unlike people in UNIST who study science and engineering. From visiting museums and meeting these friends, I could learn the artistic common sense and the history of arts. Also, in the British Museum, I could watch the artifacts in order of ages, so I also could study history, and in Tate Modern, I studied modern arts which I don't know well. However, the size of museums were so big that I could not see all of the collections.

London is one of the biggest cities in the world, and the United Kingdom is one of the greatest countries in the world. For these reasons, there are various tourist attractions in the UK. I visited some attractions after the class or during the weekends, and it was my big happiness living in London. The first place which I visited was Greenwich. Greenwich is very famous for meridian. Since it is the starting point of the time, it was very amazing. Then I visited Seven Sisters and Brighton. I saw a great view with beautiful ocean and great cliff in Seven Sisters. I didn't know this place, but I would regret if I did not visit, because it was so beautiful. Then, in Brighton, I saw Royal Pavilion which is the Indian styling building. It was very interesting because it was special experience to see various style of building. Next, I visited Oxford. Oxford is located in rural areas, so the style of buildings is more like British. Also, there is a very famous university in Oxford. The view of the town was very good, and I felt different from London. Finally, I visited Stonehenge and Bath. Stonehenge is one of Seven Wondering of the World, and one of the most famous attractions in the world. When I saw it, I thought that the size was not so big, but I wondered how they could bring the stone, because there was no place to bring such big stones. Bath is the town which has spa built in the past when Rome occupied England. Since Rome built the town, the view looked like Rome, and I thought it was very attractive. Also, there is Roman Bath which is the best preserved Roman baths. I was very happy to visit the place which I could see on just books, and I could learn more.

The class was very good. I thought the weakest point in English was speaking, but I could talk with many other foreign friends and enhance my English skill during the class. I thought that it was very good chance to study English and various culture, and I was so lucky to get the chance. Also, I was very happy to make some foreign friends. I will never forget this experience.

Culture exchange program of UAL was a great chance for me to increase my English abilities. Moreover, I could make many foreign friends and I can learn other countries' cultures as well as London's culture.

As a UNIST student, I took many courses in English, but through those courses, I could generally increase the listening and reading abilities. However, from the UAL course, I can also improve my speaking abilities a lot. At the first time, it was a little bit hard to express my ideas in English and explain them to my classmates. I could resolve this problem as I tried to talk a lot in English. I think this course gave me a great development since speaking and listening abilities are very important in this global era.

In my class, there were many Japanese, Chinese and Thais. Through the course, I can make a lot of foreign friends. Through the conversations and activities in the class, I can learn other cultures much. It was very interesting since the natural things in Korean culture can be very unnatural to other culture. Also I can realize that all countries have different cultures so that I should always keep in mind the cultural relativity to understand other cultures.

It was my first time to visit western countries so when I look around the London, I felt very amazed and easily found a lot of differences in architectures and daily lives. I thought that London kept the tradition very well and the harmony of the modern and tradition in architecture was very impressive. For the daily lives, there are a lot of beautiful parks in London and many people exercise and have a picnic on the weekend.

It seemed very leisurely and peaceful.

From this program, I felt and experienced many valuable things which I'll always keep in mind forever. It was one of the memorable events in my life. I really appreciated to my university since university supports me to take this program.

I went to University of Arts London on this summer vacation which is located in London, UK. First day, I went to UAL to register but the information about registration had some problem so most of people who tried to register got wrong information about it so we had to waste some time for it. Anyway, registration was quite clear after that happening and I met really great teacher who teaches English really well that I could concentrate more on it. I learned English in the classroom but I also learned English with trip. Our class went to The Tower of London to learn some history of UK and we had to get some information of this castle by ourselves like asking some people about it ages or etc.

This is the picture of the trip and people in the picture are classmates. Also, as a trip we went to quite many places which is quite historical and popular. Those were City hall, Shakesphere's globe which is rebuilt recently, Tate Modern which is design museum and National Theatre which is really huge and old. Below there are pictures of it and actually we had to walk a lot to see these all so that day I was really tired.

Therefore, I learned a lot about UK and also English a lot So it was really helpful for me and I was lucky to go here which makes me to go there again. I wish many other students in our school could go here like me and learn a lot.

I departed from Gimhae Airport on June 29 and arrived at Heathrow Airport. I bought a SIM and Oyster card for living in London and headed to London. The first impression of London, which I arrived two days earlier before class began for looking around and familiarize, was a relaxed and safe feeling. Cord Wainers Court, which I stayed at during the weekend, was the cheapest of the dorms, but it was a great place to stay, and the transportation to the school was very convenient. On July 2, I went to UAL campus near Kings Cross for orientation in anticipation of my first day at UAL. There, I learned how my class would be going, and I had the first meeting with faculty and students.

The first week of the 4 weeks was with Clare and the last 3 weeks with Vimi. The lessons with Clare were mainly speaking and group activities, but it was the first day that helped me to relax in an awkward atmosphere and naturally match up with my classmates. Although there were so many UNIST students in our class, there were many students from Taiwan, China, Switzerland, Japan, Brazil and Korea. The last lesson with Clare was to research and present London's famous markets. Therefore, I learned about London's many famous shopping streets and markets. As Vimi came in, we started to learn grammars and vocabulary in earnest through a textbook called 'Speakout'. We couldn't study all the contents with a short schedule of 3 weeks so we learned adjectives, phrasal verbs and if statements. First we studied with teacher about the lecture in the first class and after break we had group activity time to get familiar with the lecture in the second class. In Korea, I learned things once during high school, but it came to me differently in London. It was not American English that I used to be familiar with, and I felt that it was not a rigid class at the time of high school but a lot of difference in learning games and role playing. In the third week of classes, we had some time to study fashion, because UAL is schools for arts! I had a good time to ask students about their thoughts about fashion and to ask questions about fashion trends. The memorable activities were time to group and organize the topics we wanted, to investigate them, create posters, and present them. My friend who was with me is a friend of fine art, so I remember that the poster is very creative and looks crazy for me. During the three week class with Vimi, there were two museum field trips. We went to the Science Museum and the London Museum. As I'm a student who studies science the Science Museum was quiet interesting to me. The London Museum was not that fun for me, but it was quite interesting because of the work that the teacher gave me. What was interesting in each museum was a device that used alcohol to observe the movement of electrons and a alpha particles and a video which shows people's life in London in past days. I spent 4 weeks so shortly because I spent so busy days, I was so sad for breaking up with my new friends.

 When I go back to Korea I promise with UNIST friends to meet again, and say good bye with friends who would return to the rest of the world hoping to meet again someday.

Because there was only a class in the morning, I traveled around the main tourist attractions in the afternoon and on weekends with major tourist attractions in London. I have had various experiences in London, such as museums, landmarks, plazas, markets and streets. The National Gallery, Tower Bridge, Trafalgar Square, Camden market and Soho Street are most memorable places. I felt The National Gallery as similar to the National Gallery of Korea. I was impressed by the exhibition of new artists by National Portrait Gallery.

as grand as expected and the night view was really nice. There were so many shops from Soho Street to Trafalgar Square, the prices were cheap, and M & ms and LEGO stores were fun and memorable. Camden market is a market with lots of goth and cyber concept stores, which was the most interesting place in London.

I traveled to various parts of London around Oxford,

Brighton, Solisbury, and Bath. It was interesting that Oxford had a quiet, academic atmosphere and few traffic lights on the street. Brighton was one of my favorite cities and nightmares on my trip around London. Brighton's atmosphere was like a holiday town right by the sea. There was a coastal cliff called Seven Sisters, which was a beautiful scenery. But I lost my cellphone on the trip so I lost every pictures I took in the class. Solisbury was a town that I could hear to go to Stone Henge, but it felt like a small village with a small river.

Stonehenge did not come with greater impression than I thought, but the weather was so good that it makes the trip happy. I also had a barbecue party with my new friends, but it was a very special experience with students from 8 countries. Each of them brought their own country food. It was surprising that foreigners surprisingly enjoyed Kimchi. I felt really safe during the trips than I thought before and the weather was so nice during the 4 weeks so I'll never forget these memories in the UK.

After end of the first semester of the junior, which was the hardest part of my life, I spent 3 days free and soon I arrived in Incheon airport. I was not used to traveling with my friends for 55 days and I was a bit scared because there wasn't a leader. But there must be different charm compared to trip with my family. Our travel route was largely divided into three. During the first 10 days, we will travel to Turkey, Austria, Czech Republic and Germany. And then, we will stay in the UK for a month to learn English. After the course, we will take a 20-day tour, Spain, France, Italy, Switzerland and Germany.

Finally, on June 19 at 12:50, I got on a flight to Turkey. I felt the time in the airplane was very slow so read some books. But it was useless. After arriving in Turkey, we traveled very busy around the each country's attractions for ten days. Because it was the beginning of our first European trip, so we were very enthusiastic compared to the time of writing this document, exactly now.

The scenery of the first destination, Turkey was similar to my imagination. The feeling was like Korea 20 years ago as a whole, including the bustling streets, the smoldering cigarette smoke and inefficient traffic. So it was a very hard trip, but too many things to see comfort my mind and body. Also, the thing that I liked the most is that you can eat delicious kebabs and steaks with only about 10,000 won! Certainly cheap prices are good for attracting people.

However, these sceneries hid themselves in Austria, the second destination. I already knew that Austria is famous for classic music, so I somewhat expected that they has classical style and elegant mood. But I was embarrassed to a lot of change of scenery compared to Turkey. When I walked street and listened to opera and classical music, I could feel the splendor and elegance of European classical times. The ribs that I ate in Austria were delicious enough to be sure that it was one of the best meals I've ever had.

This mood gradually diminished as we moved to our third destination, the Czech Republic. When I saw the city of Czech at first, I thought it feels like 'old Austria'. Old-fashioned but busier people, old streets and buildings were very impressive. Also, the prices cheaper than Turkey have been fascinating to me. I bought a large beer can for 600 won and a 1.5L beverage for 1,500 won. Also the Czech beer variety was as good as I had heard. This was similar to the hotel, so I was able to book a clean and spacious hotel with a little money. So I think I was able to travel relatively not tired.

Germany, the last destination before going the UK, has significantly increased its modern buildings compared to the previous three countries. We traveled to Berlin and Hamburg, and the scenery of both cities seemed to have moved Seoul and Busan to overseas. Berlin has a lot of museums and historical sites, so I felt that two days was too short to know the city Berlin. Hamburg, on the other hand, had a lot of big rivers and fountains. There were also a lot of luxurious buildings like the city hall in Hamburg. During staying in Hamburg, Korea won 2: 0 in the World Cup to Germany. As soon as the game was over, I heard a glass break and a scream, and we were so scared that canceled some of my original travel plans. So it was a little bit harder than the previous trips, but the food and beer in Germany was enough to offset it. Especially try to eat the German-style pendulum called 'Schweins Haxen'! I think it is really good food to eat with beer

During these ten days, time to take a culture exchange course was coming. I entered the UK before three days and traveled to various attractions throughout the UK. As traveling many attractions, it certainly seemed that Britain was heavily influenced by the Industrial Revolution. In other European countries, most of the buildings tend to keep traditional style, but not in the UK. In fact, there are quite a lot of skyscrapers when we went to the Sky Lounge. Unfortunately, unlike these modern buildings, subway is very old. It was very narrow and there was not even air conditioner, so it was too hot during the move, and the moving sound was too loud to hear the announcement. Also, in the station near our school, there were so many people that it took about 5 minutes to get out of the station. So I took the bus after two days. I couldn't bear it!

But apart from that, the scenery of London made me fascinated. The River Thames and attractions surrounding the river seem to express well past and present of London. The night view of the London Eye, Big Ben, Tower Bridge and City Hall near the river was enough to attract a lot of tourists. Also, the most impressive thing was that there were so many museums, like British Museum, Natural History Museum, National Portrait gallery, National gallery and so on. Especially the most impressive place was the National Portrait gallery. I went there with my foreign friends and was amazed at the Michael Jackson Gallery! Whenever I watch a movie about him with his fans and several works of art based on him, I always felt how much Michael Jackson had influenced contemporary music. Also, the Museum of Natural History has a lot of contents related to science such as animals, celestial bodies, earth science, jewels, and so on. In addition, the night view of London at Primrose Hill and the Greenwich Observatory was very impressive. Sometimes I traveled from London to other cities and I went to the cliff seven sisters in southern England. It was so creepy! The vast mountains and plains seen from the huge cliffs have forgotten the expensive transportation costs and the hot weather. Also, the sheep playing happily in the lake on the way to the cliffs were very pretty.

And the course I learned in UAL was much better than I thought. Content was the middle school level however thanks to speaking through the various activities and games, English skills seemed to be rise a little and could speak confidently. At first I was worried that I would be assigned to another class with my friends so I wonder I could adapt to the class. Because of my personality, it is difficult to get along with people who I don't know and it takes a lot of time to adapt. However, the courses in UAL were not the rigid lessons like in middle school and high school. Sometimes I talk about fashion or have to go to places with some friends where I want to go and explain where I go. Also, twenty passages and mafia game in English were fun. Especially I was impressed with the Michael Jackson Gallery mentioned above. I visited the gallery together with two Japanese friends, I ate delicious food, learned a little Japanese, and had never experienced anything before. There were quite a few Koreans talking with foreign friends at school cafes even after classes had been made up of talking to each other. Also, on the last day of class, I went to a Japanese restaurant with foreign friends and had a delicious lunch and went to a cafe and talked together. However, the meeting cannot last forever. As soon as the course was over, we were busily moved to Spain. I was very sad to part from my foreign friends, so I had a good conversation to the night with a drink before we left London, but the sad mood doesn't disappear easily. Was I such a sensible person? Because I didn't exchange contacts well before left, so I thought my feeling was doubled.

In the traveling after England, I was more tired than the first and places were mostly on the coast so rather than traveling to many tourist destinations, I felt a strong sense of well-being with watching the scenery. As I continued to do this, my stereotypes about travel seem to be broken up gradually. I thought the trip was traveling busily around tourist destination, but I think it is not too bad to look on the beautiful beaches and people living in the city with a relaxed mind. Now it is the way to Switzerland. The trip was only five days left, but the trip was not over yet. I will spend more time on the rest of the trip so that I can remember that it is a good trip when I look back on this trip later.

3rd July, 23 Heddon St

One of my favorite music artists, David Bowie's masterpiece album 'The Rise and Fall of Ziggy Stardust and the Spiders from Mars'. It's album cover is left of above picture which is actual place in 23 Heddon street, London. So I visit there and took a picture so that the picture's composition is as similar as possible with the album's.

3rd July, Here was Berwick street Soho London where it is famous for the album cover of the Morning Glory, Oasis. Also I visited the record shop which sales various English music CD album and vinyl album also. I bought the 'Physical Graffiti' Led Zeppelin'

6th July, Pink Floyd is one of my favorite band also. As soon as I've gotten the fact that Roger Waters who is central musician in Pink Floyd will have a concert in Hyde Park, I reserved a ticket. The left of above picture is a moment when he was playing the album 'Animals' which is about criticism of capitalism. Pigs represent the rich and dogs represent the workers or citizen. If you see a right upper of above picture, can see that the pig symbolizes Donald Trump. The stage is decorated like a power plant which is the album cover of 'Animals' and actual place in London. Also I visited that power plant Battersea Power Plant and left a picture which is right lower of above picture in 12nd July.

10th July, I went Seven sisters in Brighton. It's seven white cliffs which show the greatness of nature and average height is 60m. Since the weather was good, we could enjoy the grandeur of the great nature. I must have died if I fall from the cliff to take above of left picture.

15th July, I went the Buckingham Palace and saw the change of guards. The day was the day which is scheduled the final game of world cup, I went a bar with foreign friends from UAL and UNIST and had great time.

8th July, I went the Cambridge University especially Trinity College. There was a tree known as offspring of Newton's apple tree in left of above picture. The right of above picture is mathematics bridge. I saw a bridge known as bridge of sighs. It's known that the students who just finished their math exam was all sighing in this bridge because the exam was too difficult though I don't have the picture of it.

and so expelled the science revolution.

19th July, I went the National Portrait Gallery which has various people's portrait is exhibited. I saw the portrait of Elizabeth I who defeated the Spanish Armada Invincible and open the first way of Great British and is loved by all of the British people. It's left of left picture. I also saw my favorite person, Isaac Newton who introduced the central concept of classical mechanics, calculus 20th July, I went to the National Gallery, London UK. I could see the overall historical flow of the art skills, since art is well related with science, science is similar with art. So it's very interesting that the middle age's art couldn't go beyond the religion itself but as time goes, in Renaissance age, artists started to express more real and progressed just like science. In the National Gallery, I could see not only the process between middle ages and renaissance but also after the renaissance, baroque, Rococo and there were very famous works like Gogh's Chair and Cezanne's Bathers.

It was wonderful time in London. I met many foreign friends who came from Japan, Thailand, Italy, China, Great Britain. In class, we used to talk about some questions that we could know each other through. Also, I made more questions about their culture, language by asking and answering about free questions. Especially, there were many students studying about arts. So, I was interested in talking about music, painting, design with them. When the program was going to finish, my thai friend gave me a picture that I was painted on.

Like that, our classmate were very funny and nice. On program period, it was a birthday of classmate. So, we celebrated him together.

In London, I used to eat world food with friend. The most memorable lunch were Japanese and Korean meal with my Japanese friend, shuhei. He is 18 years old and studying about design. He was my class partner. So, I talked with him very much. By talking about life in London, we wanted to eat each other's country's food. Because we didn't satisfy English food. Therefore, we made two meeting, one for Korean lunch and the other for Japanese lunch. We ate 삼겹살, 비빔밥 in Korean restaurant and sushi in Japanese restaurant. It was very interesting to talk about Japanese food with Japanese friend.

This picture is him in Japanese restaurant.

London was the city where I wanted to go. I visited some landmark of London like Tower Bridge, London Eye. Also, there were many kinds of museums and galleries that I was able to experience another world like Tate modern, British museum. Tate modern was a gallery that my classmate studying about design recommended to me. I saw many artistic working that show me the social issue in those days like racism

But, my best place in England was Seven sisters, Cliffs located in Brighton. I was surprised at wideness of nature. The sky was clear, the ocean was blue, and the cliffs were white. The combination of color was beautiful.

Finally, the best part of this program was improving my English. Always, I was afraid of speaking in English. But I could overcome it. I tried to say something as much as possible. For example, when my classmates didn't understand what teacher said, I helped them to understand. As time goes, the vocabulary and grammar were being accustomed. The delayed time for thinking about ways to speak was getting shorter, and my sentences were getting more exact. Additionally, I learned about differences between British English and American English. Because I like British accent, It was good reason that made me pay attention to the class.

I got English education in UAL for 4 weeks. The quality of the lessons was very good overall, and there was a lot to learn from the lessons and lessons. On the first day level test I received the upper mediate level. Certainly, because I received a lot of grammar education in Korea, the grammars that I learned in that place were easily felt. If it was difficult, it was talking. But when I saw that the free atmosphere, the encouragement of the teacher, and the many students from other countries worked hard despite the hard feelings, I also practiced speaking very hard. As a result, in the middle of the class, the teacher assessed that I had made good progress.

I have come across many cultures besides classes. There were occasional trips during the school program, and many other trips with friends. First, in case of school trip, we encountered many buildings in the city of London. The process was not through the internet, but directly to the locals, and it was a really good time. Next, I traveled around the city with my friends outside of class. London was late in the year. Thanks to that, I could go safely to the park after a day of work, and I was able to watch the sunset with ease.

I also participated in class. I was absent during the 4-week session and unfortunately the attendance rate was 95%. Overall the experience in the UK was good. I would like to thank you for all of this, thanks to the school that gave me the opportunity. Certainly, with this experience, my vision has widened and the world has become more visible.

Relationship with international friends

While studying in the UK ual, I was able to meet many friends of various nationalities. It was my first experience in my life and it was a special challenge. At first I was nervous and afraid of having to communicate in English, but as I talked more and more I felt that I became a true friend with them. They came to me without hesitation, and I was able to build many memories together. We went shopping together, walked around the park, ate ice cream, and students from various nationalities gathered for a barbecue party. They were all amazingly kind and thoughtful, and I no longer have the fear of communicating in English and reluctant to meet people afterwards. In addition, most of my schools majored in theology, but my friends in England had diverse majors. A friend who majored in fine arts, a friend who majored in design, a friend who majored in language, and a friend who majored in marketing.... I was able to meet a larger world when I was with people in various fields and I was able to think through them more broadly.

Experience in London

I stayed in London for a month, but I was always able to do something new. London was a city that was so big I could not imagine, and it always flooded with fresh places.

- Musical

During my stay in the UK, I was able to see two musicals, Lion King and the phantom of the opera. I was worried that I could understand the musical in English, but it was a great experience beyond my imagination. Since the British theater was built for one musical, one of the buildings itself was the best of what I experienced so far. The performances of the actors and the flowing music all went live, and the trepidation I felt there was difficult to express in words. Particularly in the case of the Lion King, actors express their roles through their own disciplines, it was also a very shocking and tremendous experience because they were able to manipulate the doll while acting. I could feel the unusual feeling that there was not in Korea.

- Museum & Gallery

There are countless museums and art galleries in London. If I were in Korea, I often went to museums and museums that I would not have gone to. As a general admission fee was free, and without entrance fees, I was able to feel the history, tradition and culture of many countries in the museum, and in the museum, I was able to try to interpret the works of art in the characteristics and difficulty of the art works of the ages. In particular, the British Museum, one of the world's three largest museums, was so big that I could not see it all day and visited it many times. It was the most meaningful experience to be able to see and study things and works that I saw only in textbooks.

- Activity & Trip

Sometimes I wanted to leave London and go on a trip to the suburbs. So I used to go for a walk in big and small parks in London. The park in England has a very different atmosphere from Korea. It was really wide and it was full of quiet and secluded parks where you can take a nap with fruits and drinks under the shade of a big tree and see the various squirrels and goose vegetation. I could see local people enjoying a picnic there, jogging in a training suit, or riding a bicycle. The park, which was able to cushion me from the complexity of the city, was a hidden jewel to me. I traveled to London as well as to London. The trip to Cambridge and Brighton was a place that was so beautiful to save lives in London. In particular, the Seven Sisters Cliffs in Brighton was a tremendous experience that made me feel the grandeur.

This was my first chance to learn English abroad. I did an English level test on the first day. I expected an intermediate level, but I got a higher level. It was a little burden for me. Next day, I could meet my classmate. The nationality was very diverse, including Southeast Asia even Spain, France and Brazilian friend. Even the ages were very varied ranged from 17 to 40 and the job was interesting. So most of those friends came to London to learn English professionally and spent almost eight months or more. The 4 weeks program I applied was very short.

I was surprised because UAL's system was more systematic than I thought and over the course of 4 weeks I was able to learn only a small part of the UAL instructional program. Before I went to London, I thought about the lack of English and it was a vocabulary. And I felt this bigger by talking with foreign friends. All the students came to learn English, so if I am confident when I speak, the conversation atmosphere is bright. However when I was not able to understand the vocabulary, the conversation was interrupted so I had to find out and memorize it every time. So my class teacher, Andrew also advised me how about talking with my Korean friends in English every 20 minutes every day at the private consultation time. He told me that it would be helpful if I know the words I used in everyday life I don't know well ever. Like this, my teacher was passionate about us and the class atmosphere was active, so I seemed to be able to adapt easily.

The most intense lessons were speaking, but the most impressive class was outdoor activities. We did outdoor classes once every two weeks, and this is our first activity picture.

The purpose of this activity was to find out more about London by visiting five places of interest near the UAL and asking each person about their name, date of establishment and purpose of use not using internet. Unlike most of the information I found on my smartphone when I traveled from one area to another, including directions, this time was a totally different experience because I asked people and got all the information. The most memorable place is the fourth picture. I do not remember the name now, but unlike the surrounding buildings, the design was very distinctive and sophisticated in shell-like form. So I came back here again later.

We talked to other partners every day during the speaking activity time. What I especially noticed was that the friends of each nationality had slightly different intonation and pronunciation. What I learned new was that the English speakers are very vocal about the T-tone or they use a lot of silence. So I felt knowing grammar or vocabulary did not make all the conversation well. In this case I felt that when I was interrupted in the middle of the conversation, I can smile a little or postpone my face to make the conversation naturally.

She is Japanese in the picture and when we had a speaking time in the class, I could know that she had a lot of interest in Korea. She told me that she was learning Taekwondo since she came to London in February. She also said she visited Korea about 10 times!! Because of this, I was particularly friendly with her, shared each life in London, and had a lot of conversations with her through SNS. I think it was an opportunity for Andrew to practice what he advised at private consultation time. When will I have a chance to have an SNS conversation in English now? Personally, I think that cultural exchange programs are much more beneficial not only to study English, but also to aim for a greater purpose in hanging out and sharing life with friends of various nationalities.

The month at UAL was the happiest moment of my life. It was a memorable memory for a lifetime and it was good to be able to make many friends. It was a great opportunity to improve my lack of English skills and experience a different culture from Korea. On the first day or the first week in England, I tried to adjust to the culture here and then I was able to live in the locals and have a pleasant life. It is a blessing to be able to experience other cultures and I thank the school for giving me this opportunity. I think the most memorable part of my life in England is the people I met in this area. All the friends I met in England were always nice and kindly informed about their culture. I think I will be able to go back to UNIST with the improved English skills and discover myself better. A month in England was a chance to look back on my life and I was able to feel the abundance of life. Thank you again for this opportunity.

We are 4 members in UK. We visited to the London bridge and take a pictures on it.

The weather is really great!

This is the street where so many peoples are walking here. Surprisngly, we can find a Korean restaurant and market in here. And we can see lots of performance here.

Also our house is close to the borough market where various cultures are exist, we frequently visited here.

This restaurant called flat iron which sells really delicious steak.

Also, we ate Japanese ramen close to our UAL. Cost is quite expensive but taste is great.

This bridge is the place where the middle of our home and UAL.

We can see river in here everyday.

The experience in UK is almost really great. People are kind for me and the teacher is really great to improve my English skills. Also classmates are really nice. Additionally the places are really interesting and the weather is totally lucky for our travel. The foods are really tasted although the cost is quite expensive. If I have chance to go UK in future, I must go there.

I studied English at UCLA for 4 weeks as the culture exchange program. As I have only studied English for the exam, I was not good at English. So I joined this program because I wanted to improve my English skills. I could learn about not only English but also the culture of Japan, Taiwan, China, Turkey and America in here. I made many unforgettable memories and learned English in my daily life. Thank you so much for the UNIST that supported this great program, the UCLA teachers who really devoted themselves to me, and the friends who made me good memories.

Before this program, I was worried about going abroad alone and difficulty of communication. I wanted to solve these problems, so I decided to participate this program.

UCLA was different from the universities I used to see in Korea, and using English everywhere was a new experience. The weather was nice and the places in America that I saw every weekend were good.

< UCLA

In this program, I met many other country friends. I had to communicate with them by English and this reduced the fear of speaking English. This was the biggest achievements I had in this program. But the lessons in this program were not satisfactory enough. Despite the high tuition fee, the contents of the class were hard to find better than those of middle and high school.

This program was a good place to talk with foreigners in English for a month, but without a scholarship, I think it is not a good program to participate in.

Staying in the U.S. for a month, I was confident about staying abroad and talking in English, and I could make good friends. This is a very good experience and I never forget this.

I participated the Intensive English Communication Program in UCLA Extension American Language Center. At the first class, we took a level test and chose two classes for morning class and a class for afternoon class. There were Culture, Academic, and Business choices for morning and Discover LA and Spoken Communication choices for afternoon. I chose Culture, Academic, and Spoken Communication.

books and certification

In culture class, with teacher Adam, firstly, we saw America TV shows, the Big Bang Theory and the modern family, learning some words and expressions in the show. We also discussed some questions related to the shows. Actually, I am the huge fan of the Big Bang theory and the modern family, so it was most interesting time to me. Before the class, I just watched that show for entertaining, but I knew that my hobby can be also helpful for learning English. It was so meaningful me. Secondly, we learned some idioms about agreeing and disagreeing, communicating, and feeling. Through using those expressions, my fluency went forward to better level. Also, we saw TED video about a robot sidekick. There were many chances to sharing my opinions and thoughts. Lastly, we did free talking a lot by playing games like bingo. Therefore, I could easily get along with classmates due to talk to all people in the class. Especially, I became close to two Japanese students who were in my table and went to Santa Monica and the Jazz concert.

Japanese friends Chika and Fusae

In academic class, with teacher Kathy, there were many chances to discuss about many topics like superstition, traditional values and so on with my group. Teacher always tried to rotate people for making different kind of groups, so the class became much interested. We also watched the movie 'groundhog day' enjoying talking in English. We always did different kind of games to know each other and learn cultural differences. In addition, we did acting in front of the class using the lines we wrote. We could use our imaginations and talents at the presentation. Lastly, in the survival English part, we learned expressions about food and money that we can use in our daily life. All of the classes in this session was good, but the most interested class was this class because I really enjoyed all kind of discussions and group activities. Moreover, teacher gave us homework for speaking to native American. It was the most challenging and important homework. I think I will really miss my teacher.

Julie and Kathy

In afternoon class, we had two teacher Ben and Julie. Ben focused on a pronunciation and Julie focused on a grammar. Ben was really fun teacher, so we can correct our pronounce in easy, funny way. I think my pronunciation is much better than before! Julie talked about many grammars especially present perfect. The most helpful part of this program was that I knew how present perfect is commonly used in real native people lives. Teacher told us the way to speak English good is to think like natives. It was really helpful. For final project, I had a presentation with my two teammates for 15 minutes. We talked about fashion especially favorite brand, hair style, and ideal men's style for subtopics. The presentation in front of the crowd was not harder than before, and it made me realize I got better.

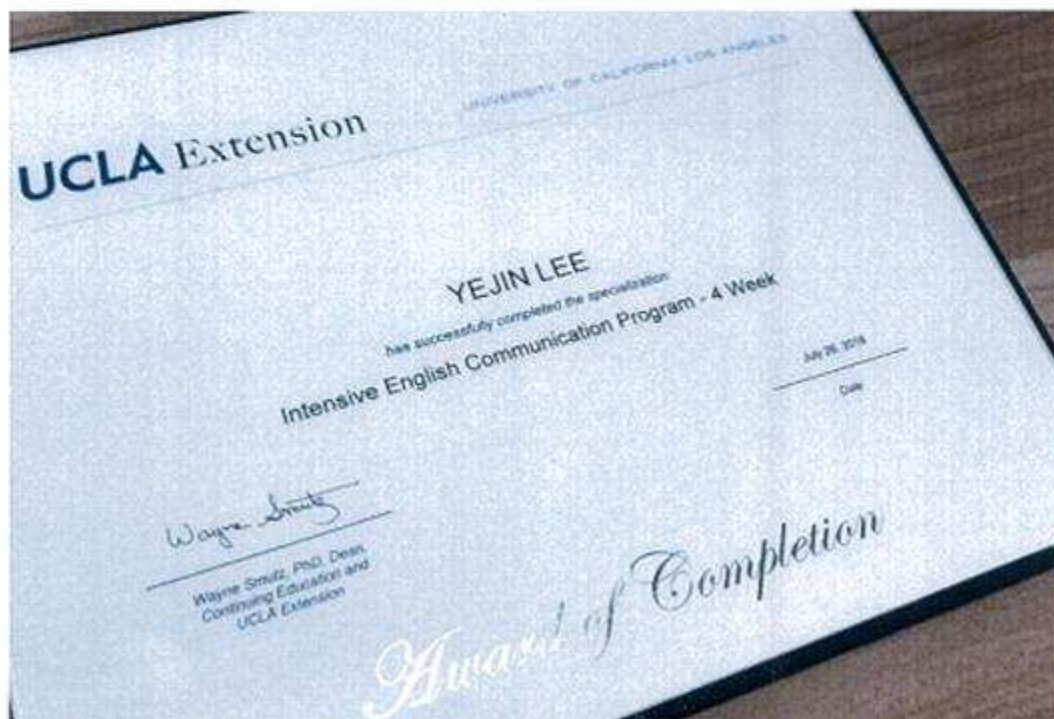

Before this program, what I wanted to achieve was a confidence in English. However, not only I get confident in my English and also I have many important and precious memory through this program. I also felt that Americans are all same people like us so I don't have to afraid of talking to them. It was my honor to live in the UCLA which is one of the top universities in the world and study in the UCLA extension American language center. It gave me unforgettable memories.

This summer, I took a course in UCLA. The courses that I took were Academic course, Culture course and Discover LA course. In Academic course, I could learn a lot of idioms, appropriate vocabulary. And in Culture course, I could learn not only American culture, but also other cultures of Japan, Taiwan, Russia etc. Finally, in Discover LA course, I could communicate with other people in English. We went to famous places in LA in group, interviewed American people, and made a video about that place. When I do that, I could share opinions with my friends using English. After taking a course, we shared our contact and we keep in touch now.

The main purpose of 'Culture exchange' was to develop my English skills. When I was young, I didn't realize that English was very important to me because I did not realize the importance of English and felt that academic ability such as mathematics and science was the most important thing. Of course, I have been studying English since elementary school, but honestly I felt a little bit of a barrier to the English at that time. Second purpose was to make foreign friends.

I worried that if I could achieve, finally I achieved both of above purposes in UCLA. At first, I could communicate only at least such as 'How can I get there?', or 'Where is the spoon?'. I entered the dormitory with anxiety about, "Can I live here well?". My roommate who I met at first was so great that I learned English so much from the roommate. And also my classmates were kind and friendly so I was able to adapt myself to my school classes very quickly. School meal was also very good, and I was satisfied with it. I explored many LA places, like Venice canal&beach, Getty Center and Hollywood, etc. Since that was my first travel of overseas, including L.A, so I was very amazed. My English communication skills were increased day by day as I talked with many foreign friends and teachers, and took English lessons. As a result, I got a satisfactory result for myself and went back to Korea. For 4 weeks in LA was an unforgettable and meaningful moment in my 21 years of life.

On Sunday, when was July 1st, I boarded a plane with excited mind. And I arrived at LAX on July 1st, afternoon. There was too hot, so I called a taxi and went to school. When I arrived at school, I can see a bear bronze statue which called it Bruin. In UCLA, the students called the name is Bruins. By tradition, when someone touches its nose, then the person's grade is becoming higher, so I touched bear bronze statue nose and took a picture with that. Next day, I visited the UCLA Lindbrook Extension to be guided to a future course and met new teachers and friends who are from other countries. After the course, I walked around the UCLA school for some school tour and visited the store.

Very impressive three things when I was in USA for me, first is Independence Day, second is Universal Studio amusement park, and third one is visiting Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County.

At first on USA, July 4th is Independence Day. On this day, there were very large fireworks in 7:00 P.M. so I went to the Santa Monica beach near the UCLA university. There were so many people playing in the ocean and the view was so great. I lent the bicycle and rode it nearby the beach. The sunset was wonderful. And then, at 7 o'clock, the fireworks were began. It was great because I never seen that size of fireworks before.

Second, I visited the Universal Studio amusement park. I visited here when I was in highschool student. But at that time, there was so little time that I couldn't play enough but this time, the park made new amusement park rides and lots of time so I could ride all of things. And also the final public performance was related with Harry Potter and it was great. I would forget that scene.

Final, I visited Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County. The museum as little bit expansive but it was as large as National Museum of Korea. At the entrance, I could see two dinosaur fossils one is herbivorous dinosaurs and the other is a meat-eating dinosaur fossils. It was very amazing and magnificent. The museum exhibited the history of the earth, humans, Los Angeles and alive animals. I spent over 4hours to see all of things in museum. I thought Korea should build Natural History Museum nearby the National Museum of Korea

From this cultural training, I learned about America's culture, nature and Americans thinking. The experience is nowhere in the world and I was so touched so I won't be forgot anymore.

<The report about UCLA IECP>

I completed four weeks of UCLA IECP.

The academy was a 30 minutes walks from the dormitory. The weather was so hot, and it was most difficult in this program to walk for an hour to listen IECP classes. The second hard thing is about ants. There are too many ants to live in my dormitory, So my roommate and I had to transfer to an emergency dormitory room and buy ants killer.

A simple level test was set my morning classes, and I was in the business class and the culture class. I applied for the academy class and the business class but I wasn't able to listen them because It could not open and there were only an academy / culture or business / culture.

And I applied for the Discover LA class at afternoon.

First of all, I wanted to go sightseeing because I have not seen anywhere in LA yet.

Second, most of the students of the IECP program were not native speakers, so I hoped to have more opportunities to interact with the locals than to communicate with them.

I think that the class itself was not bad.

The orange book is for the culture class, the tan color thing is for the business class and the yellow thing is for the Discover LA.

(1) Business lessons

A blonde female teacher named Fawsia taught me.

I was very surprised to exist student to come to class whose major is business.

There were a lot of lessons, but the thing that I remember the most was about 'Advertisement for the company'.

We had to create some items and make advertisement for that based on what we learned with team members. We decided to create 'A magic mirror' to set clothes for today. There were many ways to concentrate people such as the simplicity of Nike's logo or 'Just Do It', and also there were many ways to impress such as rhythm like McDonald's 'I lovin' in'. We named the item 'Smart Mirror' and then made the logo by mixing 'S' and 'M' alphabets. Based on our poster, we presentation our item to audience. It seemed to be more impressive because it was a direct activity class and the lesson which had to make the result based on what we learned.

(2) Cultural instruction

Ben, a tall teacher, taught me.

We studied American drama, 'Modern Family' to study American culture in general, 'Slang' in the American language, or studied idioms used in everyday life.

The most impressive thing in the culture class was the 'Slang' survey which was done every first class. I have been studying various 'Slang' through this class, and I was surprised. Most my school professor used the word, 'Pop quiz' (They often said 'this class has Pop quiz 20%' in their class.) But I have been listening to this word a lot and have not even thought that this word is 'Slang'. I thought English was permeating our everyday lives.

The second thing was to study the use of idioms before IECP graduation. I expressed the regret that I had to leave the United States or the joy of completing the lesson safely with the words 'Blowing hot and cold' or 'On the air'.

(3) Discover LA

A female teacher called Erika taught me.

We visited 4 places in total, 'The Getty Center', 'Venice Beach', 'Hollywood' and 'LACMA'.

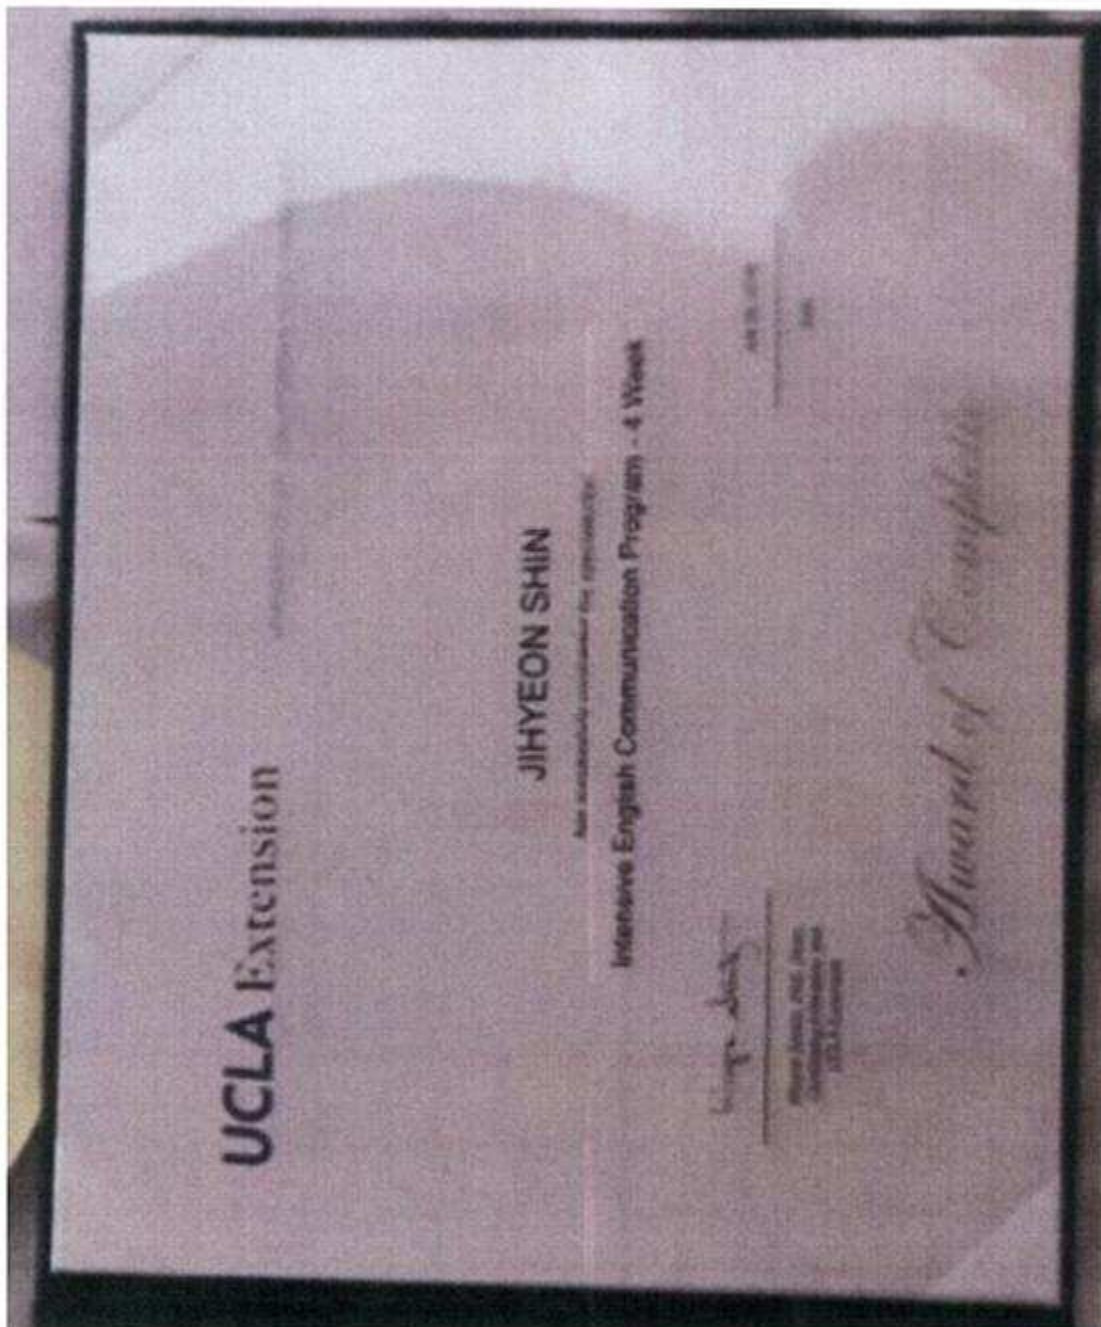

The best place was 'Hollywood' and the most impressive activity was an interview with local people at Venice Beach. It was good that we were able to meet local tourists at random and share various stories with them. 'Venice Beach' is so pretty that I went surfing with my friend again.

I was able to return to Korea after finishing my lessons safely. There were many twists and turns, but it was nice to be able to meet many friends including Japanese Chika and Fusae. It was good to be able to learn various American culture as well as the program name 'Culture Exchange'. Also I think that my English ability also improved!

My name is Dahun Lee. I had studied 4 at UCLA Extension for 4weeks taking IECF class. I was in intermediate class culture and academic in the morning class. Also, I was in intermediate spoken communication class in afternoon class. I can choose two of academic, business and culture in the morning. In afternoon class, I can choose spoken communication or Discover LA. Every Monday and Wednesday, I took culture class. Every Tuesday and Thursday, I took academic class. All classes were focused on communication. All most every class, we discussed with my group and talked to other groups or talked to many students in my class. There were 19 students in each class. In my class, there were 7 Korean, 5 Taiwan, 5 Japan, 1 Brazil and 1 Russia students. There were many Korean students and all of them come from UNIST. In the morning class, we watched short America drama such as modern family and Big bang theory. After watching drama, we learned vocabulary, idioms and grammar. Also, we did Kahoot which was vocabulary quizzes. We entered the website and chose answer for each question. The website gives points to everyone, so we can know who got the highest score. Also, we can talk to each other wearing headphone. We talked about 10minures to one person. We talked based on the question form which was related to grammar. In Afternoon class, class was focused on pronunciation and grammar. At last week, we had to do presentation. It was not a personal presentation, but it was group presentation. 3 people did presentation about 10minutes. Our topic was sport. We talked about popular sport in Korea, Japan and international. Also, favorite sport, player and sports we want try. We can talk to each other more preparing presentation. So, we could get much closer than before.

All classes were done from Monday to Thursday except first and second week. At weekday, I took classes and sometimes went to famous places like Korean town, Santa Monica Beach. However, at weekends Friday of 3week, I went to many places. At first week, I went to Universal Studio Hollywood, Hollywood street and Griffith Observatory. At second week, I went to Caltech, the Getty center, the Grove and staples center. At third week, I went to Disneyland and LACMA. In addition, I went to LA grand park to see fireworks at Independence Day. I studied hard and participated at class actively, also I can go many places in LA. I can not only study but also visit many famous places in LA. Also, about 4weeks, I can experience America culture. It was quite different from what I expected. First, people were so kind. In some case, people in LA were more kind than Korea. Second, weather was so good. Its sky was blue, not wet. It a wonderful weather except hot sunshine at 12~4pm. At night, weather was different from daylight. At night, weather was cool to walk on the campus at night. I could see a night view of UCLA, scene was nice contrary to daylight. The buildings of UCLA were beautiful and different from UNIST. Almost every building was covered by bricks.

My goal in studying UCLA was to study hard at weekday especially Monday to Thursday and enjoy at weekends. I think the class of UCLA was helpful although it was only 4weeks.

Especially, pronunciation class was the most helpful class to me. It was great experience to study at UCLA and lived about 4 weeks in America.

I listen in

For me, English is very difficult and very tired language. English have always been bothering me. That's why I decide to listen English class in UCLA.

My English speaking began when I should Prepare visa to go to USA. I had English interview (Fortunately, interview was very easy.)

I bought airplane ticket which leave on June 26th and arrive on August 18th. I made up my mind to travel a month to the US after finish UCLA exchange program. Because I visited USA when I was high school student, until now I can't forget excitement that felt in USA. And future, I will study or get a job in another country. So I think it was great chance for me.

The plan was good however many something that I couldn't control happened. For example, I forgot my wallet in the airport, my phone was broken, I felt down to ride a bike, I missed my airplane.... Haha.... However, I don't regret my choice. I learned many things in this trip.

Go to USA!!

I will tell about UCLA. UCLA is very beautiful university school and big. Distance between Hedirc hall (which I lived) and class (which I listened in) is long, so It takes 30 minutes on foot.

And there are many various people and They respect each other personality. In our school is divided into two groups. Foreigners or not. But UCLA, everybody mix. It looks nice.

UCLA can't be talked school cafeterias. The cafeterias were amazing! There had a wide variety of foods which are delicious. All were good, Deseret was best I think. I worried about my weight while I studied in UCLA.

Finally, I felt freedom in UCLA. I think it same anywhere in USA too. In Korea, We obsess grouping people. We say "our" family, "our" school, "our" country... It is good at relationship. But I feel tired. Some people are often crossing private line. And they don't know why it is big problem. And we don't understand peoples who are different with general characteristic.

I didn't fell always good thing in UCLA. But I won't write that.

First day We had a test to assign class. I very nervous so I couldn't do well. My level was the lowest in this program. I learned about what to say when I first met a person. Example, "Nice meet you? Nice meet you too." I know This is very important. But It is so easy to me. I requested test which to upgrade my classes. After test, (They observed my attitude in class) I could change my afternoon classes. Class changed is more interesting than first. We made a team with other countries friends and prepared project. Actually, I don't think that I learned very difficult and special something. The class was very similar to high school English class. Consider the expense of school fees, Private lesson in Korea which is payed same money is better to study English. So I focused on speaking with another countries peoples, I can learned many things which I can't know in Korea.

First, importance of English. UNIST is also that we should speak English. But it is "should" not "must". In UCLA I had to use English to make foreign friends. I realized the importance of English. Korea is very small countries compared to USA. (Even one state in USA is bigger than Korea) If I want to go to world, English is essential. I have always heard English's importance. But I didn't realize. Here (USA), I really want to say my condition and connection with other using English. I think it is very important things I learned.

Second, pronunciation. I don't consider about pronunciation. Because Korean can understand my pronunciation. But here, even simple words like "school" "find", We couldn't understand each other! I can read, I can listen but I can't speak! There was one consolation though, I am not afraid of speaking English. Rather, I was afraid that in Korea to mind another student. But here, I am foreigner. I can hold my head up. This attitude helped me to learn. It was very difficult. I worry How can I learn pronunciation after leave USA.

Third, culture. There is something Which I was embarrassed. In lunch time, I was brushing my teeth. One classmate asked me. "Are you brushing teeth every lunch time" I said "absolutely!" She disappeared with very strange face. I was curious. After talking with my teacher, I knew that America peoples think brushing teeth is very privet action. They don't brush teeth outside. But In Korea, It is important. Chili powder is often used to Korea food. Talking with another country's friend about culture was very interesting. Especially, When I invited birthday party, I felt difference of culture. It broadened my perspective.

Finally, I have a time which I am imaging my future. I was very confused about my future. I don't know What I want to be, What I want to do How can I do. I like to study math. But I don't agree it will be my job. And my grade was very bad last semester. I was very worried. Now, I am still worried. But I can know What I do before to find my dream. I saw many people, many places and handle many problem. They don't help me directly But change me something.

Gift from new friends. I miss them.

Now, I am in Washington D.C hostel. This city is last place visiting. I expect What will happen in this trip. I visited Las Vegas, LA, San Diego, San Francisco, Buffalo, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington D.C. Now that I think about it, It is a reckless act to me who had never done travel alone.

San Diego

San Francisco (I crossed Golden Gate Bridge by bicycle)

Buffalo (Niagara falls)

New York (I saw the phantom of opera twice. I love it)

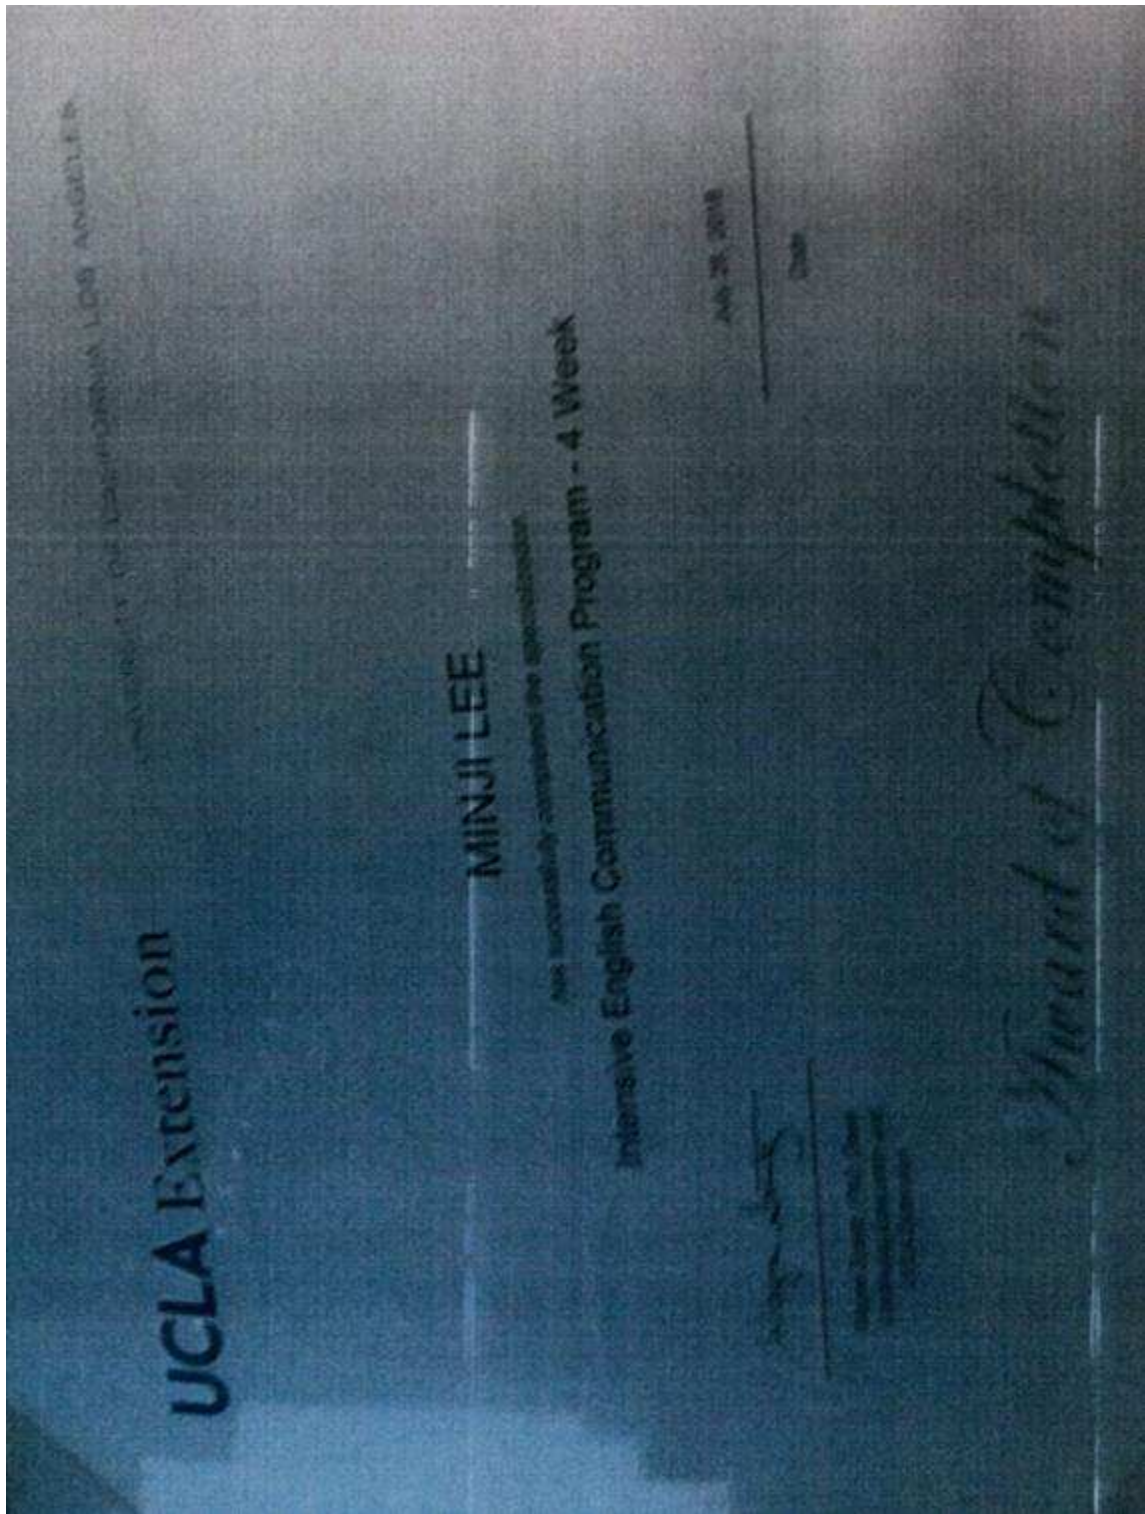

Boston

Philadelphia

I really appreciate to offer me chance. UNIST, and My family (The cost of my trip is not enough for my part time job salary) And I'm sorry about being late report.

For one month in UCLA, I have had unforgettable experiences. Especially, I will never forget my friends who met through this program.

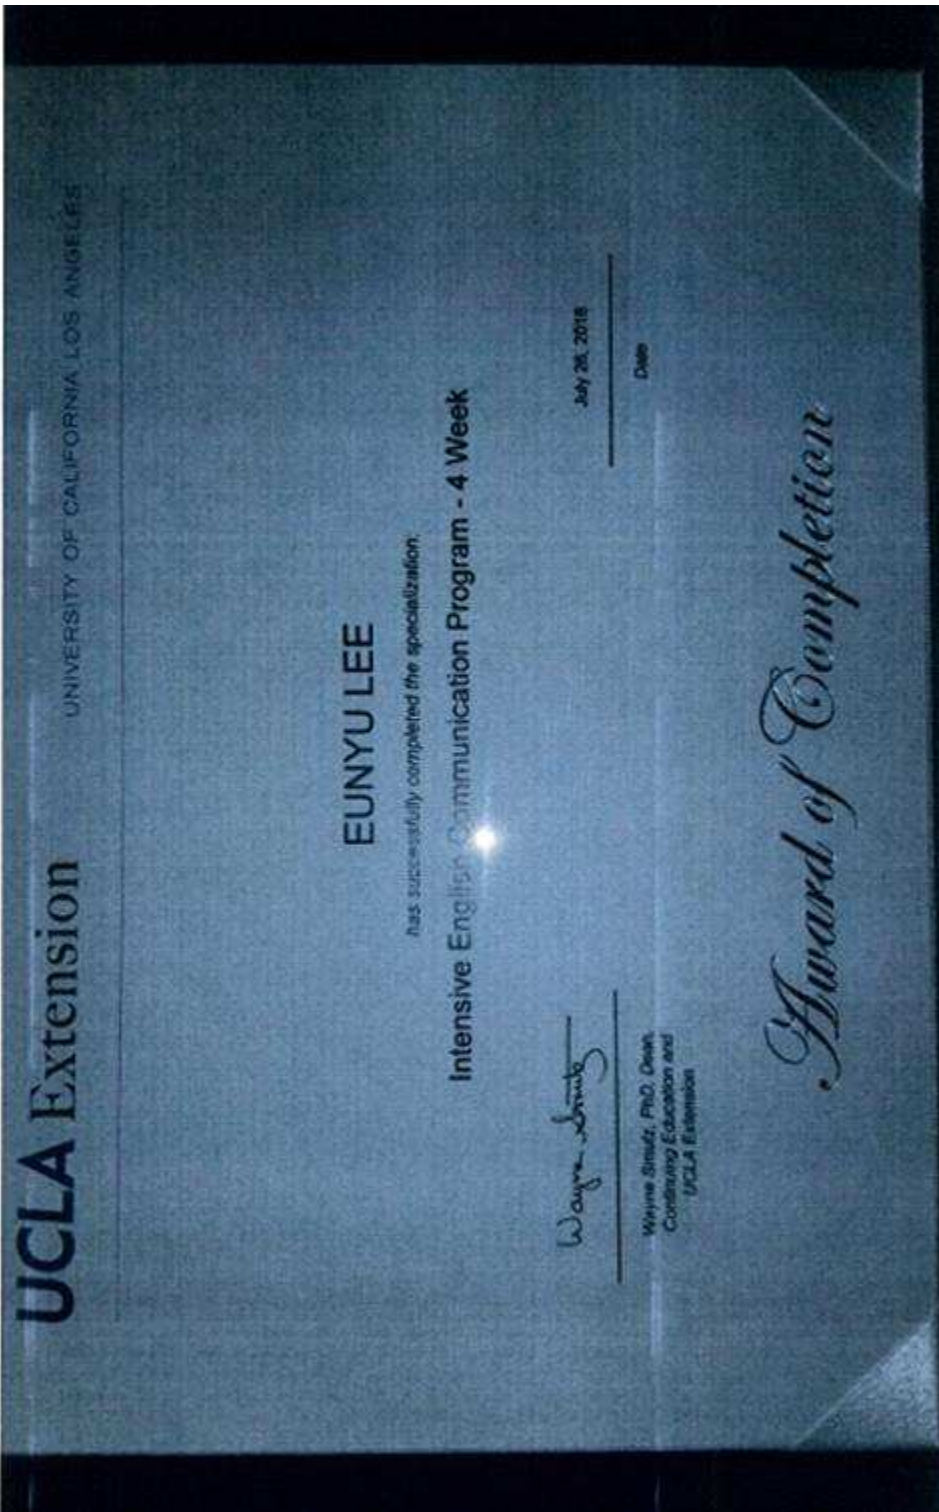

When I decided to apply this program, one of my goals was making foreign friends. However, it was hard to talk with foreigner when I met a lot of new friends at first. Especially when I talked with native speaker, I lost confidence. But my teacher in UCLA Extension told me that she didn't care about how well I speak English, just she wanted to know what I want to say. Thanks to her advice, I took courage and I got close to my foreign roommate.

And the classes which I chose were Academic, Culture and Pronounce&Grammar.

Unlike the English classes that I took in Korea, all classes focused in talking and discussing with classmates. Talking with foreign friends was really interesting for me. Above all, the story about their culture that a Saudi Arabian friend told me was really impressive. By discussing with them, I could know them, their country and their culture.

This program makes me confident in speaking English and makes me have a goal to be exchange student. This one month was really useful and funny period for me !

I participated in the IECP for a month in UCLA. It was a great experience. I met lots of people from other countries in a class. There were academic, culture, business, communication and discover LA class and I had culture, business, and discover LA class.

In culture class, I met a teacher, Ben. He was a very nice teacher. He makes us to speak English together and I could talk with foreign people a lot. In our class, there were people from South Korea, Taiwan, Thailand, Saudi Arabia, and El Salvador. So, I could talk with these people a lot and I could learn culture of these countries. We had a homework every class. We should take a word that we didn't know. So, I took 'mystic' from a fortune cookie, 'utensil' from a restaurant and so on. I read many words everywhere because of this homework. It was really interesting and helpful class.

In business class, I had same classmates and a different teacher, Fawzia. She was passionate teacher. At the first time we met, we were shy and didn't talk that much. But after some class, we became talkative and active because of Fawzia's effort. Actually, my major is engineering so I didn't know anything about business but there were many students whose major is business. So, I could learn many knowledge about business. We watch a TV show, 'Shark Tank'. It was little hard to understand the show but my classmates explain it to me easily, so I could understand. Also, we went field trip to 'Trader Joe's'. It was interesting to research some real products in the market.

In discover LA class, we went to the Getty Center, Venice Beach, Hollywood, and LACMA. The Getty Center was really nice place than I thought but the day was extremely hot, and a tram was broken so it was a terrible condition to look around.

We couldn't stay there for a long time, so I went there again with my friends in a good day. But It was unforgettable day! I was tired of the hot weather, but it was good memory for me because it was happy to be there with my classmates. In Venice Beach, I interviewed a handsome guy from Belgium. It was a nice experience. He said he likes to surf in Venice Beach. After we went to each place, we made a video with a picture we took at the place. It was helpful to record a narration to make video.

For a month, I talked a lot with people from other countries and I could learn a lot. I learned cultures of their countries as well as English. Also, there were many native teachers and students who are good at English pronunciation. So, I could correct my pronunciation. My Chinese roommate was also nice! When we talked together, there were full of fun. Now, I missed everyone that I met in UCLA. I couldn't forget them forever. I appreciate everyone there and also UNIST, my university.

Actually, using cellphone was banned in my class. Taking pictures of class neither. So I don't have any pictures related to lecture. I took classes of business, culture, pronounce and communication in UCLA extension ICEP program. Almost every class consist of discussion between students by comparing their own opinion or culture's differentiation. Also I learned a lot things during the process of preparing presentation.

Before I took this class, I always worried about the communication using English. It was hard for me to transfer my words to English directly. But this class made me have confidence in speaking English. All teachers in class tried to give lots of attention to each student and made us to show our opinion. So I had to talk a lot in the class and natually, my speaking skill get advanced. It was very different environment compare to the korea's lecture environment. In the class of UNIST, as like many korean students, I was very passive student. I didn't do any question, representation or showing my opinion during the class, because I thought it was not manner to do those things during the class. However, in class of USA, many students don't care about it. Even teachers thank to us when we give questions. I realized that I don't have to get burden to do presentation, show my own opinion or make wrong answer. Thanks to this, I learned shameless, in other words, confidence in this program.

I think the advantage of the ICEP program in UCLA Extension is that the class is not fixed. I can choose the classes which are in my mind. I can choose two classes between linguistic, business, culture. Also can choose one class in pronounce, communication class and discovering LA class.

Also pre-test which we took in the first class divided students as their English level. So I could take class with similar English level students.

The only disadvantage of this program is that there are so many koreans in the class.(All from UNIST) Actually, I tried to only use English during the program session, but I heard korean everywhere and it was hard not to use korean.

I applied this culture exchange program because I wanted to develop my English speaking skills and wanted to learn how to understand and accept the different culture. Before the program starts, I was worrying about meeting many new people from different cultures and little bit afraid of speaking English.

At the first class, every teachers encouraged and made me feel so comfortable speaking English. The classes that I taken were business, culture, and discovering LA. In the business class, I could learn some basic knowledges about business like marketing, advertising and the profit. As now I'm learning engineering, it's hard to learn about business. However, with this business class, it was so nice to learn some basics of business. The culture class was the best class that I liked. In this class, I could learn slang words which mean the words used among americans. As I travel downtown of LA, I could hear some slang words that I learned in the culture class and it was so interesting. It made me confident speaking English with americans. The class, discover LA, was so helpful to travel LA. In this class, I traveled tourist attractions like Hollywood, venice beach and getty museum. With this class, I could understand the background of the attractions and the history and culture of LA. Also, traveling with friends that I met in this class was so funny and interesting.

During this program, I could meet many friends form different cultures and it was so interesting to talk with them. We tried to understand the different culture of each others and all of they were so nice and kind. We promised to keep in touch with each other and I think I was so lucky to meet them.

This program is unforgettable experience to me. In LA, I went many places, Venice beach, Santa monica, Hollywood street, etc... Those tourist attractions are very attractive and charming. There are many activities to enjoy, So I participated in those activities if I had no schedules.

When I had a chance to go UCLA, I hesitated a little bit, because its period was a senior summer vacation, It was important period to me. So I applied the intern of major company. Unfortunately, I fell to intern. So I chose this program instead of getting intern. It was an unregretful decision. I was satisfied with this program and It was healing time to me.

From July 2 ~ July 27, 2018, I had participated culture exchange program in UCSD.

I want to say about the best thing in this program. It is we can make various friends.

In this program I had met many friends who came from various countries. Italy, France, Germany, Japan, China, Mexico, Brazil, Spain etc. And I could make many friends. I experienced various cultures and I learned to my friend how to live and how to think in their countries. For example, their food culture (Italian eat pasta every day!!) like we eat rice every day), the pace of life and the security of each countries etc. I am impressed with their cultures and I am sure about it was very helpful with my growth. I am still keeping touch with them and I am still learning new things from my friends.

In this program I could learn about how to improve conversation and some grammar.

They leaded we can talk a lot with international friends. And with final project, we made a team and after decided the subject, we surveyed American people. I surveyed 5 people. Of course it was not easy. Because I am not good at English and I worried that people would chafe about my poor English conversation skill. But now this project makes me more courageous at talking with English. People were very kind.

And I can try many active programs. Kayak, Soccer, volley ball etc. In these activities, I have been surprised at culture difference. In Korea, many people do not exercise with other gender. But except Asia countries there was no difference and prejudice about that. I have considered about that what makes narrow the gap about gender and other many things.

And I met some students who were studying in UCSD. I heard about their major and how to think about their major's future prospects. I was surprised about UCSD categorized cognitive science with Science. Because it have been categorized with social science in Korea. As one of the engineer and who study science, I totally agree with UCSD. I think this small different awareness makes difference with USA and Korea. (it means how to focus and how to learn something)

From this program I got B+ at 4 Week High –Int/Advanced Conversation and Culture1 class and A- at 4 Week High –Int/Advanced Speaking and Listening. I safely passed and I got certificate about this program.

This culture exchange program was excellent opportunity to me to extend my sight and to come up to my dream. I am really thanks to Unist offering and supporting this program.

Thank you.

With my teachers and my classmates.

With my friends who met in activity programs.

In the summer of 2018, I took a UC San Diego Conversation class through the language institute. The class was from 8:30 to 10:10. While living in the dormitory, I applied for three dorm restaurants, so I was able to live a regular and stable life. It was very convenient to walk from dorm to school for 20 minutes, so I could live regularly because I ate three full meals. For one thing, the meal was really bad. Dormitory restaurant is buffet style. In the morning, yogurt, fruits, cereals, egg cooking, bacon, pancakes etc. were served with menu except meat, pizza, salad, hamburger, and fruit. At first, I was full because I wanted to eat too much, but the menu was not as good as it was to think of a meal. However, it is very expensive to buy outside and there are not many restaurants near the school, so I recommend applying for three meals in a dormitory.

Now, I will talk about the class. Before entering this class, I took a level test and took a class in the highest class. The total number of classes was 15, and there were four Italians, two French, two Brazilian, one Mexican, five Korean, and one Chinese. Class was a way to pair up with one topic or talk in groups, so I was forced to talk, whether I like it or not. Sadly, however, I was not very good at speaking and I was afraid to speak more and more as I watched other children feel frustrated. Also, I could hardly study words or idioms in class and the teacher made me speak to me at random, so I could only keep using the same words within my knowledge. So, frankly, the level of satisfaction in class is almost the lowest. I later found out that levels were also subdivided in the interaction class, and if I had known this beforehand, I would have taken another level class.

My first trip to America.

With the help of a language institute at school, I applied for a lecture in the U.S. for a month taking conversation classes. I don't know what city there is about America, but I chose San Diego I want to visit the most. There were good things and bad things about taking classes for a month.

First, I liked meeting friends from different countries. There were Italian, French, Chinese, Brazilian, and Mexican in my class. Throughout the lecture, I could see the culture and values of other countries and share our culture.

The disadvantage is that UCSD first took the level test, but there is a limit to separate the class. As a result, they were forced to take classes with high-level students. Because of the difference in level, I naturally lost confidence and could hardly speak and listening. I should have worked harder, but I have some regrets.

There are some surprises in class. Foreigners prefer to give presentations to the way they listen and write. Also, foreigners are really free to sit and take classes when they are in class. This contrasts a lot with the way I was educated in my country. But it has also been a trigger for my energy.

I had a lot of experience after a month of class. Especially, I was more special because I didn't receive 5 million won in support but paid for it in private. And I would also recommend that even a friend who does not receive 5 million won support experience.

I took participate in the UCLA IECF program for 4 weeks. When I was applied this program, I have passion of improving speaking skills or drawing a wide picture in a bigger world. Above all, I wanted to be a time to recognize and reward myself through this opportunity.

When I arrived in LA, My expectation about my LA life is highest. Because I have not lived in another country for 1 month yet. I was full of passion for whatever I wanted. During program, I took 3 classes about culture, academics, and Discover LA. Of these three classes, the most impressive class was the discover LA time. We learned about LA's places in advance and proceeded classes through various activities such as interviewing and becoming a tour guide. It was a great time to meet many people and experience various things.

While I have lived in La for a month, I watched a movie in the theater, went to the mart, bought some groceries, and so on. In addition to classes, I was able to learn about their culture, values, and the variety of ways in which they lived in the United States. Above all, I thought that their freedom is great to live without being conscious of other people's gaze. I came to think that there was a reason why the U.S. is developed. Also, it was a good experience to dream of a bigger world in America. I would recommend this course for other friends. And then if I were given to this opportunity, I would make the same choice.

Ending the Culture exchange program..

This winter vacation, I took an Intensive Communication course at UCLA Extension through the Culture Exchange Program. Classes in UCLA started at 9:00 a.m. and did 3 hours until 12:00 p.m., then ate lunch, then added 2 hours from 1:00 to 3:00, taking a total of 5 hours of English class. As for the course, English conversation. There were pronunciation, culture and so on. Among them, I especially enjoyed culture class, and it was time to study English conversation and culture that is used in everyday life by watching famous dramas and sitcoms in the United States. And in the end, we chose one of the videos that we've seen, and we played a role play, which I think is the most memorable. The contents of other classes were not very different from the English we have studied in Korea so far. It was an Intensive course, but because of living English, I could study it without burden. and the life in the U.S. is more in Merritt than in class itself.

My first impression of America was scary and scary. I applied for a program by myself and planned a trip without my friend. When I asked to my friends about U.S. they scared me that I will be shot in the U.S. if you are travel alone. So I was really worried when I first took two carriers and flew off the L.A. Air Port. However, people were unexpectedly kind and pleasant. When I ask something I don't know, they treated me with a warm. One of the great things about American culture is to have fun talking to strangers. In Korea, they don't pretend to know each other when they walk down the street or run into strangers at a bus stop. But in the U.S., we felt friendly in having a casual conversation with someone we didn't know and in having a good time with them. And I also felt that there were so many different races. In Korea, nearly 90 percent of the chances of getting in touch with the U.S. were through movies, with white actors mainstream in the U.S. Hollywood market, followed by black and few Asians, naturally prejudiced as "American = white." But in reality, they were well-matched by many different races, and they were well-matched in American culture.

Before and after classes in UCLA, I went on a trip to several cities by myself. Before class, I went to Las Vegas and San Francisco, and then I traveled to big cities in the east — Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington. Unlike Korea, there were different moods in each city, and New York was the most impressive. Since New York is the capital city of the United States, there were many things to see and various activities were possible. I went to see the Statue of Liberty and the Brooklyn Bridge on the cruise line, and I went up to the Empire State Building to enjoy the views of Manhattan on the observatory for half a day. When I went to Harlem, I experienced black culture while eating soul food. I really enjoyed all of these experiences and thank you very much for letting me have them.

For a month, I've been to many places around LA. All of them looked very beautiful, and I could enjoy them with UCLA-IECP students. I'll introduce some of them.

One of most memorable places was Griffith Observatory

I could see beautiful landscape of LA with sunset. Also, I could visit a exhibition which tells us story about stars and the sun. I could meet various atoms consisting of space.

I also visited universal studios. It was very fantastic. I could see real places for movie making and enjoy many exciting ridings.

The most exciting place I've ever been was Disney Land. Because It was so huge place, I visited there twice to enjoy almost all amusement attractions. I could enjoy uncountable ridings and beautiful fire works.

With IECP, I enjoyed beauty and stories of California.

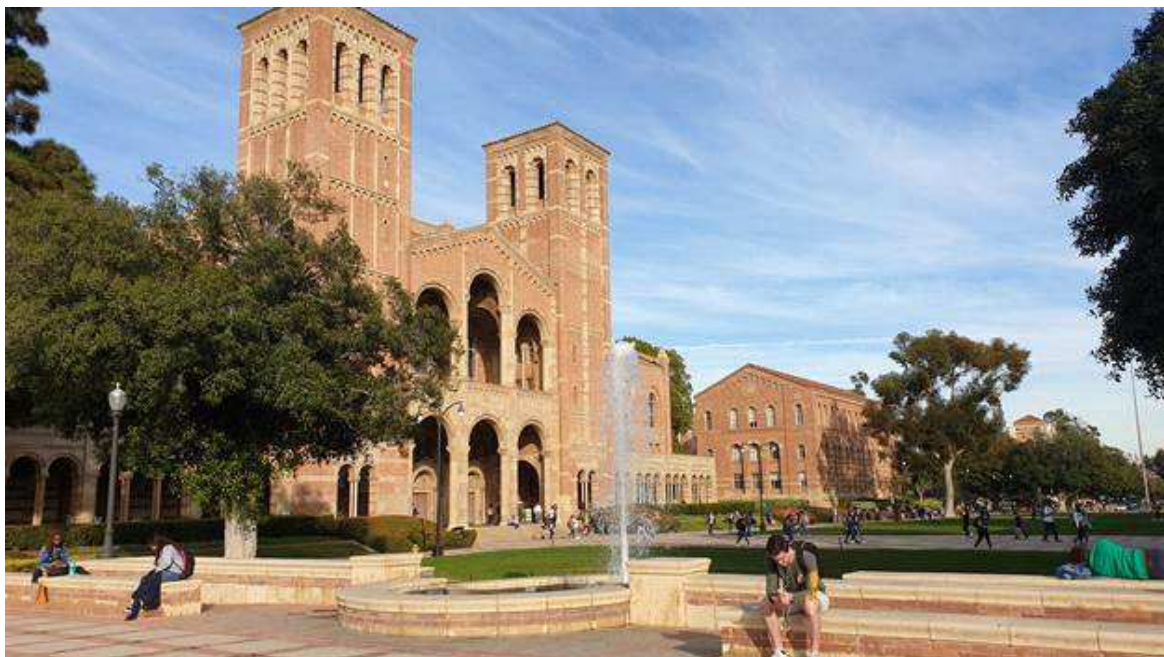

Venice beach was very interesting place. It was created by a rich who was attracted by Venezia Canal. So, it means it is imitation. However, it was very beautiful and some wild birds live there. Getty Center including Getty garden was also cool place. Even though It was little foggy, it had a nice view. Beverly Hills also have lots story in it. Lots of cactus imported to US, Stories about Tongva tribe, and a church which is famous for star's wedding were interesting. At Holly Wood, I heard how many people have been involved in movies. I got to know Titanic was representative movie at 1997, a year I was born.

It was very precious time and I will never forget about it.

The United States was the country where I really wanted to go since when I was very young because I wanted to make a conversation with English native speakers in their country. Finally, my dreams came true on the last winter vacation through the Intensive English Communication Program which is held in UCLA. When I think about it now, the memory of two months including the trip feels really like a dream.

One of the reasons I went to the culture exchange program is because of English, so let's talk about it. When I go to the United States, at first, it was very awkward for me to use English, but it was so amazing that I can talk with foreigners in class or everyday life. When I came to UCLA School and talked in English, I talked slowly thinking about whether this was the correct grammar or whether it was the right word. But seeing other foreigners using English fluently without paying any attention to grammar, I realized that it didn't matter if I used the right grammar and words. Since then, I've tried not to care if I'm making mistakes. After that, I feel like I'm growing up a little bit.

During two months, I had a lot of experiences. Before going to LA where the UCLA is located, I went on a trip with my mom. We went several cities including New York, Washington D.C., Las Vegas and the Grand Canyon. All cities have their own characteristics and atmosphere. Every time I went to another city, I felt different. But the common is all the cities were so beautiful especially the Grand Canyon. I can't forget the memories of watching the stars pouring out overnight in the Grand Canyon.

After the trip with my mother, I arrived at LA and spent a month with my friend. I think I have had a valuable experience through the culture exchange program in the United States. It seems like a memorable memory for my whole life wondering that if there a chance to live in the USA such a long time. I'm grateful to Unist for making this experience.

Visa Interview

As the agency informed me, I prepared Q&A and documents. It was enough for interview.

The consulate asked me why I want to go to America, my school and major, and my grade, and she also checked who support my financial in terms of money. What was surprising was that the consulate knew how to speak Korean. I was going to speak English, but she answered in Korean, so I was puzzled what language to answer. I tried to answer in English as much as possible, and I could get my visa approved without any problems by telling the truth as it is.

Restaurant and Tip culture

Because I traveled by myself, so if I need anything, I had to express it in English. So, when I go to the restaurant, I could listen to the explanation about the menu and order, recommended menu, and refill the drink. And I could learn from the conversation that Americans use often in the United States.

Also, I became familiar with tip culture. Tip is usually twice as much as the TAX, but when several people use a table, we could find that they charged money for Gratuity. It was unfair to tip twice when I didn't know it.

Most of all, if you go to a restaurant in Korean town, you must pay for tip because there is a bad clerk who tries to get a tip even if I was not satisfied with the service.

Market

There were three kinds of market: Whole food market, Target, Ralphs Market.

Whole food market was good for buying organic food. Instead, the price was expensive. Target is a common large mart, but it was focus on snacks and things. I think it's because there's Ralphs Market upstairs. Ralphs Market is all cheap. Especially, if membership card is issued, it can get a lot of additional discount, so I could buy a variety of foods cheaply.

Class

The classroom was in a building located in outside of the university. It took about 20 minutes from the apartment and it was good to walk along the streets of LA in the morning.

The classes were all conducted in English and were divided according to the results of the test on the first day. The problem is getting harder and harder from the previous problem. It was hard because I ran out of time, but I just did my best to solve it and was assigned the Advanced class.

When I went in, I found that half of the classmate is Korean from same university. Since we came to study English, we tried to speak English as much as possible.

The class consisted of grammar, pronunciation practice, and presentation and conversation that we learned in high school. It was boring, but I liked being able to talk to other people and make new friends. And even though my communication skill did not improve, I felt that my pronunciation had improved, and I feel confident when I talk with someone.

Travel

I have been to Las Vegas, San Francisco, New York, and Washington before and after class period and during the university holidays. I was a little scared to go around alone, but I could see the places where I met various people and saw nice scenes.

And I felt the sense of achievement of travel through experience that I had never experienced.

First of all, I have come to realize that the world is wide, that a person should be global, and I am going to try a variety of activities along with my studies.

Goal

I had three goals during this program (including travel).

Meet 50 peoples, have 50 different experiences, and go to 50 places

I don't know that I've achieved it, because I didn't count it myself, but it helped me a lot to lead to the world. Perhaps these experiences will help me to live my life in the future.

From UCLA Extension

This winter vacation, I visit to UCLA to learn English. My school, UNIST not only provide me a chance to go there but also support a scholarship.

Before I go to UCLA, I have so many concern about it. Because UCLA is at America where far from Korea. Difference is not only their language, English, but also culture, food, appearance ...

But when I arrive at UCLA, I notice it was foolish worry.

This is picture of UCLA!
What a nice weather in California

Picture of my wonderful teachers

Our teachers were really nice and think about us. I already miss them. Also their teaching were also nice. They teach about overall America. And they was friendly to us. Even, teacher help me to reserve to disneyland.

Beverly Hills, that's where I want to be!
Do you know this song?

I especially like a class name was 'Discover in LA'.

Teacher Adam was so nice. And this class, we go many place in LA. The picture is Beverley hill's fountain. I was visit to Beverly hills. This place is where rich guys are live. Architecture was so fancy.

In weekends, I was visit some amusement park like universal studio.

This is landmark of universal studio.

Universal studio was so, super fun! So I was decide to visit one more amusement park, Disneyland. This time, I go their with some unist friend and one girl form Japan. Her name is Yuka. I became a friend with her at school.

I took the IECP program at the UCLA language center, and I chose the Academic and Culture classes. Living in the USA for 2 months was a very impressive experience for me.

First at all, I could meet friends from various countries. In our class, there were many Chinese, Taiwan, Japanese, French and Saudi Arabian friends. In the Academic class, I learned many words, idioms and expressions that are usually used in daily life of American. They were very useful when I lived and traveled the USA. In the Culture class, I learned the differences among many countries and polite behaviors in each country. Many friends are surprised at Korean's 'honorific terms' because they don't have these terms and, many of them really like our K-drama or K-music. It was very interesting to learn the food, daily and relationship cultures of various countries.

In the afternoon class, I practiced the grammar, pronunciation, syllable and rule of English. I had more many conversations or games with friends and participate in lectures. Also, I could share many opinions about the places to travel with the presentation partners. Teachers continuously gave me the feedback about my pronunciation or accent of words, I could fix and practice them.

Not only the IECF, but also the homestay was very good experience for me. Even if there were some inconvenient such as wearing the shoes in the house, but conversation, meal with Patricia (home host) and playing with Dean (her grandson) were very sweet and unforgettable. I learned the American living culture and manners during I lived in the homestay at Palms. Finally, I could travel many places using the afterschool or free time of weekends. The location of LA was very convenient to go many beaches or other cities. I love these experiences, and I miss the friends and LA.

I have been studying at UCLA in Los Angeles for 4 weeks. At first I expected the building was located inside the UCLA campus, but it was a bit far from the campus. On the first day of classes, we did not have a class, but we saw an orientation, a simple interview with teachers, and a level test. I was surprised that there were so many Koreans. About half of whole students were Koreans and most of them were UNIST students. On the second day, we went to the UCLA campus by a shuttle bus without taking classes. Unlike UNIST, it was a spacious and cheerful campus.

Regular classes began on Wednesday. Classes consist of 3 hours of morning classes and 2 hours of afternoon classes. In the morning classes, two of the three courses of the Academy, Culture and Business are selected, one is taught on Monday and Wednesday, and the other taught on Tuesdays and Thursdays. I chose Academy and Culture subjects.

The Academy class was focused on vocabulary. The class teacher gave the same assignment for each class, which was to pick one vocabulary that we did not know about. Rather than to find in the dictionary, in daily life in America, when a new word is encountered, it is to explain to the teacher the meaning of the word and the context in which the word comes into contact. At first I wondered if such a "context" would happen to me, but I have traveled around LA every weekend, and many of those "contexts" have occurred. Students tell the teacher the context of the word in the classroom, the teacher gives generously to explain the meaning and the correct pronunciation of the word, and similar words, and the specific usage. Teachers in UCLA do not worry about the progress of classwork.

In the Culture class, we took activity-oriented classes. Classes were mainly conducted by activities such as games and situation drama, so we moved our chairs frequently in class. We had to talk in situations where we could not predict what the other person would say, so coping skills were important. Our teacher liked acting so we often saw American sitcom in class, but it was difficult to get the native speaker's pronunciation easily. There was a graduation-presentation for each class on graduation day. Culture class substituted the presentation by reenacting several sitcoms.

Afternoon classes were also a way to choose from several courses. I chose a class ,whose name is 'Discover in LA', where we weekly visit one of LA's attractions. Every Thursday, we visit a place of interest, and on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, we have time to learn and research about them. It was fortunate to be able to visit places such as Beverly Hills and Hollywood as a field study in class. It was not just a sightseeing tour, but we had to carry out tasks such as 'Tourist Interview' and 'One Day Tour Guide'. At first, talking to strangers seemed hard, but tourists responded generously and we could finish it easily.

There was a graduation ceremony on January 31st. It was the shortest 4 weeks in my life. I made many friends and traveled a lot of beautiful places. It will be an unforgettable memory for my whole life.

Final Report of Culture Exchange Program

January 7 th, I started Culture Exchange Program in UCLA

First time, we took the level test and looked around UCLA campus. It was excited experience. I was assigned intermediate class and I applicate culture, academic class at morning and speaking English class at afternoon class.

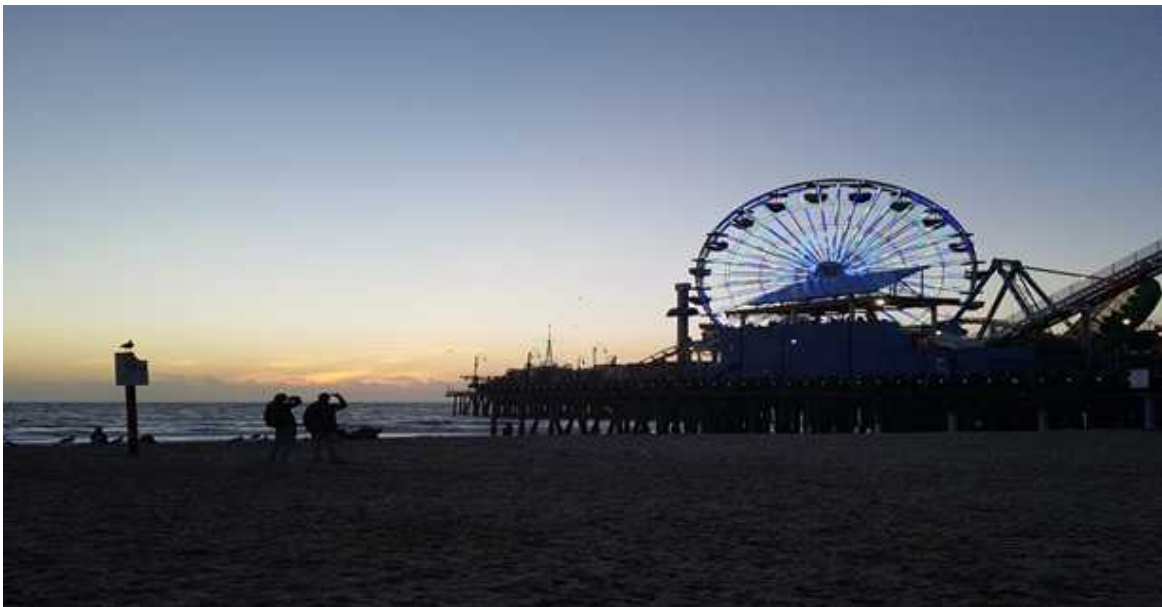

UCLA Campus tour

In class, speaking English all the time was hard for the first. I usually stuttered and thought the word for a bit before speaking. Because of that when first real class ended, I was very tired.

Next time, I prepare my word and try to say naturally. It didn't go well at first, but meditate the sentence once said was of great help later.

Gradually I can say my opinion easily and it will be funny to talk with foreigner.

On weekend, I traveled in Los Angeles. I visited many places in LA and I can learn their culture, history from trip. In LA, There are many places to see. Most of all, I liked the beach of the LA(Santa monica , Venice beach) People are always crowded for rest. I loved the atmosphere where people enjoy relaxation. In there, I naturally spoke English when I ordered the menu in cafeteria and asked for direction. Sometimes I had fun talking with kind people by exchanging greeting.

Santa Monica Beach sunset

As time goes by, I stayed close with foreign friends talking on English. During travel, speaking English made me much fun. After a month, my English skills did not grow very much but I glad that I was able to express what I wanted to say in English. Finally I got a certificate of completion.

Graduation ceremony

Disappointing point about this program was that it cost too much to do with the class. Unlike spending nearly 3 million won on tuition alone during a month of classes, teachers' classes made me think that it was too expensive because I felt their English teaching contents like at our country middle school English private institute. I thought it was much better to make me free talking during the class. I also complained that it costs nearly 100,000 won to buy books for classes but did not use them properly.

Overall, It was a good experience to visit the United States through this culture exchange program. It was very special that I could meet new people and become close in a strange environment through the language of English. Sometimes I felt frustrated because I couldn't understand what they were saying and wanted to go back to Korea but living in the U.S. for a month will be a memorable experience to me.

Before I study at UCLA Extension, I went to San Francisco, first. San Francisco is the rich city in USA. San Francisco is famous as tourist city of USA. There are many tourists who are from many different countries. I went to the Golden gate, De young Museum and Union Square. I bought many things at Union Square. At first, It was difficult for me to adapt in USA. But I gradually adapted in USA.

I went to Las Vegas. Las Vegas is also famous as tourist city and gambling of USA. Many hotels of Las Vegas have beautiful sightseeing, because they attract tourist to stay there and earn lots of money from tourist by gambling. Actually, I was not interested in gambling. So, I just see many beautiful appearances of hotels.

When I stayed at Las Vegas, I took a package tour to go Antelope canyon, Horse shoe band and Grand Canyon. All of that are very huge and grand. It was unbelievable that they are formed naturally. I took lots of photos with exciting posture. I met some Koreans who had taken the package tour. It was fun to make new friends by that.

At UCLA Extension, I took intensive English Communication Program. I took the advanced academic & culture class and advanced discoverla class.

In morning class (advanced academic & culture class), I took lectures with discussion with other students. It was a good time to improve my English skills by explaining my ideas and thoughts in English and listening other students' ideas.

In afternoon class (discoverla class), I learned about history of LA and visited the famous tourist destination of LA. I went to the Getty Center, the Beverly hills, Hollywood, and the Venice Beach.

I went to the Getty Center on January 11, 2019. I went to there with my friends and teacher by metro bus. After 20 minutes later on bus, We dropped off the front door of the Getty center. We saw some sculptures and rode the tram to go up to the Getty Center.

Dropped off the Getty center, we took the architecture tour first with the guide, Colleen Conway. She explained the architecture of the Getty Center. The material of the buildings are the rocks which is almost preserved from what the dinosaurs had lived. There are some rocks with the fossil of ancient leaves. After the tour was finished, I had a interview about Getty Center with her.

I went some portraits at the Getty Center. They displayed many pictures. I was impressed on "Portrait of Princess Leonilla of Sayn". She look so serious. I want to know the story about her by seeing the portrait. Then, I went to the garden of the Getty Center. It's so beautiful. If I went here at spring, I will be more impressed on the garden with colorful flowers. The bubbles on the river at the garden looks so cute.

I went to the Beverly Hills. There are many luxuries. The rich in LA live in there. All students prepare their representation about history of each sculpture, buildings, museums or many luxuries. It is good for my English skill.

I went to Hollywood. There are many museums and loitering. I looked around Hollywood with tour guide. He took us to many theatres and museums. I saw many hand-foot imprints of Hollywood stars. I placed my hand on imprints of stars.

I have a good experience in USA. I will miss these places

Reasons that I was in that program are, of course, to study English, and to meet many other cultures. In this program, I can study in the UCLA and meet many others.

In first day, I took level test. The test format was similar to Korean basic English tests. I don't know my score for the test, but I could go to advanced class.

Also, we went to UCLA campus tour. Our classes were in UCLA Extension. UCLA Extension is close to UCLA, but not inside of UCLA. The UCLA campus was very wide. And, I can feel the history of the campus. It felt very different from unist.

My classes were 'advanced academic', 'advanced culture' and 'advanced discover LA'. And, my favorite class was 'discover LA' class. With the class, I could have gone to many places in LA.

First place that I went to was Getty center. The Getty center can be shown with these three words, architecture, art, and garden. There are very beautiful. Architectures are white and clean. Arts, with sculptures and paintings, are beautiful. Especially, Monet's painting was impressive. The most beautiful thing that I think is the garden. Even the weather was cold, garden's plants, stones and fountain were looks good.

Second place is Beverly hills. There are many stores. The road is very neat and refined. There are also many sculptures. They are have their own stories.

Third place is Hollywood. I don't really like the noisy city, but I was impressed by the energy of the street.

Last place is Venice beach. There is canal. It is said that Venice was made after Venice, Italy. It looks very good. Also, the beach was very full of life. Many people were exercising in there.

With this class, I could go to many places. Also, English activities with these places gave me a confidence about using English. Finding English words, finding the history of the region in English, presentation in English, these activities gave me a help to use English.

The most important thing is that I met many people there. They help me to use English well. And, they help me to meet many other cultures. I want to see them again. I really appreciate them.

Hi, My name is Jungseop, I was called by Sup there, which is from my name Seop.

It was fantastic experience for me, everything was new, I was so excited about life in LA.

To tell you the truth, LA was the city which I'd love to go most among all the world.

The best reason is from my past dream.

I used to want to be an actor, LA is the best city for movies and actors with Hollywood.

Furthermore, I was so impressed by the movie, LALA Land, which is shoot in LA, That was enough to be reason which I have to go LA.

In a week day, I took class in UCLA extension, there were two kinds of classes of Ben and Annika.

Ben class's special one was about word.

We had to bring one new word with situation every class, introduced in front of the classmates.

That was very helpful to expand my vocabulary.

In Annika's class, we practiced play, and performed at last day.

Annika also used to want to be an actor before likes me, we talked about deeply about our story.

The whole phase of practice was so fun, I really enjoyed it.

Every weekend without class, I had a trip.

I went to Las Vegas with my friends, played gambling, watched show and beautiful night sight, and we got best photos in the Grand canyons.

I also went to San Francisco by myself.

It has different thing compared to trip with friends, thinking myself, feeling myself, move whatever I wanted, that was great experience, and San Francisco was the best city for enjoying myself. One month was the strong experience, I really hope to go to there again, and love to meet friends again who I met there. Thank you for giving this experience.

<The best memory in LA>

The culture exchange program was great opportunity for me to experience the culture of USA and make new foreigner friends. If I didn't participate in this program, I would regret because I learned a lot of things during the class in UCLA.

When I first attended to the class, I could see many people with different age, nationality and religion. Some people were employees in company. Another people were from Japan, Taiwan and Italy, etc. The others were students who looked like my age. At first, it's quite awkward for me that I could encounter many people with different background. However I became passionate to attend the class because I wanted to meet and talk to those people. It could be the best chance to experience various cultures out of Korea.

In first day, I had to take a level test. I took English test in a long time. So it's unfamiliar to listen and read the context with English. After the test, I hung out with my friend to look around Westwood where UCLA exists. Westwood was very clean and peaceful place. There were many stores and restaurants which were necessary for students of UCLA to use. I relieved that my daily life would be safe and great during the culture exchange program.

Next day, I went to UCLA for tour. The campus was wonderful and beautiful. It's quite different with the campus of UNIST. All buildings are harmonized with the nature and art like sculptures. Many students looked busy to move another class. Some students took a rest on the grass with coffee. It's the image what I thought about ideal life of the university. The first image of UCLA was good!

The English class of the program began on third day of LA. In class, the teacher always emphasized “Talk to each other with English.” So I tried to talk with new friends. Soon my speaking skill improved. I could speak what I wanted to tell with English definitely and fluently in daily life. I think it’s because of practice in this program.

My best class during the program was “Discover LA”. In this class, all classmates went to trip and did lots of activities with classmates. I’m going to tell you about my 2 favorite places I visited with DLA class.

First my favorite place is Hollywood. In Hollywood, I could see various people. Some people wore costumes like movie stars. I couldn’t take my eyes off of them. The guided tour with Armand was interesting. So I can learn a lot of information of Hollywood. One of the best places was Chinese theater. It was built by a partnership headed by Sid Grauman. There were many footprints in front of the theater. When I saw the handprints and footprints of Ryan Gosling and Emma Stone, I was impressed because <La La Land> is my favorite movie. Another best place was the Egyptian theater. It’s known as the site of the first-ever Hollywood film premiere. Inside of the theater, there were complex ornaments on the ceiling. It was really beautiful. At the end of the tour, I saw El Capitan. It was fancy. The tour of Hollywood was great opportunity to know LA well.

Second favorite place is Beverly Hills. I only knew about Beverly Hills that the rich live and many high brand stores exist. However some places broke my bias. One place was the Witch’s house. It looked like the studio for Halloween day due to the mismatched windows and doors and cobblestone paths. Other places like Cactus garden and wet and wild were weird for me. I became the tour guide for my classmates about Giorgio Armani. In the process of researching this brand, I learned some new information about the brand. Giorgio Armani joined with Samsung to design the Giorgio Armani phone. Also he tried to break strict rules in fashion field.

All 4 tours in Discover LA class made great memories about LA. Each place has unique characteristics and beauty. But Hollywood and Beverly Hills were the best for me. In Hollywood, I could learn the history of movie in LA. All sites were historical and fancy. In Beverly Hills, I could see the different sides of the Beverly Hills through the Witch's house, wet and wild and cactus garden. Also I learned the history of high brand like Giorgio Armani and Louis Vuitton. This class gave me not only fun but also a lot of information that I might have overlooked. I could never forget the memories in LA. The culture exchange program was one of the best experiences I've ever had. I want to participate again if I can have a chance to register.

- ☐ Study Period: 1/4 ~ 1/31

I have IECP class at UCLA from 1/4 to 1/31.

During the class, I participated hard in the class program, and as a result, I wrote a dialogue about my hobby based on the grammar I heard in the class, received a revision of my pronunciation from my teacher and made an announcement with my partner at the final ceremony. In the afternoon class, Discover LA, I was able to improve my listening and speaking skills in real life through guide tours, interviews, and presentations on landmarks.

We took classes with not only Koreans but also Japanese, Chinese, Taiwanese, and European people, and had time to learn about the people and the culture of the country as well as the United States. As I discussed various topics, I knew a similar culture and a different culture to my country, and I also learned basic common sense about the country. For example, our country thinks it is polite to turn your head and drink when drinking with adults, while the French think it is polite to drink with eye contact. Another example was the difference in table manners between France and the United States, and we believed in Zodiac in the West as we saw Saju.

After class, I traveled to the western United States and experienced American culture.

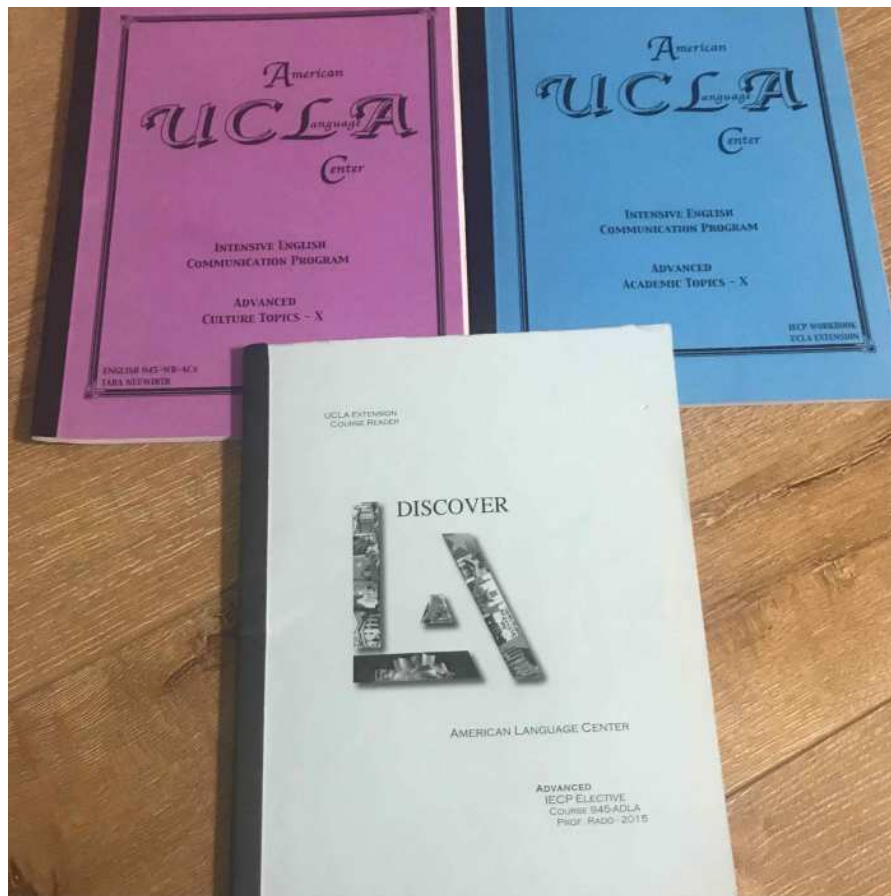

I became familiar with American culture by learning basic life conversation and important manners in advance and applying them locally and talking to local people. I found that our culture and American culture are more different than I thought.

While I was traveling the western United States, I saw many things that I could not easily see in my country. There were 39 seals in San Francisco, palm trees that were common in California, and strips of Las Vegas where hotels were a tourist destination..

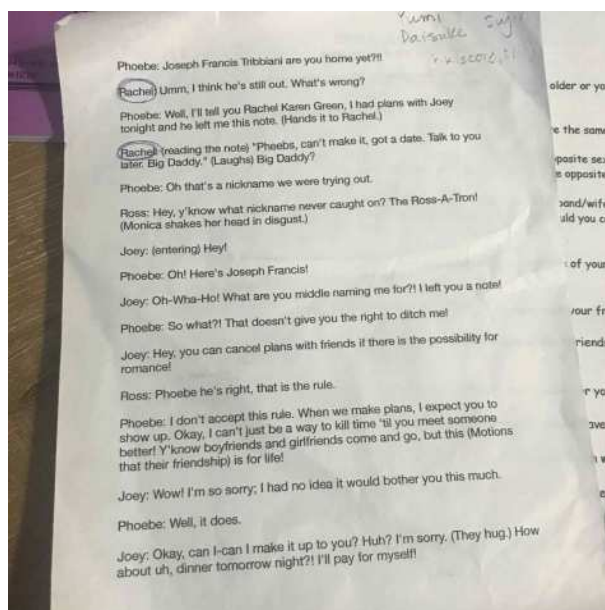

I felt the importance of pronunciation when I was taking class and traveling for about two months. I had a lot of proofreading in my class. I began to speak with interest in reading the whole sentence, but also the pronunciation of every word. But the most important thing was confidence. When I placed an order at a restaurant or cafe, I saw that I could communicate with employees with confidence, and I thought that I should talk with more confidence.

January 7, 2019 I started the Intensive English Communication Program at UCLA EXTENTION. On the first day, I took the test to break the class and chose the class I wanted. I chose Academic and Culture in Business, Academic, and Culture classes for the morning classes, and selected Discover Los Angeles class of the afternoon class to study all over LA. The teachers in each class were Annika, Ben, and Adam. Their lessons were very interesting. In Annika's Advanced Culture class, I watched American dramas and TEDs and learned many American expressions and words in them and spit out myself. In Ben's Academic class, each student took a new word or idiom in every lesson and drilled deep into them. At Adam's Discover LA class, I learned about LA's famous spots such as Venice Beach, Hollywood, Getty Center, and Beverly Hills. In Beverly Hills, all the students in the class were guided by each other and had time to let them know what they were looking for in one place. I did a survey of the Ferregamo store on Rodeo Avenue in Beverly Hills and explained the history of a person named Ferregamo, called Shoemaker of Stars. During the 4 week long and short time, I improved various aspects of English through various classes. At the last day graduation, I took one of the American dramas I watched in the culture class and played it as a character in the drama. I played "Rachel" in "Friends".

And in the Ben's class, I mad a PPT presentation about LA. My PPT is below.

Through the culture exchange program, I studied in UCLA Extension for 4 weeks and I'm going to talk about 2 aspects that I felt and experienced there.

At first, I'm going to talk about environment. Before I came to the America, I worried a lot about the safety because I didn't have any parties. The apartment I stayed was Universal Student Housing Apartment which is for international students. I liked where I stayed because it was quite close to UCLA campus and much safer than the other places. It was located in Westwood and people said that it was the one of the safest locations in LA. As soon as I arrived at the Westwood, I was so excited because there were so many houses which looked same as the one in the movies. Moreover, I could have roommates who are from other countries and have chances to talk in English all day. The only thing I was disappointed during staying in LA was uncomfortable transportations. When I wanted to go somewhere, Uber or Lyft was inevitable choices. There are not so many buses and subways there.

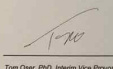

The second aspect I want to talk about is studying in UCLA. When we studied in UCLA Extension, we could choose which topics we wanted to learn. I was interested in Business and Academic topics. Also, there were the two kinds of afternoon class. Before I came to the USA, I had lost confidence of speaking English in front of other people. I wanted to overcome this fear and chose advanced pronunciation and grammar conversation class. All the teachers there were really enthusiastic. I also liked all of my classmates. Because all the classes I took were advanced classes, all my classmates were good at speaking English and the atmosphere was also perfect. I could make friends from Taiwan, Japan, Iran, the United Arab Emirates, Italy, and Brazil. Their jobs and ages were various and I also could have time to think about my future jobs or courses. It was really nice to share each countries' culture together. During the class, I thought that Korean is really good at Grammar. Sometimes I taught and helped solving grammatical problems to the classmates. Compared to learn English in Korea, I could learn a lot of common expressions and vocabularies used in America and could fix some wrong expressions that I had used to say. The atmosphere was quite free so I could ask lots of questions to the teachers. All the teachers tried to take after all of us and I felt really thankful about that. Even it was only 4 weeks, I wanted to stay longer because I was satisfied with studying in UCLA Extension. However, the only bad aspect was that there were so many UNIST students and Koreans. I wanted to study only with international friends and I wanted to talk only in English while I was staying in the USA but there were so many times to meet and speak Korean. So, I tried to speak in English even I was talking with Koreans.

Before I got arrived in London, I'd been traveling around Europe for a month. So, I was tired at the time. When I was going to university crossing the Waterloo bridge, however, I could get over feeling tired. Compare to other countries, UK was neat and tidy. People was gentle and lovely. I also met many kind friends from all around the world in my class.

Because UAL is based on art, there were so many student majoring in art and they have very different mind from me. That was so interesting. My instructor, Ms. Tarah was also pretty kind. She had taught us useful expressions and cultural differences, and that worked While I'd stayed in London, I went so many places. The most interesting place was the city of London where plenty of global companies such as Goldman Sachs, J.P Morgan are located in. Since I want to join those companies, I was highly motivated by them.

I tried to enjoy sports in London. At first, I watched football match between Arsenal and Manchester United. It had been my first time to watch football game on the spot and so great experience. I was so impressed that people were crazy about the game for all ages.

I also visited to Wimbledon tennis museum and main court. Because it was in the off-season, there were no lines and nets. But the score board of last Wimbledon final match between Novak Djokovic and Kevin Anderson was remained and showed how competitive it was.

The night view of London was quite magnificent. There were so many fantastic landmarks everywhere such as tower bridge, London eye, the shard, etc. Seeing gorgeous structures shining on every side brilliantly, I was totally enchanted. I'll never forget those unbelievable scene.

Before I left Korea, I'd thought that traveling for two months would be so long. In reality, however, time flew like an arrow. Studying only a month in London was too short and I eagerly wanted to stay more. I will go to London again as soon as possible. I've gained a lot from this journey and thank you for giving me this opportunity.

I applied 'Culture Exchange' program for this winter vacation. I wanted to study at UAL in London because I decided to study abroad suddenly and it doesn't need any condition. And I wanted to travel many Europe Nations. That is the reason why I chose that university.

In my class, There were many foreigner students who are from Japan, China, Italy and Thai. Also there are Korean who are not UNIST students. So We could share the each country's culture.

During my course, Teacher teach the culture of British and the difference of English between U.K. and USA. Intonation, pronunciation, word and many things are different. And teacher introduced many methods to study English. For example, BBC radio also helps me to listen English and internet site, 'lipreading practice', helps my pronunciation skill. And when we had break time, We usually paly the game. The game is about pop-song. We should fill in the blank after listen to the music. It was very helpful to me because I think it was very useful way to learn English.

after the class, we usually ate lunch together and walked around the London city. Although it was quite difficult to use English when we had a lunch, it was very interesting to me.

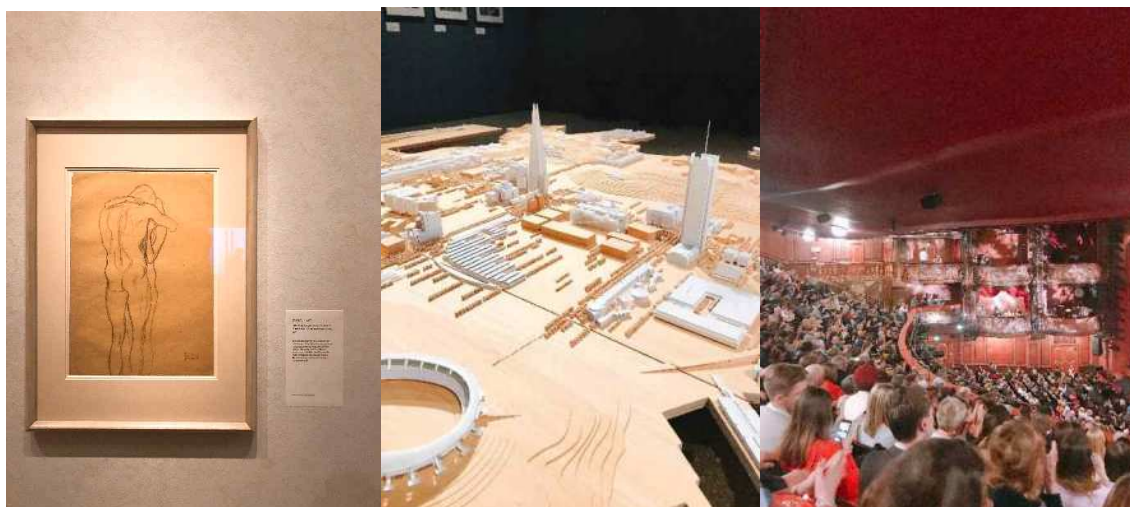

Especially, I made Japanese friends whose name are Ryo and Sakiko. They are interested in Korean Drama or culture. So I had a dinner and drunk with them. Furthermore, I invited them to cook Korean traditional foods such as 'Tobboki(떡볶이)' and 'spicy chicken pot'(닭도리탕). And I invited Ryo one more time, and cook Ramen to her. They also bring the wine and beer to drink with me. They are not native who speak English fluently, but it helped me to speak English much more fluently.

We had the field trip twice. At first, We visited RA gallery. There were Renzo piano's gallery and Klimt and Schuller's gallery. First, Renzo piano is architect who designed the shard which is landmark of London. Also, he designed many famous architectures such as Pompidou center in France and Kansai airport in Japan. Actually, I was interested in Architecture. so I spent more time than other gallery.

Second field trip was held my last class day. We also went to RA gallery to watch Bill Viola's video art. He usually used slow motion. So, I and my friends watched them together.

More than these, I want to see the musical in London with my class mates. So I bought the tickets of 'Lion King'. I have never seen it before. Also, I was worried it because actor and actress speak only in English during musical and I thought I couldn't understand all of them. But it didn't matter. I already knew the content of Lion King. So I could understand it.

I hung around many regions of London. Big Ben, St. Paul cathedral, Canary Wharf and so on. But one of my favorite site is 'Sky Garden' in which I could see all of the landmarks in London. It is in the 'Walky Talky Building'. The name is come from the shape of it. So whenever my friends came in London, I introduced it and booked for them.

And the second is Piccadilly Circus station. When I walked around the city, It was a famous street which I visited at first. And also, when I leave London, It was my last street which I visited. And there are not street like Piccadilly circus in Korean which have curve shape building. So it is beautiful to me.

I was not satisfied my accommodation. I applied house share and my house is located at 22A Evelyn street which is near Surrey Quay station. There are many amenities near my house such as the supermarket, 24hour food market and 'Mcdonald'. However, the facility in my house was not good.

At First, the refrigerator was not working. There were two refrigerators in my house. But one of them is not working. So I told my house owner to repair it or call somebody to fix it. And then, He told me that he call somebody in weekend. But refrigerator was still not working after that weekend. Therefore, although I was very annoyed, I cannot help sharing refrigerator with my house mate.

Second, radiator which heat our house was not working. I think that it was set by timer. So I also told the problem to him But he didn't anything. So my house mate who come from UNIST set the timer himself. Therefore, I don't think our house owner is kind and responsible.

At Last, my house is too small. I also understand the price of accommodation in London. But my room is not big than any other student's room especially. And because of traffic jam, It was hard to go to school

As a result, While I live in London, I was not satisfied and uncomfortable.

I applied this culture exchange program because I wanted to develop my English speaking skills and wanted to learn how to understand and accept the different culture. Before the program starts, I was worrying about meeting many new people from different cultures and little bit afraid of speaking English.

From the first class I expected, the teacher made friends in the classroom to chat with each other and it was a little strange at first, unlike the way I taught English in Korea. When I learned English in Korea, I studied by focusing on reading and grammar and solving problems. However, I think that I could improve my English skills a lot by speaking and listening mainly here. It seems that I have improved a lot more than I thought right now.

The class I chose was UAL's General English lesson. UAL is a comprehensive arts school, so we discussed various topics such as fashion, art, sports and learned basic grammar. Currently, my major is chemical engineering, so it is difficult to learn comprehensive art directly. Currently, my major is chemical engineering or engineering, so it is difficult to learn comprehensive art directly. Also, I could feel the charm of British English immediately. English in Korea is very close to American English, so there is a slight gap with British English. From the very basic pronunciation difference to the difference of expression, I seemed to have devoted more to the class while getting to know what I did not know before.

As I said before, I learned a lot in this lesson as well as English. It was also fun to talk with a lot of friends whom I met in this class. Each of us from different countries is tied up in English and sharing their

We are still writing our own stories as we get in touch. I have really enjoyed this class and would like to recommend it to anyone.

1. LONDON IS THE BEST CITY I'VE EVER BEEN.

First, I'm worried about traveling or studying in London because of racial discrimination. But now, London is my favorite city. I write some reasons below.

1. Multicultural city.

: There are many foreigners in London, so racial discrimination occurs little. (But actually, I was done.)

2. Museums are almost free!

: We went many museums and galleries in London for free! So, the economical burden has reduced.(But I think they must run for free, because almost everything was taken from other countries.)

3. “Sorry”

: Londoners always say sorry, in every situation. It seems like very polite and respecting others. And it might show the individualism of Londoners.

4. Underground.

: Underground (or tubes) is the London's subway. It really fast and dispatch interval is very small. So it is easy to go to other places.

5. Parks.

: London has many large parks. So, many people were jogging or taking a walk with their pets. And the most surprise thing is there are many animals like squirrels or swans in parks! So, my favorite place in London is “kesington gardens” I saw many birds, squirrels and ducks in there. It was a special experience because I've never been to a zoo.

2. Places where I went in London.

1. Harry Potter Studio & 9 3/4 platform

I love Harry Potter series. I watched movie almost 8 times! It was my wish to go to Harry Potter studio. Finally, I got it. Studio set was really elaborate so I really excited. It seemed like I am a real character in movie! I never forget this. It was really fantastic.

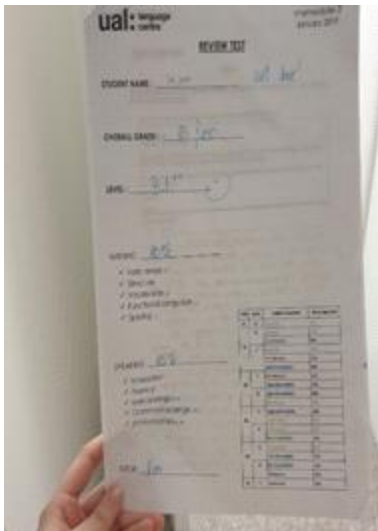

2. Markets

There are many markets in London. And I also like browsing at markets! In markets, there are many beautiful teacups! So I had a new hobby in London! It is collecting teacups! Although it is very expensive to me, but I think it worth. Because it is beautiful itself.

3. UAL

If there are students who agonize going to ual or not, I recommend to go to ual! Because ual has good programs, good teacher and good students. The classes consist of many other country students, so we can exchange the cultural differences and we can broaden our horizons. It is very good chances in our lives. And teachers never cut my conversation, and respect my opinion. So I could finish my sentences, and it helped my fluency.

I had weak at fluency and making interrogative sentences. To overcome this, I used to practice in daily life in London. For example, I always order food on my own or ask something like recommended menu. And I also watched online lecture in a spare time. Eventually, teacher gave me compliments at final test and I got the highest score in my class! I was so happy.

The last day in ual, we had a party. Students brought their country's snack or food, so it was good time. My friends and me promised that we guided in own country when friends(or me) travelled to each country. I missed my friends a lot.

<- my certificate.

4. BAD EXPERIENCE IN LONDON

London was good, but there are few bad experiences.

First, there was an accommodation problem. Men unlocked my room's door and came in my room without my consent three times! It was horrible. And they were Arabs, so they did not speak English. Not only me, but also many women students were very scared of that problems, so they can't sleep well. Thanks to Minji Teacher, this problem was solved, but I can't forget this horrible experience.

Second is Asian discrimination. I did not get much discrimination, but I was very uncomfortable every time. Sometimes white people chased us with saying "Ni-hao" and laughed at our pronunciation.

But this is only few cases, and the rest had good attitudes. It feels good to have a good experience during vacation.

I attended 'Culture Exchange' program for this winter vacation. It was very good opportunity for me to study abroad, so I decided to participate this program. Reason why I chose 'UAL' was its location. London is a good place to speak, learn English, also it have lots of things to see. Most of all, as I like soccer, England is one of the best place to see the soccer.

In London, I experienced lots of things. First thing was English. In Korea, It is hard for us to speak English, as we use Korean language. So we are quite good at reading and listening, we are bad at speaking. In my London period, I met my friend who is a student of UAL university. She studied there for 5 years and her speaking skills was very excellent. It was a kind of good motivation to me. So I tried my best to speak English in my period. In my class, there were Koreans(including me), Chinese, Japanese, Taiwanese, Thai people. Although we all use different language, we could communicate each other by English. So I tried my best to speak English to communicate with them. It was not enough for me, so I tried to speak English after the class. I tried to meet foreigner and try to speak English. Although It was only 30days and I don't think it is enough to improve my English skills, it was very good experience.

Second one is architectures. Before I visit Europe, I wanted to see the architecture of Europe. When I actually saw buildings of Europe, I was so impressed. It's curve, shape is different from our building. There were almost no high – building, so I could see the night view of the entire city well. And my favorite architecture was tower bridge.

Last one is culture. Their culture is far different from our culture.(Including arts, hobby and so on). In London, they always smoke in the road, and usually ignore the sign of the cross road. Also skinship like kiss is very normal in London. Lots of people did kiss on the road. It's big difference. Also, as I mentioned before , England was very good place to see the football matches. They have lots of passion in football, their support for the team was very amazing. As I am Liverpool fan, I saw the Liverpool match. I got gooseflesh when all people in the stadium sang a cheering song. It was very amazing experience. Not only for the soccer, musical is very famous for London. In my case, I saw the musical “Lion King”. Although I disliked musicals before, it was a kind of new challenge to see the English musicals, and it was successful. I felt it was very great in various aspect, especially dramatic interpretation. However, in one side, as I understood only 80% of the 3-year-age musical, so I thought that I have to study English hard.

To sum up, It was very great experience in my life, I can't forget this time forever in my life.

When I entered the UNIST in 2014, I was received an unexpected scholarship to study abroad. If I participate in a program that goes abroad, I can participate with scholarship support. At first, I was happy to get a scholarship, but on the other hand I was worried about how to use it. Finally, I participate Culture Exchange program and I learned a lot staying for four-week in UK.

I didn't decide to go to England from the beginning. I had two options: United States and Britain, and each one has its own advantages and disadvantages. If you go to the United States, you can go to various parts of the western United States and not so far from LA. If I visit the U.S., I can visit various parts of the western U.S. and it is not too far from LA. If you visit UK, I can learn British English and see its unique culture. Finally, I chose UK because I wanted to learn British English.

I arrived UK on January 6, 2019 via Heathrow Airport. I was so glad to hear English, because before came to UK, I went non-English speaking countries such as Austria and Prague. However, it was a mistake to think that it would be okay. terrorism has occurred in Europe recently, so it has made immigration process complicate. I was very embarrassed to ask my own job and my own bill as well as parents' job, but fortunately I was glad I had passed through without any problems. I took the underground to the homestay house. The way taking underground was almost same with ours, but there were many inconveniences: the train was narrow, so people called their subway tube, which is similar with a tube. I think it is much narrower than subway in Busan. Also, the Internet didn't work. Even though I bought a USIM for internet connection, but the radio waves did not work in underground. Therefore, I followed Google Maps that I had already found. As I heard later, English people take it for granted, so I can see a lot of people read their books or newspapers on the underground. In Korea, everyone looks at their smartphones.

On the first day of school, I saw many foreign students and many students from our school. There were many Korean students, most of whom were from UNIST. After a simple test, class is assigned. There were a variety of people in class, including 12 people. Half was Korean and other is Japanese, and Spanish etc. The class was about three hours long, half time speaking, half time grammar, and I was embarrassed to talk to a Korean person in English at first. But I soon got used to it and talked in English. It was different from the English I've learned in my school days. In Korea, we learn mainly reading and listening. Therefore, I had no problem understanding what was given to me. However, it is different when I did writing and speaking. When I tried to write words I knew, I couldn't remember of them, so I looked them up in the dictionary. It was getting less and less looking for them, and I was used to communicating with foreigners in English. At first, I was shy and silent, and then I went to the pub together and traveled to the suburbs.

One of the good things about coming to UK was that I could visit various museums in here. UK built various colonies around the world during the Victorian era. A variety of cultural assets were brought from the colonies, filled and displayed in museums. I wondered if they stole and showed them proudly. It was frustrating for the countries that had been taken away. Fortunately, most museum admissions were free. On the internet, the International Museum Act said that if the goods of the museum which were from its own country do not exceed a certain percentage, they will not be able to receive the admission fee. After hearing it, I thought they had a conscience.

The first place I went was the British Museum, not far from the school I was studying. The size of the museum was not comparable to other museums in Korea. It was so large that I looked inside for two days. The inside was greater than I thought. I was surprised to see what I'd seen in history books. One thing that was particularly memorable was the Rosetta Stone. Rosetta Stone was the first stone tablet to decipher Egypt's hieroglyphics. Based on this, they can interpret Egyptian characters perfectly. I had been impressed by the fact that I had seen it in comics when I was a child. I could not express the wonder and emotion that came from there, and I could see the historical facts and artifacts I had seen in the Greek Roman mythology book. It was a great experience, and there were a group of people who looked like elementary school students who had visited while I was watching, and on the other hand, I really envied of them. They can come and see the real thing whenever they want. I think learning effect is different. They seem to be in a good environment.

I went to the Museum of Natural History. The British Museum is related to historical artifacts, but this is one is related to natural things from dinosaur fossils to animal products. I heard that dinosaur fossils can be seen in museums in Korea. However, it is not as diverse as it is and most of them were fake. It was amazing to see so many genuine fossils here. It was good to see the actual fossils of dinosaurs. Also, I could see many animals by stuffed animals. In the case of Dodo, it was already extinct. However, I can see it how it looks like. Once around, I thought that the people here didn't have to go to the zoo. There were as many animals as there were. In addition to animals, mineral resources were exhibited, which gave me the opportunity to understand the natural history.

Britain is a constitutional monarchy with a king. So, there was unique cultural heritage and atmosphere, and the appearance of the royal family was found in many places. I visited Buckingham Palace to experience this. Buckingham Palace is one of the houses of the British royal family. There is the change of guards here every day. The ceremony is famous all over the world and many people visit it. It was cool. I went to Westminster Abbey, which is the Anglican church where the king's grand finale takes place. In addition, many cultural assets such as St. Paul's Cathedral and the National Assembly Hall, we could see the royal family. Korea is a republic and there are not many places to feel the president. However, in Britain we can see the royal family's long tradition and its efforts to continue it to modern times.

There were many tourist attractions using various IPs: Harry Potter and Sherlock. Both are very popular novels all over the world. Each movie was made into a movie and it was a lot of success. In the case of Harry Potter, the set was made into a tourist attraction. If you want to come here, you have to reserve tickets in advance. It was not easy to book tickets because Harry Potter was so popular. Luckily, I got a ticket and went there, and it was really good. I already watch Harry Potter movies. Just looking at the set, it was fun to see what kind of movie it was. In the case of Sherlock, the address of 221 Baker Street in the novel is reproduced in the same way that Sherlock lived in that time. It is said to be one of the holy places that Sherlockians must visit. I didn't go inside, but when I went to the weekend, there was a line on the street waiting to see it. That's how popular they are. It made me think that Britain is continuing to be a strong nation, producing culture continuously, not just the glory of the past.

Great Britain was a country that had many colonies as a country that did not last long during the Victorian era. It was also the most powerful country through the Industrial Revolution. For four weeks I could feel how strong UK was. The influence of England was readily apparent from the cultural assets of the time. But Britain was steadily creating new things, not stopping here, and solidifying its position as a cultural powerhouse. I think we should learn from them. Fortunately, these days, the culture of Korea was widely known due to the popularity of K-pop, but I don't think it's as much as Britain. Britain has made it a country that wants to come to their culture. The tourism revenue is also enormous. We hope that this will be a cultural powerhouse and become a country that Korea wants to come to.

Hello. I participated in this winter cultural exchange program. I completed the general English course at UAL. I've enjoyed friends from Russia, Japan, Brazil, China, Spain, Switzerland and many other countries. We understood and communicated each other's culture in various ways including CCC (Cross Culture Conversation). It was awkward at first to live with so many different people, but it was a very pleasant experience.

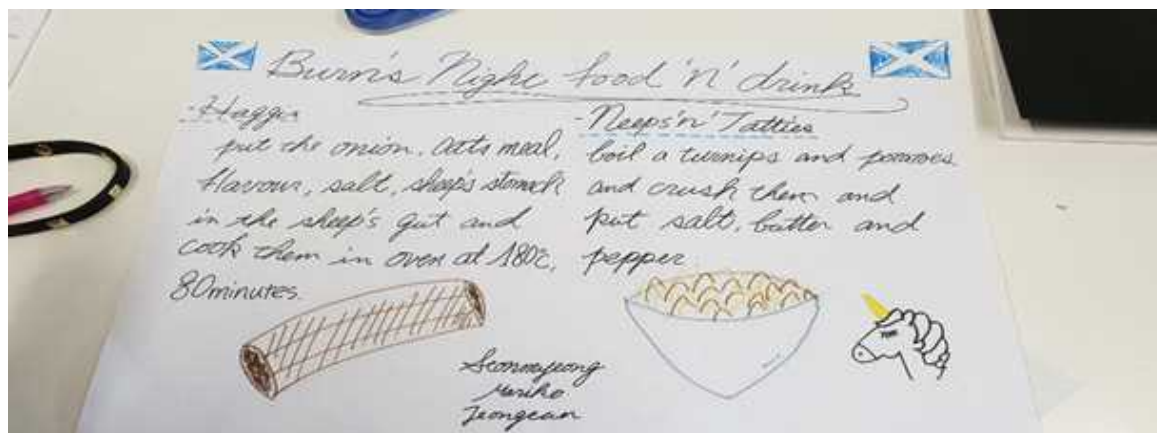

I took classes in the Upper-Intermediate class at UAL. The difficulty of the overall class was the ESL level of the fourth grade of Canadian elementary school.

That picture is the UAL's classroom. He is teacher 'Steve'.

On the day of honoring Robert Burns, a Scottish poet, I learned about him and learned how to honor him. Then We made a poster.

The overall way of teaching consists of group activities and one-side teaching.

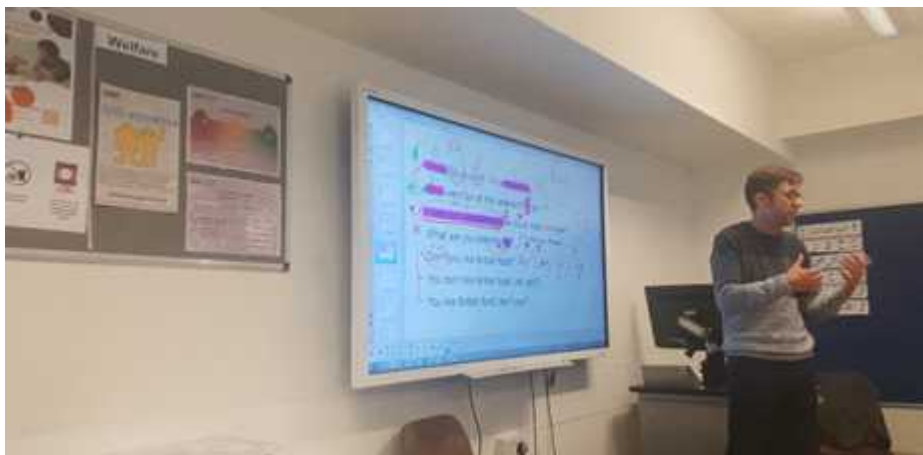

Sometimes we create posters with group activities, sometimes we go to a museum around and share our views on the work.

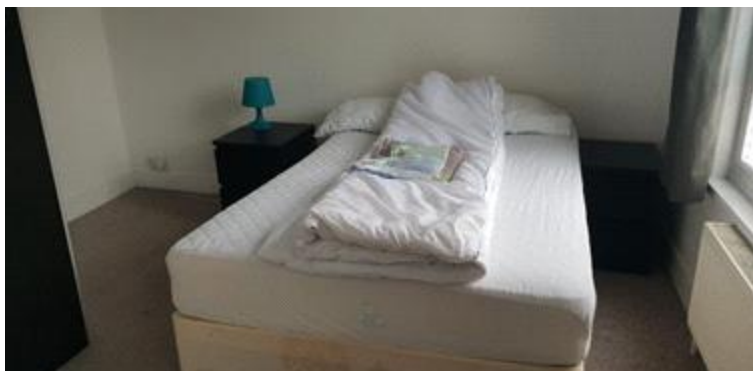

This work is a trophy in the Wellcome Collection (Wellcome is name of human). What is contained in the circular structure is the bean that the gene is manipulated. In fact, the main purpose of the trip was to share scientific and ethical views on these works, but since it was a light atmosphere class, so We talked that the works were beautiful or strange.

One-sided teaching taught mainly grammar and simple conversation.

In fact, the difficulty of the class was low, so one-side teaching did not seem to mean much.

My residence in London was house-share.

The exact address was Evenly Street 22A. To go to UAL, I had to take the bus to go Canada water station and then I had to take subway twice. The value of 1,060 pounds was pointless. Because the room was very small, and the traffic to UAL was also very complicated and inconvenient.

Overall my opinion is that the class at UAL was very expensive and I do not think it is a worth it. I also think that residence is not worth it compared to price. However, I think that if this program aims at cultural exchange rather than English study in accordance line with the purpose of it, it is a very valuable.

I was super excited when I took an airport. Because that's a first time I went to Europe!! It spent very long time to go to U.K. But, I felt happy and excited, not bored. It's amazing for me. After about 12 times, I arrived at Heathrow Airport. I couldn't believe that I was in London.

I arrived at London before English class started, So I had 5 free-days with my friends. We went to British Museum, National gallery, London eye and London bridge. And we visited another very famous places. One of the food which I ate in London is afternoon-tea! (under picture) The sandwich on the bottom plate is very delicious. On the middle plate, the method to eat is important. First, we put the strawberry jam on the scones(bread) and then put the white cream over the strawberry jam. I can't forget the taste...

The class was helpful for me. I scared about speaking in English. But, in class, I could talk to others freely. And I met a Japanese girlfriend. She was kind and nice. We together visited to Korean restaurant and café. I had nice days in London. Thank you.

We went to Cotsworld and Oxford by tour. Fortunately, the day was sunny. So, we could take beautiful photos. Weather in London was most cloudy and rainy. I very hated the weather.

I did culture exchange program at UAL in London. The attendance rate was 83 percent, and I eagerly participated in the program. The program was organized mainly for grammar and speaking. I learned about current verbs, past verbs mainly on grammar. I did all of grammar, speaking, listening and writing for a day. The first week was a level test. I included in pre-intermediate class. One of the problems in my English was that I had no confidence. Teacher listened to the words and corrected me in detail so that I could speak with confidence.

I have traveled many countries to make better use of this cultural exchange. I traveled to the Czech, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Switzerland, Spain and France.

Through the cultural exchange program, I could really learn a lot. I am very interested in art history, and I learned a lot from going to many museums and gallery in Europe.

Especially, art galleries and museums were free in London, so I would always go to galleries and spend time after class. I think this is really cultural exchange and I think I learned a lot from this program.

I participated culture exchange program in UAL for 1 month. I enjoyed studying English in UAL with new friends. My teacher was Kenny and he respected us a lot. I think UAL is a pretty good school to study English and enjoy London. It provides several kinds of advisors such as visa, health and mental health as well. It would be helped to stay in London safely. There were many Korean students in my class especially a lot of UNIST students. It was wonderful to make new friends, there were a lot of Asians even though.

I was able to stay at school's accommodation, but I didn't. I heard it is too far, so I'd rather stay at an Airbnb than an accommodation. Besides, I could go to the school only by a bus. You would be able to find a lot of houses on the Airbnb, but you should be careful when you stay alone. I stayed alone with host, but he was a reliable. You should make sure it. Tube at the morning is too crowded, so I recommend to use other transportations.

Anyway, Friends told me food in UK is not so good, but I had a lot of nice meals. I'll recommend them mainly.

1. Scone and English breakfast tea

You should try scone in London, it would be the best scone in the world. I'd recommend 'Maison Bertaux' and 'Tea and Tattle'. They are famous and quite popular places.

2. Afternoon tea

You should try afternoon tea in London. However, it is too expensive, so I recommend buying tickets on the Groupon. It is the website such as Ticket-monster or We-make-price in Korea.

First which is the lowest plate is for scone, second plate is for sandwiches, last one is for desserts.

Actually, it is for 'afternoon' literally, but I recommend not to eat lunch. You wouldn't be able to try all plates if you already have a lunch.

3. Fish n Chips

There are a lot of fish n chips restaurants, however there are also a lot of not good restaurants. I've been Rock and Sole Plaice and Poppies Fish & Chips. You should search on the website such as TripAdvisor when you go to restaurants.

4. Other restaurants

There are also nice restaurants for pho which is Vietnamese noodles. I've been Cay Tre Soho, it was good, but you should say to waiter to remove cilantro(고수).

A lot of Koreans go to the Flat iron to eat steak, and I recommend Steak n co as well. One of my friend said it is her favourite restaurant in London. People are friendly and kind in the Steak n co.

The General English 15 course at the University of the Arts London (UAL) through the Culture Exchange Program has been a valuable experience for me. I wanted to come to England and wanted to improve my English, so I decided to choose London, the home of English. At the end of the third grade, I will write advice for worried people because of their fear of going abroad alone like me who applied for this program.

Overseas, it also had a 9 hour time difference with Korea, I could not speak Korean, and there was nothing to be afraid although there are no friends. London was also a place for people to live, and kindly talked me to students from abroad like me. Especially since there are a lot of ethnic groups in London, I couldn't feel discriminated against foreigners. You do not have to worry that if you don't know where to visit. Famous landmarks are recorded in the guide book that comes out from the UAL. You can select the place you want and see it. Of course, if you want to go where you want to go, you should find the information

Not only that, but UAL is near Holborn Station in the UK, and because it is almost the center of London, there were a lot of landmarks around. St. Paul's cathedral, the British Museum, Covent Garden, etc., were able to walk on foot without having to travel. Because you can go around by underground or bus, you can freely use the means of transportation if you got ticket for a month. However, many landmarks, except for museums and galleries, had admission fees, which were prohibitively expensive. Therefore, I thought that if I did not pay attention to the budget allocation, it might become difficult later.

The first place I visited in England was H.M.S Belfast, who was also famous in Korea. This cruiser was active in World War II, and it was meaningful because it was an active ship in the Korean War. After retirement, she was preserved her form as a museum form, and was impressed by the interest of many.

The next place I went to was the Westminster Abbey where the ancient kings and British scientists, politicians and poets were buried. Built in a few centuries old architecture, it is a place where coronation and weddings take place. These buildings are still well maintained.

Next to the Westminster Abbey there is the Houses of Parliament of England and in front of it stands the famous Big Ben in England. Big Ben was very disappointed because he was still under repair. Because of some of the landmarks are prohibited from taking photos of the interior, there are quite a few people who are only taking photos of the outside world, but nonetheless, seeing the inside helps to understand their history so I think it is good to seeing.

I went to Buckingham Palace, where was really wanted to see, and saw the guard shifts. Unlike in the summer season, it could see only on Sunday, Monday, Wednesday, Friday. The shift starts at 11 o'clock, but I took half a day in front of the palace because it must be waiting in advance for about 9 o'clock in order to be able to occupy the good spot (the front position). It's been a long time, but it's worth it. I think it's not too bad to go there if you have time and patience because the military band changes every time.

After that, I took the time to travel around museum, London Eye, and Greenwich. The British Museum was bigger than it had heard, and there were a number of relics from each country and also I went to the Science Museum and the Natural History Museum. It was nice to be able to go to the British Museum, which was featured in 'Night at the Museum-Secret of the Tomb', and it was really good that the museum was so huge and free to enter.

Greenwich is also famous for its prime meridian, which is not only inside Greenwich but outside, so I decided didn't go inside. The scenery I saw in Greenwich was really beautiful, so I didn't care about time and money to move around.

I saw the London Eye at night, and it is more beautiful to take a picture far from it than to take it near. In addition, the surrounding buildings are not very high, so it look bigger.

The Culture Exchange Program was a valuable time for me to expand my knowledge and visibility. I came to Europe through a school program, which was hard to come by once in my life, and I was able to learn more about where I was interested.

Particularly, there was something more exciting because it was the place where big things such as the first and second world war and the industrial revolution occurred. One month's life in London was really a joy and a hard day's work. It was a pleasure to visit many museums, galleries and beautiful buildings, but I was really distressed by the bad weather and crowded traffic. But I think this experience has given me an opportunity to see the world differently, and I have the idea that I would like to come back to England again if I have an opportunity in the future.

If your character is timid or does not have the courage and is reluctant to go abroad alone, challenge. If you go together, you will be spoken more Korean, and only English speakers will improve their English. The teacher said that you could harvest as much as you invested in English. So please do not be afraid to challenge.

Before I began my senior grade, I had a lot of worries about using almost a month for language training in winter vacation. Employment, graduate school study, research, money and etc... Numerous considerations lay before me. However, while living 25 years, I have been to only China with package tour and felt that in the future, I maybe have no chance to go to Europe. Then, I decided to go to Europe. Frankly speaking, I didn't expect much of a month's English training and culture exchange. It did not make any sense to expect a dramatic change in my English skill, which hasn't been easily improved during nearly 20 years of studying. Therefore, the focus before departure was on touring as much as possible to England and Europe, enjoying culture and experiencing many things about England. However, a month's UAL experience totally changed what I expected before departure.

Cloudy and dirty London landscape

I arrived in London on January 1. I went to Britain via China, but during the flight, visa issues and other problems made me hard and serious, so I had been mentally and physically devastated before arriving in London. The first impression of London, Britain, was 'Is this London?' The first week of London was simply the worst for me, looking forward for valuable trip to London. Everything was contrary to my expectations. The weather made me feel depressed and the streets were littered with trash and dog poop. Greasy foods and English sandwiches made me itchy day by day and eventually, I got an allergy on my face. Having no friends to trip with, I had to deal with a lot of difficulties by myself and all these situations made me hard. So, more than anyone else, I waited for my school start on January 7. I had missed Koreans who can communicate with comfortably.

On January 7, I was very happy to meet the students of UNIST whom I missed so much. I approached to them first and tried to talk with them. However, they already had a group and I could feel awkward attitude. Level testing was done on the first day of school and I was assigned to the intermediate level among five levels. In the intermediate class, there were a lot of students from various countries. The class was consisted of about 15 students from China, Japan, Taiwan, Thailand, France and South Korea. Class contents were not as passive as they were in Korean education. Most of the class contents were made up of conversation and discussion between students. Before starting the class, we simply talked with each other about what happened in the previous day. In the main part of class, we went beyond the set frame and used a variety of materials. The teacher presented interesting topics and we discussed and talked about them so that we could naturally learn the grammar, words and pronunciation parts contained in them. As an art school, I learned somethings which contain both art and language, and once every two weeks, we visited a museum or gallery located near Holborn Station where UAL is located.

The classmates were really the best. It was all thanks to the classmates that enlivened the uncertain and uninteresting London life. Whenever I studied at UAL, I tried to participate the class hard and passionately communicate with students from various countries with poor English skill. Among the class students, Bo, a Thai, especially made my London life a precious memory. She always asked me to go to lunch after class with her boyfriend, Milk, and we visited many interesting places in London. Every Friday, they invited me to a pub and I can meet many friends from various countries. For a month in London, I shared almost every moment with them. I had never imagined that I would be able to have such a great chemistry with a foreigner who doesn't have the same native language. On February 1st, when all the classes were over, we had our last farewells and finally we wept. Later, I went to Barcelona, Spain, where my Korean friend lives, but I still had some regrets and missing about Milk and Bo even in Spain. Finally, on the day of a departure from England to Korea, I went to UAL again to meet them because I had time to spare and we spent the last time in pub and said last good bye in London. This year, they are going to visit Korea and I am also going to visit Thailand when I have time to spare.

If you ask me if I enjoyed my trip to London and culture, I can't honestly say that I enjoyed it. A month's outside experience was not a trip, but a real life. It was lonely and there were many difficulties. However, through UAL, I was able to make foreign friends from various cultures, as well as close friends with a heart. Also, by hanging out with them, I used English not only during class but also daily life. I felt that my speaking and listening skills were improved a lot. Thanks to UNIST's school program, the life in London was not boring and it seems that I was able to make valuable experiences and friends.

I feel like I was quite lucky that it was the night view that I had seen under the clouds after 15 hours of flight. The daytime sky in London, which I saw in my life for a month, was often depressed, so I got a relatively good first impression through the night view. On the evening of January 6, my life in London began with my hopes and apprehension together.

The first school visit was surprisingly smooth considering the differences in traffic in Korea. I had to wait until the university facility was opened after arriving, because it was possible after confirming all the information and the correct route through the Internet before moving. After taking the first step of adapting to life in London through school, a simple orientation took place within the university. The introduction of the facilities and the curriculum in the university was carried out, while the dissemination is taking place through some tests and interviews. The subsequent four-week English program did not differ greatly from the English lectures taught by native English professors at the university. The difference is that the proportion of Koreans who receive lectures is very small, so it is a very fresh experience in terms of long – time conversation with foreigners who are hard to meet. But the most significant activity during the month in London was concentrated on a weekend when there was no English program.

Talking with native speakers and improving my English skills was one of my goals, but the main purpose of my participation in this program and stepping into London was to build a diverse experience abroad. The experience in English is something you can build up in Korea, but I think that your experience in foreign countries will really help you to go on in your life. After arranging the daily schedule considering the time difference, I went around London every weekend and saw many things.

The first place I visited was the landmarks near the River Thames. The moment I looked directly at the giant Tower Bridge, I could truly feel myself entering a different cultural center. At the Tower of London, the first royal palace of the Norman dynasty, I had the opportunity to see the history of another country that I had never seen before.

After that, St. Paul's Cathedral was a shocking sight. The human passion for art and religion, which cannot even be guessed in the way of seeing pictures, has been made on an overwhelming scale. It seems to me that it was a place where photography was forbidden for me to live in for the rest of my life.

In the case of the British Museum, it felt a little quirky before the visit. It was hard to look at this place with a good eye in terms of knowing that the reality came from the historical criminal act of the British Empire. However, when I saw the exhibits, I had to admit the historical preciousness of the place. I think it will be impossible to find treasure halls that have gathered the history of the whole human race in one place like here. I could not go through the entire museum because of the structure that all halls connected to each other without order, but what I saw here would be the densest experience of my life.

I also had the opportunity to visit other various places. Buckingham Palace, the royal residence of the British royal family, and Trafalgar Square in front of the National Gallery, were amazed at the crowds of tourists. The Big Ben clock tower, which was surrounded by construction equipment and only exposed the clock, gave a lot of disappointment. At the Sherlock Holmes Museum and the King's Cross Harry Potter memorial, the landmarks of the British creations, I was able to immerse themselves in the memories of a longtime encounter. The spectacular views of the Westminster Abbey and the aquarium that I visit every time I go abroad have been a great fun.

I have had such a tremendous amount of experience, and it seems like a month has passed so quickly like reminding me. The footsteps of the early morning of February 2 were made light despite the presence of heavy loads. The night view of London, which welcomed me a month ago, was disappearing at the sunrise, and it made me feel like it was saying goodbye to me. I felt that my life in London, which made me so nervous a month ago, made a great ending.

Now that I think about it, I still have a long time in the country and it is hard to believe that I have successfully returned. Most of the time in 2019 was spent in London. Even I am having dream to be in London these days. I think these complex feelings may prove that experience in London has become a big part of my life. Anyhow, it is already a past, and it can be said that it is just one page that is closed. But I'm sure the page will not be meaningless to me, no matter what. Even now, as I write this article, I can feel the traces of London from myself who feel a bit of pain in the adaptation of the time difference. If this experience is meant for me to be eternal, I hope that it will be a brilliant sight when I look back on it in the future.

I went to the University of the Arts London on this winter vacation that is located in the United Kingdom. I left Incheon International Airport on January 6th. I got on the plane with tremendous expectations to improve my English speaking skill.

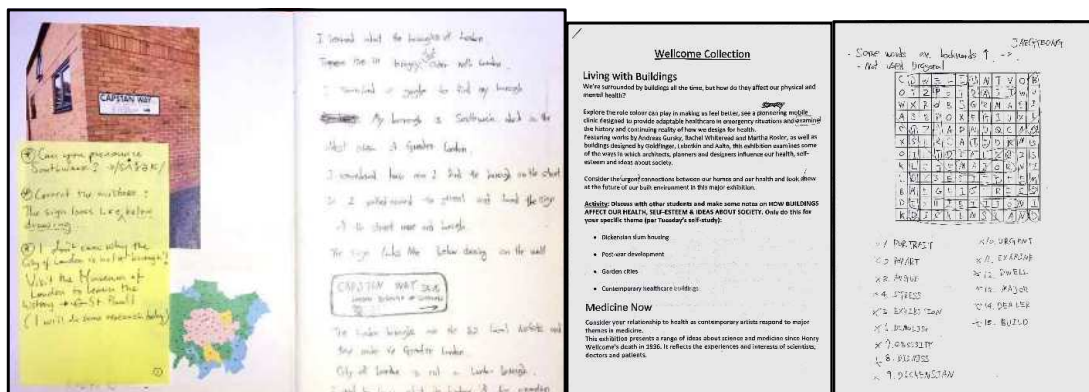

While I had taken the course, I had spoken a lot in English and checked my pronunciation. I had a chance to make the new global friends. In the class, we talked about their own country and our life in London. We took a short trip to gallery and museum every two weeks. That was good place to know about the London. I wrote daily journal to develop my writing skills. The pictures below are my journal and the class material.

The course and teaching was much better than I thought. Content was focused on the speaking, writing and grammar. I learned English through the various activities, games and the trip. so, I could speak English confidently. At first of the class, I was worried about adaptation because, I applied to Culture Exchange Program alone and my personality was difficult to hang out with people who know first time. But It was an excessive worry. I could adapt quickly to the class. I had gained confidence about mix with global friends.

UAL is a united university in London, specializing in arts, design, fashion. It is university confederation of six arts colleges and largest university for art and design in Europe. It is a world Top 6 university for art and design according to the QS World University Rankings. The college runs foundation and language courses for foreign students. There were many students who are taking a class in art and design in the Language Center.

The pictures below are the UAL Language Center building near the Holborn station and the surroundings

For example, first, I learned about the difference between British and American English. Typically, there are some vocabulary difference. Sweater is called Jumper in British English. Using the same English language is very similar, but culturally very different things have developed.

Second, I learned about the boroughs of London. Tanyeem, the teacher of UAL said about the borough. A borough is an administrative division in various English-speaking countries, such as Gangnam-gu and Songpa-gu in Seoul, South Korea. The place where I lived for a month is Southwark which is the oldest area of Greater London.

I met some people who is studying Arts and Design as well as people in UNIST or other university in Korea. Through these friends, I could broaden my knowledge of life and I could be learned about the history of arts by friends.

In the Tate Modern, I could watch works of art. The most impressive work is 'Wonderland 2016'. It is a short video focusing on a young boy who escaped the Syria with his family. The author of this work is Erkan Ozgen. This video shows a boy named Muhammad. He was try to talk what he had witnessed. Since he is deaf and unable to speak, he used his body to explain the horrible scenes of war. This work shows the power of communicating without words and asks us to confront the human consequences of the conflict in Syria.

Tate Modern's Art works are mainly made up of modern art. The collection of Tate Modern was mostly from the 20th century. Tate Modern has divided the art collections into four themes, landscape, still life, nude, and history to show how each art was transformed in a history. This method of approach to the art evaluated that the center of modern art has shifted from New York to London.

I studied modern arts which I don't know. The size of gallery is extremely big, so I couldn't see all of the collections. London is one of the biggest historical cities in the world. For this reason, there are various tourist attractions in the London.

I'm so proud and thankful to be able to apply for this program in UNIST. Also, I'm very happy to make some foreign friends. I will never forget this great experience.

December 27, 2018, I arrived at Heathrow Airport from Incheon International Airport. I imagined a 39 days schedule and it was so awesome.

Since the language program was scheduled on January 7, I planned to go to other cities outside London before that. I went with 3 friends and I decided to take on the Brighton plan and the rest of my friends decided to take on Oxford and Cambridge.

Brighton has a lot to see. Seven Sisters, Pier, High View Tower and various markets. The Seven Sisters was extremely windy, but it was so beautiful that I could not close my mouth when I actually saw the scenery. And the British Airways 360 is the name of a prospect tower that looks like a UFO and remembers it as a unique structure that can climb up like an elevator and see the prospect.

And on December 31, we went back to London because there was a New Year fireworks festival in London Eye. I was tired of waiting for 4 hours to see fireworks, but it was worth seeing as I waited and it was so good that I greeted the New Year in London.

After that, I spent in Oxford and Cambridge until January 6th. In Oxford I have seen covered markets and colleges. The covered market was impressive and the shakes and cookies were delicious.

There was an activity in Cambridge that we could see by boat. It was called Ponting, and I could hear college bridges, named reasons and history through the boatman.

On January 7, I took a placement test for the language program. The next day I got a placement and met classmates. When we talked, all of our friends were kind, and their stories were all interesting. Because they came from different countries, they were able to indirectly experience various cultures. Our class was friends from China, Taiwan, Japan, Thailand and Korea. I wanted to listen to the lesson focused on speaking when I received the class placement. Because it was the program I wanted. Fortunately, when I talked to my friends, the more I share, the more confident I am about speaking. Although it may not be grammatical or pronounciative, it is not a problem in communication. In this part, the teacher helped me a lot. So it seems to have grown more through this program.

I have seen many things in London. I first saw Tottenham and Chelsea's EFL Cup games on January 9th. I am a fan of Chelsea but I went to see the game to support Son. On the way, I met the YouTube channel "Shoot For Love" by chance, interviewed and took pictures. A few days later I actually came out on YouTube and it was a really amazing experience. I purchased Sonny uniform and cheered the game. Though he did not do well as expected, the atmosphere of the stadium itself was really fun.

And I visited several museums and galleries. Although I visited the British Museum, the Natural History Museum, the Science Museum, the V & A Museum, the London Museum, and the National Gallery, all of which were lacking in background knowledge, I think it was a good time to be interested in the areas that I was not interested in.

I also visited the Soccer Stadium Tour and the Sky Garden. It was nice to be able to go to the Chelsea team's home stadium and visit the museum. It was much better to see Chelsea's Champions League title and see the history of Chelsea. I have a passion for cheering in the future, and when I come to London next time, I will watch the game at the Chelsea home stadium. The Sky Garden is an indoor garden on the top floor of the building. It was really nice to have a brunch with a beautiful view on top of the building.

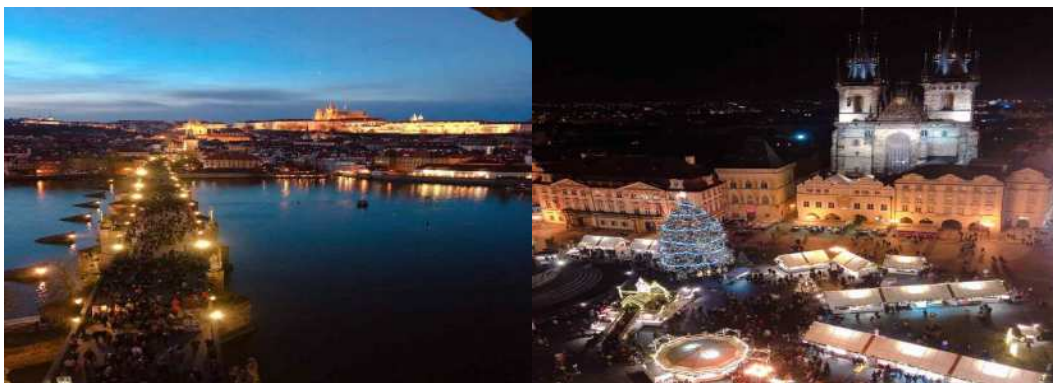

I was so sorry to have to leave with my friends after the last 39 days. I was so sad that I said "I'll miss you" more than 30 times. Through this program, my English skills have improved, of course, but I became more friendly with many friends and it was a more meaningful experience.

I applied the winter culture exchange program. I decided to travel around the Europe, because I had thought that it will be a good experience to have a long journey in other countries and it was a chance for that. I started my journey on 19th December 2018 at Vienna, Austria. Vienna was a hometown of Beethoven and very famous with Opera. Also, there were so many nice paintings like 'Kiss' of Gustav Klimt. However, the reason that I chose Vienna as a first city of the trip was a Christmas Market. I saw a very beautiful and amazing Christmas Market in Vienna. They sold many decoration products and foods. I bought hot wine in there. I could know that Christmas is very important day for them. I moved to Budapest, Hungary. It was bad to trip because, that was a Christmas eve and day. I expected the beautiful Christmas, but Europeans prefer to stay in their house in Christmas holidays. The only memory in Budapest was only night view. The next city was Prague, Czech. Prague had a very beautiful landscape. It felt like a medieval city. Also, the Kozel beer was very delicious. However, there were not so many things to do in this city, too. If I didn't go in Christmas season, that would be a little boring.

In 30th December 2018, I moved to London because of my program and the New Year count down at London Eye. I went there with my friend. We could get the tickets for this show from a blog named 'Eurang'. It was a great party. Many popular pop songs of 2018 were played 5 hours before the firework at 12 pm. It was very fun and we enjoyed with many people. The firework was amazing. It was a best starting of New Year. Also, in the noon of New Year's Day, there was a big parade. So many people were playing parade. We traveled many places like National Gallery, Seven Sisters, Notting Hill, Sherlock Holmes house and Tower bridge. Then, in 6th January 2019, I moved to the house nearby Surrey Quays station. The house was very large and clean. Also, there were a Lidl which is a big grocery store and a McDonald's. It was good to live. I started my English Program since 7th January 2019. On first day of the program in UAL, I had an orientation and a test for classification of class. I was assigned to the intermediate course. Since from second day, I started my English class. There were 6 Koreans 3 Chineses, 3Japaneses and 1 Thai and 1 French people. Class was not so difficult but fun, because the teachers encouraged us to have a lot of conversations not just theory. I spent glorious days in UAL playing with classmates. I went to Wembley Stadium to see Son HeungMin's match, drink at Shoreditch, visit the British Museum, see the musicals, 'The Phantom of the Opera' and 'Lion King' and do many other things. London was very harmonious with modern and vintage things. My favorite places were the Sky Garden, Notting Hill., and the British Museum. Also, the musicals were magnificent. However, the foods in London were not so good. The traditional food that I ate was only fish & chips. There were not so many distinctive foods in London.

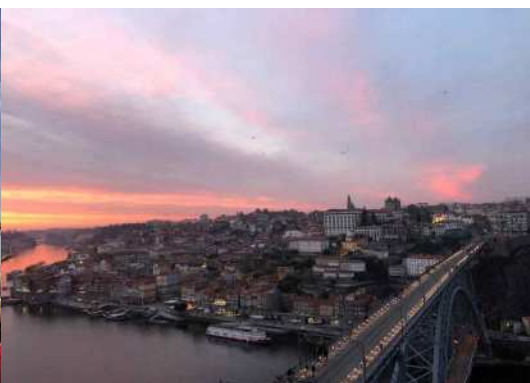

Also, it was so sad that the Big Ben was under construction. Anyway, I think London is one of my favorite cities because of its attraction. 4 weeks were gone so fast and I could get the certificate.

In 2nd February 2019, I moved to the Brussel, Belgium. It was a very small city. There were not so many things to do in here, but waffles and potato fries were delicious. Also, Brugge and Gent which are nearby Brussel were good to see. After Brussel, we went to Amsterdam. Amsterdam was very strange city. Drugs and prostitution are legal in this nation. Therefore, I could smell drugs in everywhere. Of course, I didn't do that. My favorite places in Amsterdam were Van Gogh museum and Zaanse Schans which is famous as windmill village. The next city was Munich, Germany. It was famous with beer. We drunk a lot of beers in there. It was so delicious. I thought that I don't want to drink Korean beer anymore. After Munich, I went to Barcelona and my friend went to Prague. Barcelona was the city of Gaudi. I could see many amazing buildings of Gaudi. His structures were very natural and sensitive. He didn't make roughly even in very small things of buildings. Sagrada Familia was touching to me. At the last of journey, I visited Porto, Portugal. I think it was also one of my favorite cities. The port wines were very delicious and the landscape of Douru river and Dom Luis 1 Bridge was fantastic. The sunset in Dom Luis 1 Bridge is indelible. It finished my journey perfectly.

From this journey, I realized that the world is very wide and there are so many things to enjoy. It made me have one more purpose of life. Also, I felt that I became more independent. I will never forget this long journey and appreciate to the college that gives me a chance to experience this.

I participated in a one month overseas cultural exchange program at UAL University in London. This gave me a very fresh experience. The culture of England was so different from the culture of our country and there were many kinds of people living there. I am going to create a report with two categories of travel and lessons.

In less than a month, I took a trip every couple of weeks with my classmates to experience the culture of London and take pictures of beautiful scenery and monuments. On my first trip to UAL, I traveled to the V&A museum where is exhibited the works created by cultures from around the world and the Hyde Park that the largest park in London.

The photo on the side is the white porcelain of Korea in the V & A Museum. In this way, I was able to see what kind of culture the various countries of the world lived in this museum.

Especially, I had a very nice experience in Hyde Park. I could see a variety of ducks in the park. In my country, It is unthinkable to see animals like ducks, parrots, etc, in the park. It's only possible in the zoo! This day is very special day to me.

On my second trip to UAL, I took a tour of the Museum of London. In this museum, I could see the whole history of London. I was also surprised that London had collapsed by World War II, and I thought it was great to overcome it. On weekends, I went to Seven Sisters, with a very nice hill, in Brighton with my friends. It was very strongly windy and Seven Sisters was too far to walk from the bus station. I was very hard before going to the top of the hill. But, as soon as I saw the great scenery, my heart was beating very fast. It is one of the most beautiful things I had ever done. I took a picture and felt free with my friends. The warm bread that was sold at the bakery at the bottom of the Seven Sisters is very delicious. I want to go there one more time!

When I came to England I thought I should not miss watching football games. So I went to watch the games of Tottenham Hotspurs belonging to South Korea player Son Heung Min with my friends. The picture on the side is the appearance of the stadium 15 minutes before the game.

The lessons I received from UAL were also very enjoyable. I took an intermediate level course. I took classes with students from various countries such as China, Japan, and Thailand and I was able to communicate with them a lot because the class was focused on speaking. In here, so I could make some many different kinds of friends. My teacher in the UAL made to write a journal every week, so I traveled so many places in London for my high-quality journal. In writing a journal, the teacher introduced me to restaurants in London. The meat pie shop that my teacher recommended was really good. Though this lesson, I was able to improve my conversational skills and understand the British culture.

My culture exchange program was started at 07/01/19, but I arrived UK at 27/12/18 with my 4 friends, who are seek-ho, zion and jin-young. At first, I traveled to Brighton. I visited Seven Sisters by bus. It was strong windy and little cold. I walked about 40 minutes to reach the place. The seven sisters is famous cliff. It was so beautiful and nice. The wide fields made me relax and calm.

And then, I moved to London at 31/12/18 to spend my last time of 2018 year. At night, exactly 9 PM, I went to London Eye to enjoy the firework for commemorating the last day of year. The firework is amazing and awesome. There were a lot of various people such as children, grandmother, friends, boy/girlfriends or policeman, guards, singer etc. I and my friends enjoyed the best time to welcome the New Year.

Next, I left to Oxford. In there, I visited The Church of St.Mary The Virgin and Oxford University. I imagined that I studied in Oxford library. In the street, I saw the Oxford students, they look like smart. Finally, I went to Cambridge. In Cambridge, I took the punting. The 13 people (including me) rode the punting and driver rowed with his oar. By rowing, the driver explained the history and university of Cambridge city. I practiced the listening English and understanding their culture. It is cloudy but not rainy. I wanted the sunny day but I appreciate that not rainy. It was fun.

At February 6, 2019, I returned to London to study English and culture of UK in university of arts London. The first day of school, I took the simple exam about my writing and speaking skills and got some notices about living and study. And the last, the teacher introduced the building that the classroom, café, teacher's room and computer room for students.

For a month, I studied with Claire teacher and 12 students. The students were from Korea, Japan, Columbia, China and Taiwan. The teacher made lots of opportunity to each student to speak English. So I can practice the English speaking and she told me my mistakes of speaking or grammar parts. I tried to correct and I record my mistakes in my notes. The class is progressing by speaking with partner. We ask the plan, past happen, weather, travel, family, own city, etc. It was useful to improve my speaking skills. I enjoyed the class time. And also there were some homework. The homework is writing my journal and reading a book. In journal, I wrote my diary that what I ate, where I went, how was it. By writing my day, it was useful to review my travel life and it made me more deliberately. After the class, I felt the confidence to speak English. This experience gave me the courage. I really want to join this program (or similar program) again because it was so valuable to me.

1. Introduction

From early January to early February, which is not short period in some perspective, I learned English at UAL. It was such a good time as I have never spent my time for nothing. The class consists of 16 students, a relatively small number. It's different from normal English classes in Korea: you interact with each other constantly throughout the class time. Because the class was so active, I have memorized all the classmates' name on the first day, even though their names were hard to memorize due to difficult pronunciation because they come from different countries. I had a class every two weeks by visiting a museum or an exhibition. It was interesting because this field class was also something I had never experienced in Korea.

2. What I have gained during the Program

1) Good English Skill

I learned to speaking, listening, grammar, writing, etc. directly or indirectly during the class. The most I learned and improved my skill was speaking part. Vigorous classroom activities led to speaking in English throughout the whole three-hour class. Thanks to these activities, I am no longer afraid to talk in English.

2) Global Thinking

In my class, there were classmates who were from Brazil, Japan, France, China, Taiwan, Thailand. Because classmates were the students whom their hometown is so different, their appearance, style of thinking and values that they keep precious were totally different from each other. So, I was always careful about my behavior and words and these things made me gain Global Thinking: which is flexible and humble thinking. I tried to break my prejudices and always try to understand their culture. In that way, I have realized that my classmates were all good friends

3. Cons

1) Short Period for Learning

At the beginning I thought one month would be enough. However, I realized that it was not, and it was quite short period for learning English. I think 3 months would be perfect for the one who want to improve their speaking skills.

2) Some unclear explanations in class

During the class the instructor often explained English easier way compare to the Korean English course. Because it was very intuitive, it was easy to understand and easy to memorize. However, some part of the learning was unclear and I think it was because the instructor is native speaker, they feel difficult to explain their languages' principle because they are so used to their language.

4. Conclusion

Even though some points are cons, I would say that this course is so much beneficial than other English courses that I have experienced. Someone could say, "why do you learn English in foreign country? You can learn English in Korea in cheaper way" then I would like to reply, "The class you can experience in U.K is much more fun and effective so at the end you will never be afraid of learning English. In addition, you can get other beneficial things that are important in your life."

This was the one of the most impressive, helpful experience in my whole life. Actually, I could not understand that someone who change their lives by overseas travel. However, I can understand now. It changed my thought, belief and values.

I arrived in London on January 1st in 2019 with my friends. It was about a week before that the start of the General English course in University Arts of London. We went to London early to adjust to the time difference and to experience London life before starting the course. At that period, we visited a lot of places which are very famous inside or outside of London. I liked the British Museum and Oxford University the most. The British Museum was too huge that we could only see five galleries. My favorites were Egypt and Mummy gallery. I have been interested in Egyptian culture since I was young. I was really impressive to see Egyptian artifacts that I saw only in the book. They were very mysterious and amazing. However, on the one hand, we could seen how often the abuse of the past in Britain was due to the fact that so many Egyptian artifacts are in London. This museum would be great help to the knowledge of the whole of mankind, but the inconsistency that arises from the abduction of somebody made me sad. Oxford University was located outside London so we visited there through a tour guide from Korean. We learned a lot of history about Oxford University through guide. I was surprised that Oxford University has thirty-eight independent Colleges. This concept was very unfamiliar because it is not in Korea. We visited only a few of the thirty-eight colleges, of which Christ Church College was most impressive. The buildings of the college were so beautiful and I could feel their history through their atmosphere. I thought that I want to go to such a beautiful university at that moment.

After five days arriving London, I went to the my homestay house. Actually, I was very nervous about homestay because all of my friends decided to stay in the sharehouse and only I decided to stay at homestay. However, such anxiety soon disappeared after meeting my homestay family. They were really big family. I cannot remember all of them but there were about ten family members. They were very kind and took care of me all the time. They understood my terrible English and listen very carefully. And also they tried to speak slowly for me. I had a great time with them for a month. On the last week, I prepared the Korean barbeque for them. I bought the pork belly, Ssamjang, some vegetables and cooked for them. They really liked my Korean barbeque. If I had a more time, I would stay with them more. I promised with them that I will visit their house if I have a chance to go to London again.

I will talk about my class. At the first class, we took some tests to assign a class level. We took speaking and writing test. Unfortunately, at that time, I had a broken finger and I took a cast on my right hand. So it was really difficult to take a writing test and I could not perform my whole knowledge. Finally I was assigned to Intermediate class.

At the class, we had two teachers : Tanyim and Julia. They had exactly different teaching style but both of them were wonderful teacher. Tanyim was focused on pronunciation and its principle. Actually she majored in linguistics so she explained the principle of English pronunciation very easily and logically. Julia was focused on grammar and writing. She taught us grammar very simply but logically. Actually, we can learn English grammar in Korea, but her explanation was more logical and primitive than Korean Education. They were very different, but one thing in common was that they considered communicating with other classmates very important. In other words, they considered the speaking is the most important thing.

Most of our classmates were from Asia, such as Japan, China, Taiwan, Vietnam and Thailand. Some of them are from France and Brazil. We had very variety nationalities. So I could have very interesting conversation with them. Mostly, we talked about each of culture. Also we all had different majors. Especially Korean from UNIST, were majored Engineering or Science. However, the others who were from other countries were majored fashion, international relationship and something about arts. At UNIST, I only met people with similar interests. But at University Arts of London, I could meet and talk to people who were interested in entirely different fields and it was very interesting and fun.

We almost had class inside the university building. But twice, we went to outside and visited the gallery and a museum. The name of gallery was Wellcome Collection. We saw a gallery about the development of the architectures in London. Unfortunately, I could not be interested in that gallery, however, I was interested in Medicine and Health gallery at the same place. Actually I was majored in Biology so I could not ignore that gallery.

And we visited the Museum of London. At that museum, there were a lot of exhibitions about history of London. It was very huge. My favorite exhibition was about Great Fire. In 1666, there were great fire in London. Because of this fire, a lot of laws were changed or added in London. One big fire changed the whole society. I was very surprised at this point.

We took a final test at last week. There were speaking and writing tests. The speaking test was very interesting. 4~5 students made a group and discuss about some topics. At that time teacher did not participate in discussion but just listen and check the grade. I think it was the most ideal English speaking test. After the test, we checked our own grade one by one. I am ashamed to say this, but I got the highest grade in the class. My teacher told me that I can go to the next level class. I was so happy for improving my English skill and got a confidence about English.

After finish the whole course, I visited some other countries in Europe with my friends. We visited France, Swiss, Germany and Czech. They were all nice and beautiful country. And each of them had very unique charm. France was very fashionable and fancy, Swiss had amazing nature, Germany had great bear and food and Czech has beautiful architecture. I cannot choose which one was best.

The experience in each country was very unique and I am sure these experiences must be helpful for my whole life. I learned how to treat strange people and get a confidence. If I have a chance to go to Europe again, I want to visit other places and accumulate the new experiences.

Hello. I am Jang Yoojin, who has been studying abroad during winter vacation.

I conducted a program at UAL which is General English 15. After the end of the semester, I studied simple conversation exercises and the history of United Kingdom. In addition, I looked for what UAL is and looked forward to an overseas study program.

I started orientation on the first day of admission to UAL, and started the class on January 8, the next day. In the first class, we introduced ourselves to other foreign friends, and during that time we had time to get to know each other.

The lessons in UAL were taught in a way that the teacher gave you the time to talk about topics or questions with the classmates, giving me the topic or asking questions, not just the teacher's explanation. As a result, I was able to improve my English ability by speaking with other friends in English, and I was able to learn about foreign friends' thoughts and about friends' culture. And the teacher told me about the grammar I was having wrong with the conversation.

One of the activities I remembered while taking classes at UAL was SCHOOL TRIP. We went to a place called SCHORDITH, where we took a place and explained each one before we went. I explained OLD SPITALFIELD MARKET. I was confident that I was explaining and listening to explanations of the places my other friends were researching. I was confident about my English-speaking skills while I was studying at UAL. In particular, there was a sense of discomfort and burden in speaking or giving speeches in English, but this program has reduced the fear of speaking in English and wrong grammar.

One of the things I felt when I traveled to the UK was that the UK is a country that loves tradition and loves art. Even if in buildings, you can see traditional British architecture, and when you see the cathedrals and palaces, you can understand more about England. In particular, I was surprised that museums, such as the British Museum and Tate Modern, were open for free. Thanks to this, I was able to see museums not in a day. That means I can see the museums every day! This time I went to Tate Modern for the first time to get a closer look at contemporary art. At that time, I got into the charm of modern art and went to Tate Modern twice. This time I went to Britain and went to Tate Modern for the first time to get a closer look at contemporary art. At that time, I got into the charm of modern art and went to Tate Modern twice. Each museum or museum has its own many art works and all the works have their own charms. Also, the street mural paintings I saw when I went to Brick Lane were very impressive.

One of the places I was impressed with in England was the Royal Greenwich Observatory. I was very touched and impressed as I passed over the prime meridian which became the center of the longitude. I stepped on the center of the world, I admired the greatness of the England which made the center of the world, and I could not hide the pleasure of seeing the letter 'Seoul' written on it.

The idea of traveling England was that Britain was a terrible and terrifying country. Having visited the British Museum, the Natural History Museum, or the Victoria & Albert Museum, I was amazed at how powerful and shattered the kingdom was in seeing the many relics and trophies that the UK brought back in the past. Especially when I went to the British Museum, I could see countless works and even I thought that England was really bad.

One of the most impressive buildings I have ever seen in England was the Natural History Museum and Tower Bridge. This museum was very magnificent and beautiful in appearance when it was seen in the Natural History Museum.

The Tower Bridge was one of my favorite places, and it was a very beautiful and diverse place to see the daytime view, the night view, and the view through the Tower Bridge. The Tower Bridge seen during the day was able to see the harmony of the unique colors of the Tower Bridge and the beauty of the building, and the night view of Tower Bridge at night was so impressive that I could forget the cold days. If other people go to UAL for overseas study, the first place to recommend is the Tower Bridge at night. And I would like to recommend you to cross the Tower Bridge by all means.

I was able to feel healing in Hyde Park and St. James Park, which were recommended by classmates at UAL. I could not help but healing the swans and ducks as they passed through the crowd with moving freely and the people who let the swans and duck go naturally without interrupting. The lake in the park and the swans and ducks that relaxed on it were truly unforgettable healing. It was a happier day because the sunshine was a warm day.

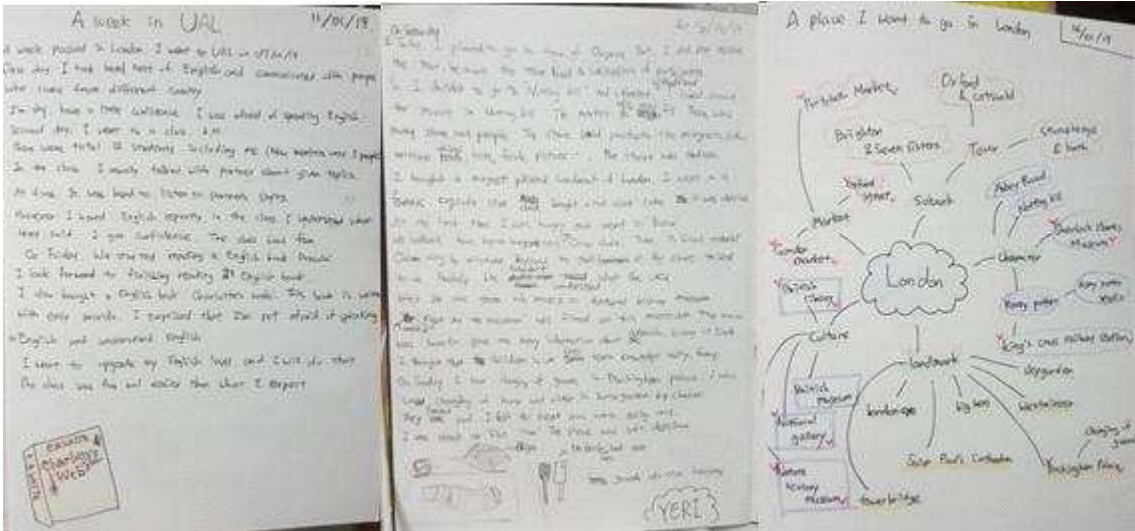

When I first went to England, I was very worried about rumors that the food was tasteless and the rumors that it was very expensive. I was able to save a little on meals by cooking dinner with friends at Shared House, which I got from my school. Unless it was an exceptional day, we ate dinner with Carbonara, steak, etc. Lunch was served outside after school. While the British traditional foods such as Fish and Chips and Black Pudding were unfavorable, some of London's favorite foods were tasted. In particular, the Indian curry restaurant near the school was very unique and delicious, and there was a restaurant which serve its unique pancakes. Especially, the Korean house called 'zipbab' in front of the school was really tasty!!

It was at the hostel that there was an inconvenience when I attended school at UAL. It may be the rule of the hostel, but every Saturday the host's staff cleaned the toilets in each room, and this person could open the door without a person in the room. Of course, these are staffs and they will go out after just finishing their works, but it is unfortunate that someone could come in to my room when I am not there. So, I gave this to UAL teacher, and I was able to solve it after that.

I spent four weeks in UAL and really had the same time as I dreamed. It was a good time to get in touch with my foreign friends who met there, and I was confident that I could speak English fluently, as for me who was not confident in English. Living in London for a month, I was able to directly feel their diet, lifestyle, and culture, and it was a very, very meaningful time to learn a lot. Thank you!

The first class is exciting in UAL (University of the Arts London). On the first day, I did a level test. The tests are a writing test that introduced me and why I came to the ual and speaking test with teacher (Topic of the speaking is free.). After my test, we waited for the other's test to finish. While waiting, I had a conversation in English with my designated partner about given topic. When the tests were all over, we made a team with six people from more than three different countries. And each team solved a few questions, and the winner was given jelly. The winner was our team! The jelly was 'HARIBO' Whether my pronunciation is weird or not, my partner listened, understood and responded to me. It gave me great confidence to continue the conversation and it kept the conversation going. When the answer to a given question was over, we kept on talking, asking each other question. Perhaps it has been the only class that has not been scolded for gossiping.

After a week, my teacher gave me an assignment, reflective journal. It is similar to thinking dairy. The subject was free, but at first, I was given the subject that what the week was like in UAL and what we did on the weekend. Also, I written about a place I want to go in London. I submitted the journal the next day, and my teacher gave me an advices and corrections.

One day, we went to the Tate Britain Gallery instead of the class with the teacher and the students. We enjoyed the work, picked one impressive piece, and wrote a journal about it.

The work I chose was 'A view of Greenwich from River'. Artist of the work is Canaletto. This view shows the river front at Greenwich with the Royal Naval Hospital, and the Queen's house. The reason I chose this piece of the art I went to there, Greenwich, Royal observatory some time ago. I saw the Queen's House, and entered museum. The painting, which was painted in 1750, has the same scenery as it is now.

In class, I had to choose the building. The building is Tower Bridge that was amazing design. The Tower Bridge was designed a type that combined bascule and suspension bridge. The bridge is one of landmarks in London. When the large ship passes the bridge, the lower bridge opens. Also, the bridge shines at night. That is beautiful. I went to Tower Bridge, and went up tower bridge exhibition. It was surprising the mechanism of the bridge. It's interesting that Horace Jones and John Wolfe Barry came up with this design.

I think I'm very lucky to have this experience with a school scholarship. Even though my English has not improved since it was a month, I think that having confidence in English and experienced ordering and listening in English, whether necessary or not. It will be the foundation for my English study in the future. It was more meaningful and enjoyable than I thought.

I felt uncomfortable in the first class, because I rarely use English, and I'm not good at English. It was hard because I couldn't remember vocabulary well when I was talking, and I couldn't understand what other people were saying because I did not hear English well. Also, I felt stuffy. Even if I understood, I answered in simple English like Okay, Good, Amazing etc. However it was more fine and fun than I thought

The next day, I was assigned a class and the class was pre-intermediate. There were 12 students in the class, including me. Fortunately, there was a friend in the same class. UNIST students were four people. Others were Japanese, Chinese, Taiwanese, and Colombians. Teacher's name is Claire.

We had a speaking class with our designed partners. Then we made announcement on the basis of the conversation. When I announced, teacher and other students listened to me. The teacher corrected our grammar and pronunciation. Most of our classes were speaking classes, but once they learned about grammar and pronunciation, the exact pronunciation and meanings of a word.

I participated in culture exchange program and I studied General English in UAL.

For a month I studied English in intermediate class. Our class do many activities for speaking.

I could improve my speaking skill. I could meet many foreign friends from a lot of countries.

Talking about their country is very interesting activity. We had a field trip to V&A museum, Hyde park and museum of London. I could see many displays in museum and I could study history of London. They have so many differences with Korean museums and parks. It is good experiences in my life.

Except studying time, I looked around London. I visited many football stadiums in London. Emirates stadium, Wembley Stadium and Stamford Bridge are major London football stadiums. Emirates stadium is home stadium of Arsenal, Stamford Bridge is home stadium of Chelsea and Wembley Stadium is home stadium of England football national team. I watched football game of Tottenham Vs Manchester United. In Wembley stadium and I took guide tour in other Stadiums.

I could experience atmosphere of England football. It is so energetic and exciting.

I think I would never feel it in my life.

Because 90000 people is in stadium, if they scream at same time its sound is impressive however In Korea, People don't go to football stadium to watch football game so It is not easy to experience atmosphere like that.

In culture exchange program, I met many foreign friends.

I could talk about each country with my foreign friends. I had much curiosity

in other countries. I asked many questions and they responded well.

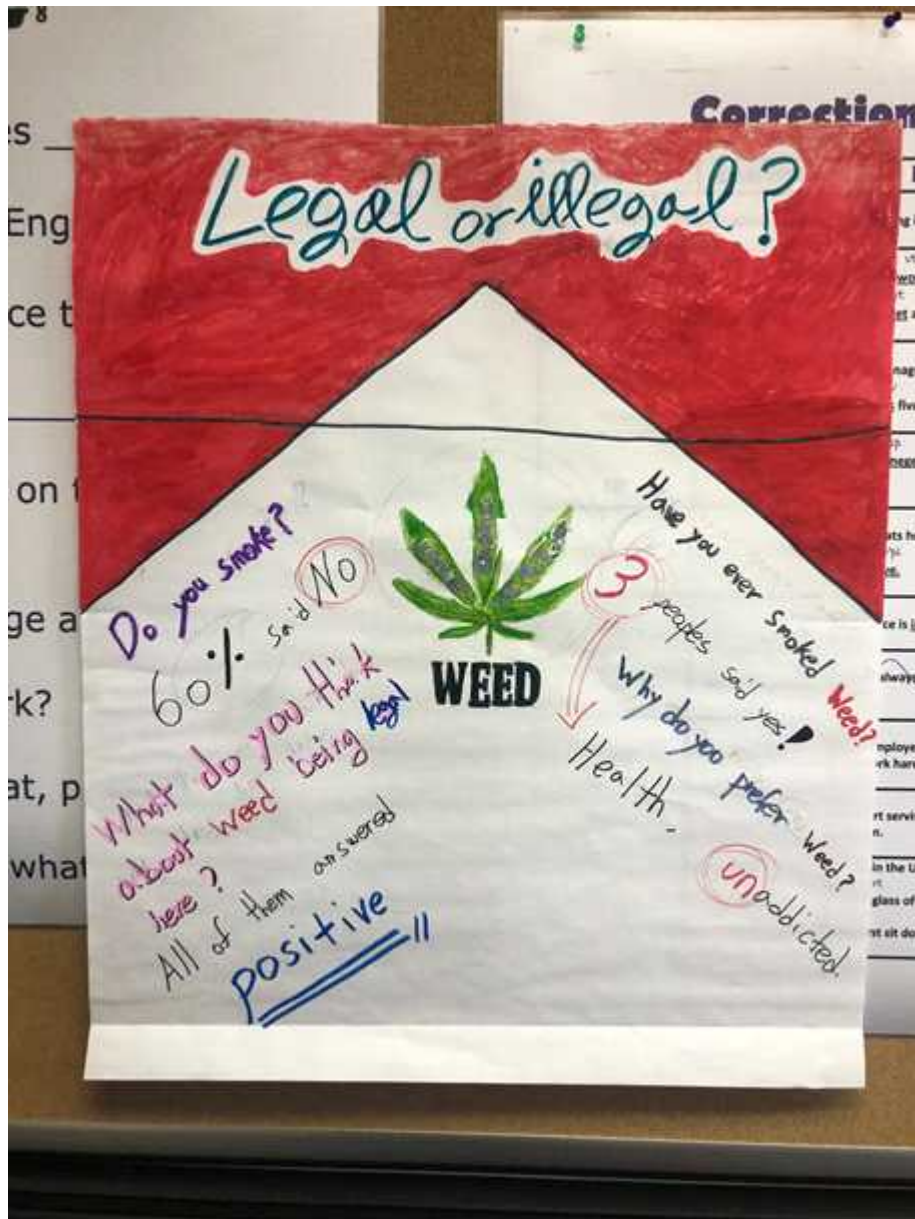

In class, Japanese, Chinese and Thai friends talked to me about their countries.

For example, When they use phone, they type Chinese in English first and translate Chinese letter. It is so shocking to me who use Korean letter. We only use Korean letter in our phone. Another example is that foreign friends are shocked by Korean army culture. In China, Chinese should do duty regardless of gender.

When I talk about Korean culture that Only men must do duty, Chinese friend said he cannot understand about Korean culture. Through these cases, I realized we have many differences between other countries.

In this program I learned American culture. For example, some idiom, expression and food about America. And there are many program that we can conversate with American. So we can learned culture of teenager and some sports. The main topic of this program is interview.

before I go to America, I have a lot of stereotype about America. So I want to check my stereotype is correct or wrong. I thought that almost people who lives in America have smoked weed. Because I want to check my stereotype, I chosed smoking as a topic. And I interviewed 10 peoples. And asked 10 questions. So I got some answer about my stereotypes. Only 4 peoples said I usually smoked weed. But one of them doesn't smoke tabaco only weed. And all of people who I interviewed has positive thinking about weed.

The CCP is good to learning English and some conversation skills. I think Korean student doesn't have confidence of English so they afraid to use English when they talk with foreigner. And I also afraid. But during this program I can have confidence about English

I went to UC Davis. Program I applied for is Communication and Culture Program, or CCP. This program was for 4 weeks. It was my first experience traveling alone. I was so nervous when I first arrived at US. Fortunately, most Americans I met including host families were really kind. They helped me every time when I asked something with my poor English. This time, CCP has 3 sections. I was in section C. My classmates were Chinese, Japanese, Peruvian and Korean. One memorable project in my class was cultural research program. Each one of us choose one cultural topic such as marriage or sports and interview 10 different Americans. Based on their responses, we made posters and presented in front of class and exhibited those at graduation. Me and Peruvian classmate Manuel were granted an opportunity to speak in front of everyone at graduation. I was suspicious when I leave Korea, concerning what can I do at America, but now I find that this one month was wonderful.

It was really special experience to me. This culture exchange program gave to me many cons and change. Before I did exchange program, I always afraid about talking with foreigner friends in UNIST. And in the class of UNIST, I was really hard to announce in English. But, after this course, I could get confidence of talking in English. I remember until now “ English is not your first language, It’s your second language. So it is obvious that you are not good at English. “ by my tutor teacher of Leeds university.

And this program gave me to chance to make various foreigner students like Japanese, Chinese, Italian, Taiwanese, Thai. I could feel and exchange each other’s culture. Italian friend made pasta to me. And Japanese friends made sushi and Chinese friends recommended their delicious food to me.

Especially, relationship of Korea and Japan is not good now. Even though Japanese students and Korean students were really good relationship. Good relationship between people don’t depend on nationality. This program makes me grow more. Thank you for UNIST about giving this chance to me.

I volunteered the culture exchange program during winter vacation. In university of Leeds, General English program was operated for 3 weeks and I attended that class. The main topic of it was films so I learned some useful vocabularies and expressions about films. With this basic information, I wrote a film review about my favorite film 'Neighbor Totoro' and got a feedback from my teacher at second week. At last week, I made a vlog which talks each other about their favorite films with my friend. The program in Leeds University was interesting as it was full of useful activities and my teachers give lots of helps to improve my English abilities.

In Korea, I have studied English at schools but there were little opportunities to talk with international students for me. This program made lots of chances to speak English all day such as chatting with friends, making a presentation in front of friends and interviewing some people. Although it was unskilled and difficult at first, I get used to speaking English and my speaking becomes skilled. After some challenges, I felt some confidence about speaking English and got familiar with international students.

Also, the experience in Leeds University was special for me. The students in my class were 5 Korean and 5 Japanese. At first, talking with international students was scary as their culture was different from me. But some exciting activities in the class made lot of opportunities to have conversations each other and it makes me understand different cultures. By meeting some friends in Leeds University, I shared some cultures and enjoyed together. For example, going to a café and cinema or making a farewell party with Japanese friends was so impressive that I really wanted to stay more in Lead University.

Actually I have never been to Europe countries. Thanks to this program, I could go to UK at first time and spend time studying English and their cultures. It helps me improve my English abilities, experience culture and make international friends. I really appreciate this program and I could get some wonderful memories for 3 weeks.

Maybe, most of students have a difficulty at TOEIC listening test by different diction. Usually, Korean are used to American English diction and pronunciation. However, in England, there were various people's dictions, so I need to adapt for them. In fact, the diction can be different even the people are from United Kingdom because there're 4 kingdoms in UK: England, Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland and their dictions are slightly different. Also, in ULEEDS, there are various classmates from different countries. There were Italian, Chinese, Saudi Arabian, Taiwan, and many Japanese students. Because their dictions were so varied, it took several days to understand their meaning naturally. Of course, I took several days to speak British-close-diction to make the people understanding my words.

To solve this kind of problem, ULEEDS General English program provides free chances to speak with other national students. Every Friday, ULEEDS's language center send a newsletter to all students. It concludes diverse information that help students. There's also useful information for foreign students like me and it shows several events to enhance our English skills or to experience British culture and local community.

During the class, it was a special experience to learn with the previous-generation-students in class. They are a father of a high school student, a husband of someone's, a former Korean government officer, and so on. It was very fresh experience because I could learn and feel their wisdom.

On the other hand, the life in Great Britain was quite hard by cultural and environmental differences. Because ULEEDS locates in higher latitude than Korea, so the sun rises later and falls earlier. By this phenomenon, my bio-rhythm was broken, so I slept at 9 P.M. and woke up at 4 A.M. It was difficult to adapt this unusual afternoon.

Another problem to live in UK is the money. If you want to have your meal outside of your home, you need to pay double or triple of money comparing home-made-food. Thus, I need to make most of dinners myself instead of going to restaurant. Because my scholarship is different with other sponsored students, I used my own money for my accommodation and eating.

However, surprisingly, this behavior helped balancing my health condition. Actually, I had to be careful about nutrition balance in UK due to UK's different nutrition standards. At first week, I hadn't cared about the balance, but I realized that the nutrition standards of UK and those of Korea are quite different. In fact, the difference between UK's salt standard and Korea's one is just 300%. Other standards are also over 120% of Korea's standards at least while the total energy intake is less than Korea's. Of course, there must be differences between a general British body and a general Korean body.

On weekend, we had chance to have a travel to the near city, York, with friends in Leeds. During the weekdays, I traveled the Leeds briefly, but York is different in detail. It has several cultural relics

During 2018.12.30 ~ 3.04, maybe short or maybe long, I had ended my life in Europe and returned to Korea. Thanks to the cultural exchange program and the scholarship that I had at the time of admission, I had many valuable experiences.

When I first went to Leeds in UK, my goal was to make friends with various countries and to improve my English. The University of Leeds has many opportunities because it is a school where international students from different countries come together. First, there were many programs for international students like English commons in UNIST and I participated in the program every day. At a conversation club program talking with a specific topic, we could talk about each goals about why we study English, and at coffee time we talked about free-topics with free cookies and drinks. In general English class, I talked with my friends of the same age and other nationalities about my future, and I could know their troubles and could sympathize it. Because it was a short course, I studied film and TV for three weeks. I had seen a various films presented in the class and learned how to systematically write an overall review on the background, main character, underplot, and plot. I also learned about the site that gathered the various reviews and learned how to write better reviews based on them. I wrote a film review as my first assignment and I was able to improve my writing skills by taking the feedback on the content and grammar from teachers. In the last assignment, Vlog about the film review, I made a video about the film that I chose for 6 to 10 minutes with my classmate. Through this, I was able to practice how to organize my thoughts without a script. I explained the main character of the movie, the plot, the background and the meaning of the film, and I have successfully finished my video work. Through these assignments, I was able to understand common words and expressions that I had not known before, and I learned how to express them in writing and thinking. I also made appointments after school with my classmates to have more conversations, and I could make the better relationship with my friends while having meals and conversations. Talking about the simple and natural topics during meal and in the pub was an effective speaking exercises for me. Through these experiences, I was able to naturally speak what I want to say while traveling.

I think that the meaning of cultural exchanges is to improve the English language skills and literally communicate with each other's culture. I was curious about the culture of other countries, and I always asked friends about their culture, the play culture of the teenager, the culture of drinking and I learned many things. We also made a party with classmates and prepared the food of each country and made time to eat together. I taught Korean food and also had the time to try various foods. It was a really valuable experience. We also had time to get closer together with the city tour around Leeds and we went to Manchester near to Leeds. During hanging out, we went to various places like cathedral, soccer field and pub. I had a lot of conversation and time to get closer each other as I met Korean friends. Through cultural exchange program, I met many friends from many countries and learned about their troubles and culture. Through all of them, I was able to improve my overall English such as speaking my thoughts and grammar.

Through the cultural exchange program, I was not only able to improve English but also able to be a better human being. It was a place I wanted to go to once in Europe and I was able to go to Europe because this program acted as a trigger. I was able to make a plan, run it and succeed on my own journey that was not helped by anyone. I was able to meet a lot of people during the trip, get new stimulation and had time to think about myself during my own time. All of that made me grow more than the past.

I went to the university of Leeds for three weeks, and after I went on a trip for two weeks, I entered Korea on February 9. In conclusion, it was a good experience, and I won't forget the time in Europe.

I went from Incheon to London on January 1st. Because the class started on January 7th, I arrived in England a little early and traveled to London. London looked so cool because I had never been to Europe before. I saw many famous places in London such as the British Museum, London Bridge, Buckingham Palace, and so on.

British food was bad, prices were expensive, and the weather was bad. But London was wonderful. Especially, the best thing about London was soccer game. I watched Manchester United vs Tottenham. Because I like Tottenham, the game was wonderful and I want to come and watch a game again. I also saw Son.

I moved from London to Leeds on January 6. I was worried before the class started. I was not sure if I could participate in the class well because I am not good at English. But the class was so fun! There were a total of 40 students taking general English classes which was divided into three groups of them. There were only Koreans and Japanese in our group.

During three weeks, I became very close with Japanese students. Because Japan and Korea are so similar, Japanese students fit in well with us. We went to play together, ate dinner, and made some important memories. It was too short for 3 weeks. Classes mainly proceeded with questions and answers to each other. I sometimes had homework, and it was fun because the subject of the class was film. The final task was to take a video with a partner talking about three of our favorite movies and post it on YouTube!

Three weeks passed in a flash, and I'm very satisfied with the class. I think I'll miss my teachers and friends in Leeds very much. After class, I traveled to Spain, France, and Turkey. I went to Barcelona in Spain, Paris in France, and Istanbul in Turkey. All three cities were good, but I think Paris was the coolest one. The Eiffel Tower in Paris was much better than I thought. Paris was a fantastic, but the most dangerous city was also Paris. There were so many pickpockets in Paris that we always had to be careful.

Istanbul was different from other cities. In Istanbul, I could see a lot of Islamic culture, it was unusual, and it was safer than I thought.

In conclusion, I have traveled safely, and nothing has been lost. If I have a chance next time, I want to go to language training again.

This culture exchange program was such a great time ever in my life. During this program, I could have various experience and meet valuable people. And I could get some deep thinking related to my future and my relationships. So it was very helpful opportunity to grow up myself and develop my insight.

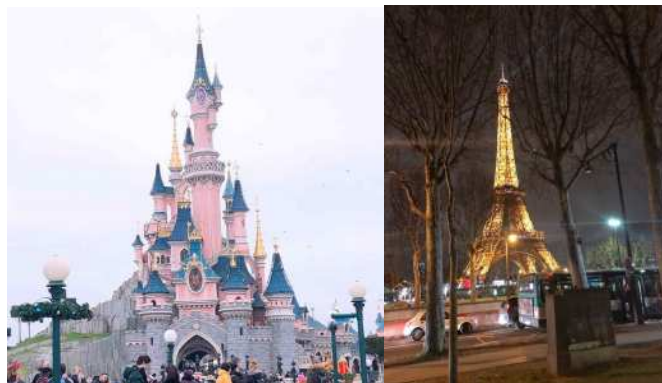

Before I took this general english program, I was in Paris with my classmates. Acturally, I knew them before my journey. But we had more deep friendships through that time. In Paris, I ate a lot of dessert and great bread. I think I had never eaten huge amount of sweet things like in Paris. Most of food did well goes with me.

And I went to very great spaces like Orsey Musem, Eiffel tower, and Disneyland. Especially, when I firest saw the Eiffel tower and the castle

At these places, I could get some unforgettable memories. One of those memories is that my friend's phone was stolen in front of the Eiffel tower even though she always took care of her phone except for only that moment. Fortunately, she could get USIM card and another phone from a classmate in Leeds university and everything worked out well. For now, we can mention that memory comfortable. But It was a horrible memory at that time.

After I left Paris, I went to Leeds in England to take a General English program. When I arrived at Leeds, I and my roommates found a place to stay for 3 weeks. That apartment was very comfortable and cozy place. And we could make every dinners because it has a big kitchen.

Our english program started right next week. This class focused on authentic english which can be used for real situation and daily life. So, I could learn about the real communication skills. It was more useful and valuable than what I had expected. In class, teacher tried to induce our conversations naturally. So we could conversate each other during most of class time. All of english what I learned in class were applied to every activity like survey and presentation. And, as I learned about the natural english depending on situations like formal, semi-formal, and unformal, I could get the way the different english is used in different situation.

Through some progress tasks like film review and vlog , I could improve not only writing skills but also speaking skills. In particular, when I recorded a vlog about my interesting films, it was very interesting to speak English without any script. Usually, I write my script when I speak some words like presentation or meeting. But it was my first time to speak and think together at the same time while I use English. Thanks to this activity, I could realize that speaking english without any scripts or preparations also can looks natural and understandable. Moreover, I had a personal tutor, Jess. She always tried to think together about my weakness for my speaking. And she advised me to take a risk in conversation. So, I could learn how I don't hesitate to speak in english. What she advised me is not only for speaking skills but also writing skills.

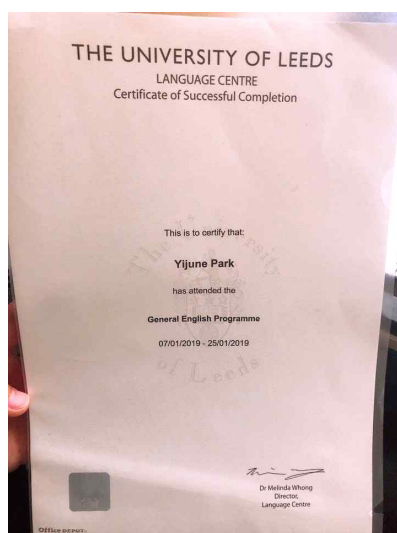

Moreover, all of foods and dailylife are more than what I expected.

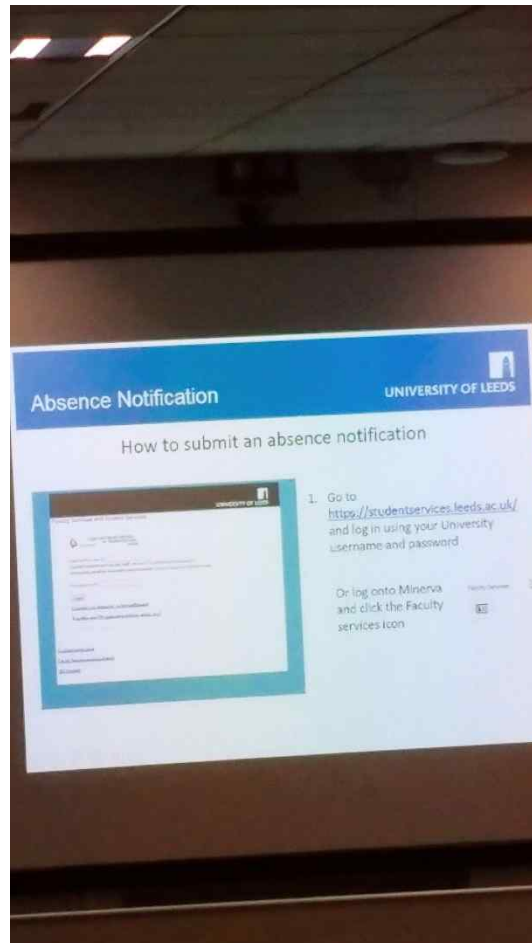

Eventhough some meals are little bit salty, most things did well goes with me. Now, I think it seemed great because there are great people with me. In Leeds, I could get not only English skills but also valuable people. All of people are loveable and so kind. Teachers and classmates are considerate and always respect each other. These people are unforgettable for me. Espeically, it was so impressed when I received the letter from one of my classmates. If I meet these guys again, I really want to say thank you.

I had had a valuable experiences with so many precious people for three weeks. I felt It was a very short time period for deeper relationships with these cool peoples. It was so sad but I promised to meet them again and I finished this general english program well.

This photo is about absence but my Leeds life was already short so I could not use it.

I've been abroad for 50days and stayed the University of Leeds for about three weeks. Before I was in Leeds, 3weeks had sounded like too long and it would be boring time. However, I felt sad because 3 weeks is not enough to study and it is too short to get close to my foreign friends. Let me introduce my 3weeks Leeds' life detailed.

At first, Leeds' program and teacher was brilliant. In case of program, the only problem is the period and cultural diversity. In my class, there are more Asian than Western people. 3 weeks were too short to study whatever it is. Although, the program is well designed to communicate with friends. At evening, we talked about determined topic (film&TV programme) and did variety of activities like reviewing the film, interviewing and making vlog etc. I was shy boy when I used English but it makes me confident. At afternoon, we was talking about choosing topic. I chose the topic of sports. Because I had already interested in sports, everything in the class is easier than evening class. Taking itself is exciting. The program seemed to have been agonizing over how it might help everyone.

Second, all people I met are awesome. They were all kind, so they could be friends at once. Until now, foreign friends have been strangers to me. However, I had more time with foreign friend than Korea friends. For example, having a meal, shopping, traveling and so on. It was short but precious memory in my travel. Until now I want to encounter them again. Since I said that I will introduce them to Korea when they come to Korea, I should look forward to seeing you again when they visit Korea.

Lastly, there are a little change for my English. Before it, there is a hesitation for my English. But it's better now. Also, I can communicate in informal situation because I would be obtained many daily expression. The most impressive is "there you go"

The time when I spend this vacation is meaningful for me. I would recommended everyone to go abroad and make friends if you have a opportunity.

I hung out with my Japanese friends, Masami and Rina.

We ate some hamburgers and drank couples of beer.

We are the best friends in Leeds.

Also, we went to Manchester.

Masami didn't like to go to the football stadium, so Rina and Korean student Yijune went together. We can feel the mood of the Manchester united. However, we didn't have any tickets.

I wanted to see a movie in the foreign countries, so I decided to go to the theater with my Japanese friend, Masami. She has already seen the movie, "Bohemian Rhapsody" fourth times, but she accepted to go to the theater together. I could not understand the plot perfectly, but it was really nice.

This is my Kuwaiti friend Aisha, she is only 18 years old, but we are friends. We had to make a video for homework, so we took a photo together not to forget each other.

She told me that after taking the ILETS course in University of Leeds, then she will go to the University of Bradford. I was impressed by her, because, she told me “sometime, whatever there are some unfair things, do not give up.” She is only 18 years old...

This is my last class in Leeds. Fuka is the person that I met in the first class.

We took a photo and she sent me it by using Instagram. We are Instagram friends.

After finishing the last class, we went to the GINO which is the Italian restaurant to eat lunch together. Surprisingly, Masami gave me a letter and chocolate box for goodbye gift.

Thank you Masami!!

I've been to University of Leeds for 3 weeks, from January seventh to twenty fifth. I also visited several cities in Europe, before and after the class. I visited 13 cities in seven cities; London, Leeds, Brighton, Barcelona, Paris, Interlaken, Lucerne, Zermatt, Munich, Prague, Venice, Florence, and Rome. Thanks to UNIST program, I could be supported half of the total prices used to travel Europe.

I knew this culture exchange program through the senior in orchestra club. He visited university in London 1 year ago, and recommend the culture exchange program. I was planning attending military services, so it was less burdened to prepare the details of study/travel plan. However, the time I decide to participate in culture exchange program was in the middle of the final exam, so, I should concentrate on the exam, so the planning was delayed. I and my friend buy the airplane tickets only 1 month before departed to London, we bought tickets more expensive than the others. We just booked the rooms, and the transportation to move.

The class schedule for General English in University of Leeds started at January 7th. However, the departure towards London was in January 1st. I planned to visit London for 6 days, and move to Leeds before the class starts. Then, I participate into the class for 3 weeks. Instead of returning to Seoul, I visited various cities in Europe. I stayed 3 weeks more in Europe for the purpose of traveling, and returned to Korea in February 20th.

There was so many differences between UK and Korea. Even the smallest habits were different. When I arrived in London first, it was so confusing. For example, calling the waiter was completely different. In Korea, we ordinary say a word or raise our hands to call the waiter. However in UK, they said it is a rude behavior. Instead, they meet their eyes with the waiter so they can notice their signal. How to pay was also different. It was the most confused part, because there is no organized rules. In some restaurant, we should go to a counter to pay for, but in some restaurant the clerk came with the credit card machine. I asked it to teacher, but she said even for her it is so confusing.

Some etiquette looks so tight, but in some case it was so loose. They were too generous in smoking etiquettes and an unauthorized crossing. Not only for UK, but also in all Europe countries, there was no roads free from smoke. I am nonsmoker, so it was so uncomfortable. Social toleration was so different compared to Korea.

Linguistically the English in UK, and the American English generally learned in Korea was different much surprisingly. Many spellings in word was different (colour, programme, theatre...). The pronunciation was harder, and the idioms they usually use was different, too. I felt that the pronunciation for UK English would be more suitable for Korean, because the “r” sound was much more disappear in UK. Despite of these so many differences, it was so easy to communicate with friends, teachers, and the native speakers compare to other countries using various languages like Spain, Germany, Italy. I could feel the gratitude of knowing English.

What I got shocked in traveling in UK was, the murderous prices. Every food in restaurant was over 10000 won, and the prices of public transportation was so expensive. Fortunately, because of the Brexit, the value of the pound has plummeted, so I could save much money compared to other tourists visited UK before Brexit. Nevertheless it was so burdened. The only option I could choose was to cook myself to save labor costs. (Grocery prices in the UK were similar to those in Korea.)

In class, I meet many other students came from non-English culture like Japan, China, Saudi Arabia, and communicate with them. It was so precious experiences. Plus, I could travel to Europe. Without this program, there would still be a vague dignity for Europe. I am grateful to UNIST for creating such a great opportunity.

I visit the leeds university at January seven to doing culture exchange program for three weeks. In three weeks we do the general English course. The subtopic is films. In class I learn useful vocabulary and expression about films. Also it is a good time for me to improve my speech. At first my voice is too small but last day my voice is loud and easy to understand. There were two big tasks. The first was to produce a vlog and the second was to write about movie review. In carrying out these tasks, it was possible for me to improve my English skills and correct what was lacking with feedback. The three-week exchange program was an experience that told me what it was like to live in a foreign country. I have the confidence to go abroad in the future with this experience.

After three weeks of exchange student program, I went on a trip to Europe. The United Kingdom, Spain, France, Austria, Germany, the Czech Republic and Italy. I traveled almost ten cities. Traveling in various countries and cities in Europe, I felt things. Also, if you can speak any English, travel is very convenient. I spent a dreamlike time looking at art and sculpture that I had only seen in books with real eyes and walking around the place where I had appeared. If you ever ask me to go on a trip again, my answer is yes.

This report is about the program called General English which Leeds University provides, and life in Leeds. For the first, let me introduce about on the way from Incheon to Leeds. We used the flight of the China Southern Airlines, which is cheapest. Airplane or service of this company is quite good , but there was two transfer, which is quite big problem, 50 hours consuming. And there were twist and turns king's cross station. First one is about missing e-tickets. At London, My e-tickets application didn't work suddenly. So I tried to fix it spending around 6 hours. And My arrival time to London was 10:00 pm and departure was at 6:00 am in next day. So I have to wait at King's cross station. And Misfortune came on the top of misfortune. Some guys who looks bad came to us and tried to force us to buy weeds, which is illegal. Especially they tried to sell it to my companion bothering him a hour. Anyway, everything became fine. And we arrived at Leeds. After 50 hours waked, we took a class unfortunately, which make us quite tired more. And after that we arrived home. The home we had stayed is comfortable, and big. I loved it. And the most important part which is the class is wonderful. They provided many activities which make us fun. Class is usually composed of one-third lecture and the other part is fun activities. For example, they devise phone-game. The purpose of this game is guessing a phone number each number corresponding to words which has similar pronunciation. For example, pan and fan each correspond to number 1 and number 2. We can improve our listening skill and have fun.

And another part I want to remark is that classmate is wonderful. All the classmates are friendly, kind, and funny. Especially, I become intimate with Chinese older brother, whose name is Luke Leung ,also called as Yongping Leung in his Chinese name. At the point that after a week we know each other, we go the pub whose name is Brewdog. We tried a few kind of ale and larger. And one more thing I can remark is about new version of oath of peach garden, which is the oath that Liu Bei, Guan Yu, and Zhang Fei promise that even though we are born at different date, we will die at same date and we become a sworn brother. We promise that too even if we are born at different countries.

I attach the photo of that. and next thing I want to remark is that He teach me some Chinese words and sentences whose pronunciation sounds cool. And Thanks to him, I utilized that in Guangzhou airport when I order meal in a restaurant. We also talked about Romance of the three kingdoms, a part of Chinese history which I love it. Even though he is more interested about Journey to the west about which I don't know much we can talk about a former one since he accepts that kind of things well. We keep in touch after I left Leeds and I'm planning to go to Beijing after spring semester of 2019 ends to see him. Of course, there are many wonderful classmates including him. I become close to Marco Catalano from Italy, and Muhammad from Saudi Arabia. Maybe that's because I'm interested in Italian food and Muhammad is a real man of men which is fascinating factor. They are all fun, wonderful, kind, and friendly. I miss all of them.

We have two classes, General English Program and Linc, abbreviation of Language in communication. Even if there are only 4 times Linc Class in 3 weeks, I met some cute Japanese girl whose name is Haruka Kuroki. I can show you a picture.

We played two times. For the first time, we go to a restaurant in Trinity Leeds which is shopping district. We ate some Thai food, more specifically saying fried noodles. After lunch, we went to the pub whose name is Brewdog again. We tried some beer and went to ride water taxi which is free. The picture is taken at the boat. It is quite good experience because I hadn't experienced water taxi before. She said that at London you can ride water taxi which is quite big compared to the taxi that we ride together. After water taxi, she went to her accommodation which is near the university. Since I stay at host family, we say goodbye at that time. From her saying and the observing that I made, Japan is well developed countries in the Asia. That's because Japanese accounts for more than one third and up to half of the total number. And I'm amazed at the fact that she received scholarship for going abroad even if she goes to private school. For the second time, we went to a cinema to watch a comedy movie. And after that we ate dinner with small amount of alcohol. I had a good time with her.

Next, The host family is really kind, amazing, and wonderful. First, they are really kind. Our host is from noble family and he is a typical gentleman of England that we can easily imagine. He took us to watch rugby match. It is really violent to the extent that some people in match got injured. It is quite good experience. I'd never watched that kind of sports before. And He is really good at cooking so that He usually provided us delicious meal for us, which change our mind to the thought that English food is delicious. And His wife is also very kind and took care us. She'd searched bus information for us and provide delicious dinner. Additionally, they let me know about some information about history which I interested in. Especially, Mr. Van Heel give me some historical lessons buying some beer. And the house is very big and comfortable. Amazingly, it has four floors. It was built in Victoria era, which means that the house is around 150 years old. I really miss my host family. They make Life in Leeds of us much more wonderful. They made me think 3 weeks is too short. The last thing that I write is about the trip to York. At that small, beautiful, and historical city, We go to the Clifford tower, York Dungeon, and York minster. Actually, I don't like sightseeing much. But the Majesty of York minster feel me to not to regret to come. And I also bought souvenir which is knit that Harry Potter wear at the movie which cost 70 pounds feeling quite expensive. Actually, all the things in UK is very expensive compared to Korea. In Korea, One-way ticket of bus only costs around 80p. But in UK, One-day tickets of a bus costs 3.75 pounds which is around more than twice as Korea. And all the meals in the usual restaurant is very expensive. Usually It starts from 13 pounds or 15 pounds. And usually it is not that delicious to us. I feel that life in Korea is much better than life in UK. And according to my Chinese brother, one-way bus tickets in china only costs 300 KRW and one-way metro tickets only costs 450KRW which is very cheap. These circumstances make me prefer Life in East Asia. On my way to home, I visited Guangzhou, China. At that city, I ate delicious dinner which is dim-sum and fried noodles with cheap and good price. And get to my comfortable home. That's all. It was wonderful experience.

I will never forget the three weeks in Leeds.

From 07/Jan to 25/Jan this winter vacation, I took 'General English Programme' which served by Leeds university UK Language Centre.

There were 8 nice tutors and 30 global students (Korea, Japan, China, Italy, Saudi Arabia, etc.) include 15 who from UNIST, we were gathered as 3 team, which are called Purple, Green, Blue.

At the first few days, I was very nervous and worried whether I will be able to use English spontaneously.

But as time passing, I am getting better thanks to my new friends.

They have same complex as I have in communication, although have different cultural or informational background as I don't have.

So we became friends easily, furthermore, start to help each other for adaptation on English life.

Thanks to my friends, I was elected as a class representative, so I tried to organizes lecture feedbacks of friends and asks tutor about problems and alternative answers.

After class, me and my friends, we participated in many of local and campus events and met lots of 'native' English speakers in events, who help us to improve communication skills. (we joined such as "Gardening volunteer", "Chocolate Championship", "Global game night", "Global Café talk", "Museum tour", "Self Cooking party", etc.)

Someone can say three weeks are enough long to live in strange environments.

And someone can say three weeks are too short to learn higher language skills.

But I felt there were lots of things that I can challenge in new environments for improving my natural English.

Three weeks, it can be short or it can be long.

But if someone have confidence to challenge new culture, the length of course is no matter.

I learned not only language, but also many lessons from this exchange program.

Thank you for the opportunity, UNIST and Leeds Univ.

– First session of our class.

During 3 weeks, we learned natural English which are associated with Film and TV Programme. We make a written review and vlogs (video logs) about our favorite films.

– Host, Alan Beswick and Helen Beswick

During the course, they shared a room like Homestay.

We ate dinner together and went park near from house with dogs (named Pepa and Deric) on weekends.

– Leeds university gardening community “Rooted”

The campus has two of garden for edible plants, and Rooted designed it. Me and my friends participated on volunteer session about planting and weeding.

–The last day of our Class

There are other sessions continued for global students, but the limited time for UNIST students is ended.

We said goodbye to each other and expect one day when we meet again in other place. It can be UK, it can be China, Japan, Korea, Italy... it doesn't matter to us.

For me, English was studying on the desk and remembering a grammar and some words. English wasn't enough to use in real situation even though I have studied for more than 10 years. Also, I was depressed, because I have changed my course recently. It was very hard and confused to me. In that time, I lost my whole of confidences. I should have done anything to make me energetic. Studying in abroad looks like help me to get out from the depression.

Culture exchange program in University of Leeds was so nice and made me better person. I took General English course. Unlike an English class in Korea, focusing on grammar and reading, the class in University in Leeds focused on real conversation. Of course, there were grammar class and reading class. The teachers in that course said Knowing English, Choosing English, and Taking a risk are the most important things in learning English.

I took 3 weeks class, and studied about one topic, film. We did many types of activities about the film, for example, conversation about the favorite films, making a film, and reading a film review, etc. I was surprised that studying one topic through 3 weeks. I studied many parts of English. The most impressing class was a questionnaire activity. In 2nd week, we made a questionnaire, and interviewed people who study or work in University of Leeds. I am not active person, so I felt uncomfortable with it. I was so worried that people won't answer to my questionnaire. But, there were some expectation that can talk with British people in the innermost recesses of the heart. Doing the questionnaire was not easy. Even though I listened the British tone for 2 weeks, British tone was a little bit different for me. But, it was such a nice experience to talk with British people. They were kind and polite. Beginning was so hard, but after beginning, I felt easy than before.

In morning class, I studied General English. In afternoon class, I studied LinC class. There are so variable classes, for example, film, sport, creative writing, music, and history of English. I took globalisation class in that time. Globalisation class is learning about the environmental issue, economy, and understanding the different culture. Class was very interesting. I shared many thinkings with friends who are from different culture. Like the class name, I met many friends in that class. Espacilly, I met many Arabic friends in globalisation class, so talking with them is very interesting. In last class, we talked about the 3R, Reduce, Reuse, and Recycling. Teacher gave us the time to share our opinions. The teacher said which one is most efficient way to save our envioronment. So, I answered to her with adding some knowledge that I have learned from major class. Teacher was surprised at my answer, and prasied my answer. I was so happy, because it was my first compliment in the program. Sadly, I only took 4 times of globalisation class due to short-term class student. However, it was very meaningful time to me, and I met many kind of friends in that class, also could share the many thoughts.

I borrowed a apartment with my friends who are in same major in UNIST. We ate a toast for breakfast, and brought a sandwich for lunch. We usually made dinner for oursleves. Making dinner was not easy and not also cooking but also shopping, preparing, and cleaning, there were a lot of things to do. Shopping for dinner was very rough. Comparing variable productions and thinking the nutriments written in English were quite different. Also, pay process threw us into confusion. Using an unmanned chectout counter was complicated, but we got some help from a staff. I was surprised, because in UK, when I used a credit card, I should be checked by a staff. Even though very small price checking was necessary. Moreover, unlike Korean cash, British cash, especially coin has more bigger value than Korean coin. So, at first week, I didn't realize that I spend a tidy money. However, the coin is not same as Korean coin.

During week, I spend the time in class. In weekend, I planed the day-trip to other city near Leeds. There was 2 weekends during the program, so we went to York in 1st weekend, and Manchester in 2nd weekend. York was the city that I want to go, because there are a lot of the ancient times buildings. The main reason that I want to visit to York is the afternoon tea set. UK is famous for tea culture. They eat some dessert with a tea. We visited the Betty's tea room that is famous for afternoon tea set, has a long history. The afternoon tea set that we ordered was very nice, delicious. I saw many different range of the age people. From the children to the elders. They were enjoying their free time that is hard to see in Korea, very busy and competitive society. I felt both of envy and bitterness.

In next weekend, we visited Manchester which is very popular to soccer fans. However, I am not interested in soccer, so I visited John Rylands Library and Manchester Art Gallery. I was so impressed by John Rylands Library, because it was very huge and magnificent. I didn't think it is a library, but it looked like a museum for me. This is a personal library and amount of books were very surprised. I saw some paper and books written in long time ago. It could image the library that many people used in long time ago. As I watched a book in here, someone had watched this book. This thinking made me weird and fascinated. It was very meaningful time to me. Also, I visited to Manchester Art Gallery. Most of the gallery or museum in UK doesn't take an entrance fee, so everyone can enjoy it easily. When I visited to Manchester Art Gallery, I saw a father and a son. The father was telling a Greek mythology to his son in front of the paint that is drawn with Greek gods. Going to the museum or gallery is easy and normal things to them. I wished that Korea society would become like this as soon as possible.

The time stole by like an arrow. The last day of class has come. At first class, I thought 'Can I do this?' honestly. But it was awesome and fantastic. We had a great time with different country friends. We ate the lunch together and gone out together.

We were so sad that we can't see for quite a time. However, we promised that meet again in someday. I have been changed. There is no person who can't ask a question anymore, because of shyness. It is not finding a way to build my future, but I have taken bravery. So I thought it was very precious for me. I want to say thank you to many people that helped me to take the chances.

I and my friends went to the United Kingdom to study. Our journey of going to UK was very hard journey. This journey was our first time of going abroad, so we have no idea about long time airplane. So we booked a cheaper tickets which have longer waiting time and 2 transfer lines. we need to wait for 17 hours in Pudong airport in china. What is worse we couldn't sleep fear of stolen our baggage. After long waiting, we have a 12hours flight to Amsterdam. I think we sleep 10hours in 12hours so that flight was not long. At Amsterdam we can feel we arrived at Europe! Amsterdam airport was very different from Asia airport and has unique style. Asia airport has dense stores for selling, but Amsterdam has more shelter. Finally, we arrived at the London Heathrow airport, our hard journey was not stop there. Our destination was Leeds where is far from London for 2.5 hours by train. We arrived at London at 10pm and train time for Leeds was 6am so we need to wait for 8 hours in king cross station. We used subway to go to king cross station from London Heathrow because UK has long history of subway, facility of subway was very bad and expensive compare to Korea, so I was very disappointed. At king cross station, we ate hamburger in five guys, the price of hamburger was 8.95found, very expensive! we were very surprised and concerned about our money. Because we couldn't wash our face and hair for 2 days, we really want to wash. At that time we found some fee toilet and without any hesitate, washed our face and hair in there. It was special experience and I never forget the refreshment after wash. And in waiting time for train we met some bad people who are sell some drugs and prostitute, I had similar experience so I was not haunted but my friend was first time so he was very haunted. That was funny to see my friends face. After crisis, we arrived at Leeds university really finally!

We met our homestay host Chris and Kates. First impression of our host was very kind and friendly. And we went to host home. That place was very big (3floors and down stair) and nice interior. Everything was perfect except temperature of room. The heating system is not developed compared to our country heating system. So room temperature was very low it was hard to adopt. And worse thing was my room existed in edge where is most cold place! my host's first name was van heel which is Holland novel family name. so my host's dinner menu follows novel style. In Monday we eat fish, in Tuesday we eat sausage... in Saturday and Sunday we eat UK style breakfast at 11am. So I could experience UK traditional novel style food directly. Before going to UK I heard that UK foods are most terrible food in the world, so i worried about that. But when leaving the UK I got 2kg!! that was just rumor.

My class was general English part2. In general English part2, half of students was Japanese and other half was Korean and some other country student (china, Italy, Taiwan, Saudi Arabia). Actually I disliked the japan before class because of our country pain history by japan, but after met Japanese friends, I realized that my emotion was just about nation of japan not Japanese person. I expected more various race, so sorry about the fact that many student was almost Japanese and Korean. But by communicating with person only in English, I could develop my communication skill. in class we learned about film, we need to make VLOG with friends about film. I was nervous about to make VLOG. However, through making process I felt I become more confident about my English. It really helps to develop my English skill.

At weekdays, we went to school and at weekend we visited York city, watched Rugby play, went shopping, went pubs and played with Japanese and Taiwan girlfriends. York city was very beautiful play, in York, I can feel alive history of UK. Rugby play was rough and I didn't know the rule of game, so that was not good for me but my host really like that because he was Rugby player at young age. And I played with other country girls, they really like K-pop, Hangeul and K-drama. They were very cute when they used Korean language. It was very fun to play with them, so we miss each other when time comes to go back my country.

Experience in UK was amazing and funny than I expected. So I miss UK. It was good chance to improve my English skill and global thinking.

Thank you for my school unit for pay bill. And thank you for everybody in UK with me!!

This experience was very useful for me. Before starting the culture exchange program, I went to Paris in France. One of the good points of this program is that we can travel other countries before or after program period. In university of Leeds, we could make many friends of various countries: Japan, China, Italia and so on. Even if there aren't British friends, teachers are British. So, I could learn British English. It is interesting because it is different with American English. The lectures are "General English Program" therefore, in my thought, it is a little bit easy. In this class, I can learn the useful expressions which can use in real case, not academic situation. I could do various active classes such as discussion, making a short video and playing the game. Through this program, I spent much time with foreign students, so it was very useful for me to improve my English level. Also, I studied the history of English. Each student can choose the subject which you want to study. There are various subjects and I chose the history. It is very funny class because I can learn the British culture like royal family or origin of United Kingdom. In fact, this program is 3 months course. But I could study only 3 weeks. So, I focused on this class.

In UK, the pub is famous. There is expensive, so I used the market named "Morison". It has cheap price and there are many kinds of goods. I loved the steak because it is cheap. And I enjoyed the travelling to near town. It is very good experience. Leeds is in northside but there are warm rather than Seoul. If you have a plan to go Leeds in winter, you don't need to bring too much thick clothes.

In this Culture Exchange Program., I experienced fantastic view, different culture and good friends. If you want to apply this program, it will be best choice in your university life.
